FIRST SHOT IN RUBELLA CAMPAIGN

William Byrne, 12, of San Rafael, receives a shot of rubella vaccine administered by Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer. The doctor was sharpening her aim yesterday in preparation for a five-week campaign starting Monday, against rubella, which afflicts unborn children. County health teams hope to vaccinate about 80 per cent of the county's school children. The jet injector shots will be painless, Dr. Albrecht said, so anxious youngsters may relax.

Cyclone Hits Pakistan; 25,000 Reported Dead

Tidal Waves Follow; Million Are Homeless

DACCA, East Pakistan (UPI) — A cyclone and 30-foot tidal waves that devastated the coastal islands and southern shores of East Pakistan with heavy loss of life yesterday is the greatest disaster in the nation's history, the government said today.

Initial casualty reports said 25,000 had died. Dispatches and visitors arriving from the scene said another 100,000 persons were missing, many of them feared dead.

Entire islands vanished in the storm, some reports said.

MILLION HOMELESS

A pilot who flew over the scene estimated as many as a million persons in a 10,000 square mile area may have been left homeless. He said there were no signs of life in some areas.

Newspapers said heavily-populated Hatiya island remained under 20 feet of water until yesterday afternoon. The Daily Purbodesh and Daily News said officials feared half of the island's 162,701 population may have perished. The newspaper reports were not confirmed.

2,000 ISLANDS

Many of the 2,000 offshore islands in the Bay of Bengal southeast of Calcutta were struck by cyclone winds up to 150 miles an hour and 30-foot tidal waves which raged Thursday night and early yesterday. Most remained cut off from communications, including Dubla Island where 13,000 Hindu pilgrims had gathered for religious rites under a

'Devil Winds' Whip Blazes In Timberland

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — Seven fires, three of them still out of control, burned more than 51,000 acres of brush and timberland in three Southern California counties early today.

The largest, the bear fire, charred more than 35,000 acres in the San Bernardino National Forest and destroyed one home. At one point that blaze was reported spreading at the rate of 1,000 acres an hour as Santa Ana "devil winds" of 60 to 70 miles per hour whipped through the San Bernardino mountains.

The fire, burning in the Running Springs area bout 15 miles from Big Bear Lake, a popular resort area, apparently was set by an arsonist. Authorities said the flames were threatening several small communities in the Smiley Park and Igos areas, which were ordered evacuated.

Another blaze in the San Bernardino National Forest, the Cucamonga fire, is burning out of control in an area so rugged that firemen had to use horses and mules to pack in equipment.

That blaze, rekindled from smouldering roots left over from the 40,000 acre Lytle Creek blaze which broke out Sept. 28 and burned for nearly a week, was whipped over more than 1,000 acres by the wind and spread into the Angeles National Forest.

More than 1,000 men were on the lines in the Bear fire and 65 in the Cucamonga fire with another 150 en route to that blaze. There have been no reports of injuries.

Three other fires charred about 5,600 acres in nearby Riverside County, but all were contained by 6 p.m. (PST) yesterday. All were blamed on arsonists.

The largest, called the Jordan Fire after the Reche Vista and Loma Linda blazes combined, charred more than 4,100 acres and destroyed three homes, one of which was unfinished, and a $20,000 California Division of Forestry fire truck. There were no injuries.

Fourth Juror Selected For Calley Trial

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—A former platoon leader who took his men on sweeps through six Vietnamese villages was selected today as the fourth member of the court-martial that will try Lt .William L. Calley Jr. on charges of murdering 102 Vietnamese civilians during a similar operation in 1968.

The new juror, Capt. Ronald J. Salem, 34, of Soux Falls, S. D., was the only court member selected during the Saturday session. At least five jurors are needed to complete the jury.

Failure to achieve the minimum necessary postponed the scheduled start of trial testimony Monday. Col. Reid W. Kennedy, the military judge, ordered the prosecution to have seven prospective jurors ready to be questioned Monday morning.

He adjourned the session at 10:40 a.m. after the prosecution had excused Maj. Nelson O. Newcombe of Auburn, Maine, and the defense had thrown out Lt. Col. Richard W. McKee, Tampa, Fla.

The prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel, requested that the court remove Salem because

UAW Members Begin Voting On G.M. Pact

DETROIT (UPI)—The 375,000 United Auto Workers who have been on strike against General Motors for 61 days began voting yesterday on a new contract which would put them on the same pay scale as junior executives.

Voting began at scattered locals around the country. The UAW said it expected to have the results by Friday, and would present them to G.M. the next day.

The workers in at least one plant — local 544 in the Pittsburgh suburb of West Mifflin — voted Saturday to accept both the national and local contracts, said John McCarrel, president of the local.

Both the production workers and skilled tradesmen must vote to accept the pact for it to be ratified.

Meanwhile, the UAW has scheduled resumption of contract talks with Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. for Nov. 23 — the day when the G.M. contract would go into effect if it is ratified. Although the union set a strike deadline of Dec. 7 against Ford if no agreement is reached by that time, no such deadline was set for Chrysler.

Henry Ford II, board chairman of Ford, said he expected his company would go along with the G.M. settlement almost completely. Chrysler's chief negotiator, John D. Leary, said the company would have to study the tentative G.M.-UAW act to determine how that would affect Chrysler's position at the bargaining table.

The UAW already has said that Chrysler's financial troubles and its position as the smallest of the Big Three automakers would not affect its demands for the same terms G.M. agreed to.

Earl Bramblett, G.M.'s chief bargainer, said yesterday the tentative pact would cost G.M. $2.4 billion in wages alone over its three-year life. He said G.M.'s UAW workers, who now make around $10,000 per year, would be making between $12,000 and $13,000 by the end of the contract's final year.

Sausalito Hopeful Ferry Sessions Will Solve Traffic Headache

By PAT ANGLE

Next week the City of Sausalito and the Golden Gate Bridge district will begin negotiating on the location of a permanent ferry terminal along the city's waterfront.

And some city officials are hoping the bargaining will result in an agreement which would make it possible to eliminate all non-resident parking in Sausalito's downtown area.

Yesterday, for reasons of economics and efficiency, bridge district directors approved a single Sausalito terminal, between Locust and Litho streets. The board acted even though the conditional use permit which allows the ferry service to operate in the city specifically calls for a terminal in the Marinship area and a downtown whistle stop for residents.

And the city council, which — with considerable reservation — approved the permit in July, has indicated clearly it wants two stops, including a northern terminal.

Because of the disagreement, city Mgr. Albert St. Cyr yesterday revealed city staff has been giving serious thought to try to effect a trade with the district.

His plan is that Sausalito might allow the one central terminal if the bridge district would agree to assist the city in establishing a northern parking lot large enough to accomodate the thousands of visitors who pour into the community each year.

In addition, the city would ask the bridge directors to agree to work with Sausalito on a shuttle bus service which would bring visitors from the northern lot to the central commercial area.

Although St. Cyr admitted many problems must be worked out before any agreement is reached, he said the plan the city envisions could be the key to curbing the downtown traffic crush — if the district will agree to help, financially and otherwise.

St. Cyr said ample parking in the north and easy bus access into town could make it possible for the city to remove its four parking lots and all meters in the central business area, leaving only enough spaces for residents who would park by permit only.

Marin Will Seek Federal Security Aid

Marin County will seek federal funds to help pay increased security costs at the Civic Center since the Aug. 7 shoot-out and Oct. 8 courtroom explosion.

County Administrator Alan Bruce said yesterday, however, that the prospect of getting outside aid does not appear promising.

But Bruce said he will recommend to the board of supervisors that the county apply for funds through the federal Omnibus Crime and Safe Streets Act anyway.

Bruce said he has already written to the California Council on Criminal Justice, which makes recommendations for fund appropriations under the act, and pointed out that 24 additional deputies, added equipment for metal detection and communications and other building security measures will cost the county $380,000 a year.

But Paul R. Falzone, criminal justice specialist with the council, told Bruce that mutual aid from San Quentin and Marin cities should be sought instead of hiring permanent deputies.

The executive committee of the Association of Bay Area Governments also recommend-

Bonn, Warsaw Sign Historic Treaty

WARSAW (UPI)—West Germany and Communist Poland reached agreement after a marathon negotiating session today on an historic goodwill treaty designed to end 25 years of animosity.

The pact, like the nonaggression treaty signed by West Germany and the Soviet Union last August, would include West Germany's acceptance of Poland's western border at the Oder and Neisse Rivers.

Scott Urges GOP To Uphold Broadcast Veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott urged his Republican colleagues today to uphold President Nixon's veto — bitterly protested by Democrats—of legislation restricting candidate spending on campaign broadcasts.

"I believe campaign spending should be limited," Scott said in a letter to GOP senators. "I do not believe, however, that it should be limited only to one form of advertising as this bill does."

Democrats dismissed Nixon's argument that the legislation was not broad enough, charging that he merely wanted to protect Republican candidates backed by the much greater financial resources of his party. Even if signed, the bill would have had virtually no effect on broadcast spending in the recent election.

The bill Nixon vetoed Oct. 12 would have limited spending on radio and television in general elections to 7 cents for each vote cast in the last general election for the same office, or $20,000, whichever is higher. In primary elections, the candidates would be limited to half that amount.

The curb would cover presidential and vice presidential candidates in the general election, and candidates for Senate, House, Governor, and Lieutenant governor in primaries and general elections.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield has indicated he would call a vote on whether to override the veto soon after Congress begins its post-election session Monday. The outcome is considered close.

The Senate originally approved the spending limitation 58 to 27 and later approved the

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Strike Is Over

Government and labor spokesmen disagreed about the effectiveness of the strike, the third called by the 2.5 million member general confederation of a labor (CGT) in a little over a month to protest the government's economic policies.

The CGT issued a statement late Friday claiming worker absenteeism throughout the nation "had been higher than in two previous strikes, on Oct. 9 and 22."

Mamie's Birthday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower celebrated her 74th birthday a day early Friday as guest of honor at a League of Republican Women tea in Washington. She said she has a secret for staying young.

"I just don't look at the calendar," she said.

The widow of President Eisenhower said she lives "from day to day" and finds it all exciting. She planned to have another birthday celebration today with some of her old friends in Washington.

Parcel Post Hike

Post Office Department spokesmen said the increases vary according to the weight of packages and the distances they are being sent.

TV Floor Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A sharply divided panel of Democrats has voted to recommend that all television coverage be banned from the floor of the 1972 Democratic National Convention. The group charged unfair coverage of the 1968 Chicago convention.

The recommendation, if approved by the party's regular convention rules committee, would affect mainly small portable TV cameras that allow on-the-spot coverage of floor events.

The recommendation, approved 7 to 6 by the newly formed rules commission, would allow a large platform on the convention floor for TV cameras and would allow cameras on balconies above the floor.

U.S., MEXICO

Relationship Is Better Than Ever

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Mexican president-elect Luis Echeverria agree relations between the neighbor nations are the best in history.

Nixon and Echeverria, who will take office Dec. 1, met for nearly three hours Friday at the White House. Spokesmen for the White House described the session as a successful attempt to "get acquainted and build a personal relationship."

Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, said the two leaders agreed relations between Mexico and the United States are "the best they have been in the history of the two countries." He said they also agreed their efforts would be directed toward "enhancing and maintaining this relationship."

Nixon reviewed U.S. foreign policy for Echeverria, Ziegler said. The spokesman said they discussed "current hemisphere matters" but he declined to say whether Chile's diplomatic recognition of Cuba was brought up.

The leaders also agreed to implement recent agreements between the two countries, including one establishing the middle of the Rio Grande river as the border between Mexico and the United States, Ziegler said, He said they would exchange official visits later but set no dates.

Echeverria was accompanied to Washington by his wife and daughter. They lunched with the President and Mrs. Nixon and Nixon and Echeverria then met for an hour and 20 minutes.

Echeverria, at a news conference before he returned to Mexico, said he told Nixon that "the best defense against Communism in the Americas is the strengthening of Democratic institutions in those countries where democracy is still alive." He said he had found in Nixon a "good friend of Mexico and a good personal friend."

Angela Queen Despite Poll Results

A poll of the student body Friday showed 1,200 students opposed and 495 supported the Student Senate's naming of Miss Davis as the honorary queen. There are 7,800 daytime students at SCC.

Miss Davis, in custody in New York City, was indicted this week by the Marin County grand jury on charges that she was involved in the plot which led to the Aug. 7 Hall of Justice shoot-out in Marin County in which four persons including a judge were killed.

The senate Monday night voted 12-3 to designate Miss Davis honorary queen. But the senate decided 14-9 Thursday to conduct the student poll.

State Concludes Tate Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The state of California has finally wound up its case in the Tate murder trial after 83 witnesses, 17,659 pages of testimony and 297 pieces of evidence over a period of five months.

Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi was expected to pronounce formally the words, "the state rests," on Monday after arguments over introduction of photographs, documents, knives, rope, a gun, clothing and other exhibits for examination by the jury.

Bugliosi announced late Friday that the prosecution had no more witnesses to call against Charles Manson and his three female codefendants, Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten.

The defense was expected to begin its case by introducing motions for a directed verdict of acquittal. If that is denied, defense lawyers will start calling an estimated 20 witnesses, expected to include Manson himself but not the young women.

Bugliosi noted the tremendous length of the trial and estimated it would go beyond Christmas.

The district attorney said the blame for such an extended trial rested mainly on the defense. He noted that chief state witness Linda Kasabian had testified for three and one-half days on direct examination but had spent 15 and one-half days undergoing cross examination.

Another key state witness, Dianne Lake, spent 11 minutes on direct examination, he said, but the defense used two weeks of court time in cross examination.

The final prosecution witnesses were two psychiatrists who testified that the 17-year-old Miss Lake was mentally competent to appear for the state although at one time she was suffering from an LSD-induced psychosis.

Her testimony about the August, 1969, slayings had been among the most damaging against Manson and the three women.

At the end of Friday's court session, Judge Charles H. Older ordered Patricia Krenwinkel to produce printed samples of her handwriting to compare with words daubed in blood on a refrigerator and the walls of the Leno LaBianca home.

Older warned her that if she refused, the fact of refusal could be used as circumstantial evidence with regard to her guilt or innocence.

Syrian Military In Bloodless Take-Over

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Syrian military officers favoring a more flexible Middle East policy seized control of the government in Damascus in an apparently bloodless coup Friday and arrested many top civilian officials.

A spokesman for the Baathist party, ousted in the coup, said in Beirut that the rebels led by Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Hafez Assad occupied key public buildings in the Syrian capital.

President Noureddin Atassi, leader of the Baathist Party, was placed under house arrest and former Premier Yussef Zayyen also was detained.

The coup was made after Baathist leaders threatened to fire Assad and his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Mustafa Tlas, from their posts for offering "surrender solutions" in speeches at an emergency party congress, the spokesman said.

Arab diplomats said the military officers had been unhappy over Syria's intervention in the Jordanian civil war in September.

Rubin, Friends Agree To Leave; Papers Are Happy

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) —"Chicago Seven" defendant Jerry Rubin agreed to leave for the United States today rather than be deported by the British government. British newspapers bade him farewell with such headlines as "Out!" and "Good Riddance."

Rubin, 31, leader of the Youth International Party (Yippies), and fellow-Yippie Stewart Albert were arrested Friday and held overnight pending their departure. They had come to Northern Ireland from England after being told by the Home Office their seven-day visas to stay in Britain had expired.

When arrested Friday after holding a news conference in a two-story house on the outskirts of Belfast, Rubin shouted at police: "You have no authority to arrest me. This is Ireland, not England."

"The most important part of our trip was to come to Belfast," he said. "This is the important part. This is the battleground.

"Belfast is England's Vietnam," he said.

During the past two years the Northern Irish capital has seen frequent violence between the nation's protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority over civil rights.

Rubin said he and Albert "are being deported because (officials) are afraid of our ideas and our actions."

Home Secretary Reginald Maulding insisted this week they be expelled because their presence in Britain was "not conducive to the public good."

The Yippies are "silly, vulgar, noisy, obscene, insulting and, at their worst, violent," the normally restrained Daily Telegraph commented. It warned that their brand of rebellion by force "finds an ordered society and everywhere seeks to create chaos."

Rubin, Albert and about 15 of their friends disrupted the David Frost televion show in London a week ago with a barrage of flower petals, four-letter obsenities and water-pistol markmanship.

Deputy Admits Using Baton During Rioting

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

FAIRFIELD — A Marin County sheriff's deputy testified under cross-examination yesterday he was forced to strike Alvis Dean Bailey "three or four times" with the butt of his baton when Bailey resisted arrest.

Bailey, 43, of San Francisco, is one of seven persons on trial in Solano County Superior Court on 36 charges stemming from the riotous pro-labor demonstration outside the Independent-Journal on Valentine's Day.

Deputy Douglas J. Barrett, completing his first day on the stand, acknowledged prodding Bailey with his baton in order to get him to move along after his arrest. Barrett testified for the prosecution earlier in the day that Bailey struck two officers with a picket sign handle and resisted arrest violently.

Under questioning from defense attorney Robert Y. Bell, Barrett said Bailey suffered facial cuts when the defendant fell on the ground during his arrest and officers were forced to place their knees on his head in order to handcuff him.

Barrett conceded he told officers who led Bailey away for booking that Bailey should be booked for disturbing the peace and resisting arrest, not assaulting a police officer — a charge now lodged against him as a result of a grand jury indictment.

Bell read from Barrett's report of the Feb. 14 incident, in which he said only one deputy was struck while trying to confiscate Bailey's picket sign handle. Barrett testified he saw Sgt. Robert Gaddini struck on the side of his riot helmet after failing to grab the stick from Bailey and that another officer, whom Barrett was unable to identify, was similarly hit.

Barrett identified pictures of Bailey's arrest, including one showing Barrett's arm around the defendant's neck as he was pulled from a crowd of demonstrators, and was shown another photograph taken before the arrest depicting police officer weilding a baton against Bailey's neck to move him.

Barrett testified he heard the first police order to the crowd to disperse about 20 to 30 minutes after Bailey's arrest. Besides assaulting a police officer, Bailey also is charged with failing to disperse, participating in a riot and in an unlawful assembly, remaining at a place of a riot, delaying and obstructing an officer and with possession of a black jack.

The trial is to resume Monday.

Teacher Responds To Hitch's Blast

BERKELEY (UPI) —The effectiveness of undergraduate instruction at the University of California is on a downward slide and the regents, school administrators and Gov. Ronald Reagan are to blame, says the American Federation of Teachers.

Paul Goodman, campus chairman of the California College and University Council of the AFT, said Friday overcrowded classes and insufficient contact between students and teachers have resulted from inadquate budgetary support from the governor and legislature.

He said the problems can be traced to the governor, U.C. president Charles Hitch and the regents "who want to cover up by blaming the faculty."

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A $2.5 million suit against ABC newscaster Alex Dreier and others over a San Mateo building project has been settled out of court.

Attorney Conrad Donner, representing the plaintiff, Samuel N. Garrotto of San Francisco, said the settlement was "substantial" but would not disclose the amount.

Dreier, who maintains a home in San Rafael and another in Riverside, and his partners O.T. Hogan and Jack R. Hogan of Chicago, originally were sued in U.S. District Court over dealings with Garrotto over his $15 million Mills Square development in San Mateo. Garrotto claimed their action led to his becoming "physically and mentally unstable" and deprived him of his fair share of profits in the venture.

Garrotto was convicted in July 1969 of killing a San Mateo business partner, but later was ruled mentally incompetent at the time of the killing.

That partner was Robert J. Barocchini, 47, brother of Frank A. Barocchini of Kentfield.

The federal civil suit was dismissed in September when the judge ruled it was a matter only for California courts. Rather than refile in California, the parties submitted to arbitration and agreed on a settlement.

Threat To Surgery

BOSTON (UPI)—The fear of malpractice suits against surgeons is threatening the quality of surgical care and increasing the cost to patients, according to the top executive officer of the American College of Surgeons.

Case Transfer Is Ruled Out

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court has ruled that a taxpayers' suit against the Board of Regents of the University of California must be heard in Los Angeles County.

The citizens are seeking as taxpayers to restrain the regents from spending money to carry out the resolutions.

The Los Angeles Court of Appeal had ordered the case transferred to Alameda County as the legal residence of the regents.

Proposal On Agenda

Switchboard Of Marin Quarters Hit By Fire

An early morning fire today destroyed a kitchen and bedroom and caused extensive damage to the headquarters of Switchboard of Marin, a telephone information and referral center at 1017 D Street, San Rafael.

The fire was caused by a reignition of a mattress fire at 1 a.m., which wasn't reported to the fire department, firemen said.

The unidentified occupants had believed they had extinguished the earlier fire, according to firemen.

Damage to the two-story building was estimated at $6,000. The building was among those damaged when a massive fire wiped out a block of downtown businesses in July 1957.

Switchboard of Marin's use permit to operate at the house had expired, but the San Rafael Planning Commission on Aug. 12 gave the organization a 90-day extension to allow time for directors to find a new location.

full moon, an auspicious occasion for Hindus.

Pakistani officials dispatched a motor launch to check on reports all or most of the pilgrim were drowned.

Reports from unofficial sources repeatedly spoke of islands either missing or still inundated 24 hours after the giant storm.

It was the ninth deadly cyclone to strike East Pakistan in 10 years and appeared to have caused damage in an area of 10,000 square miles with a population of 5 million.

Correspondent Kamaluddin Ahmed of the Eastern News Agency visited the coastal zone and said he counted 350 floating bodies. Others were stuck in tree branches or lying in paddy fields. He reported after a partial survey of the damaged coast that scoresk of other person were dying.

Ahmed reported 90 per cent of the houses were destroyed along the 300 mile coastal belt between Noakhali adn Chittagong. He said thousands of cattle perished and there was heavy damage to standing crops. Storm damage also extended inland the Khulna and Barisal districts, 100 miles southwest of Dacca.

A pilot, Abdur Rahman of the East Pakistan Flying Club, said "a big seagoing ship was torn apart northwest of Barissal offshore island and a cargo ship was grounded to the northeast."

same provision in a compromise bill negotiated by Senate-House conferees, 60 to 19.

If the original vote more accurately reflects Senate sentiment, at least two Republicans will have to change positions to deny Democrats the necessary two-thirds majority, to approve the bill again and make it law. Those two will have to come from the 13 GOP senators who voted for the curbs.

On the basis of the later 60 to 19 vote, eight of the 18 Republicans would have to change their votes against.

In his veto message, Nixon said the bill did not limit the overall cost of campaigning but merely the amount spent on broadcasts.

CALLEY

Salem had said under questioning when he first heard of the Calley case, he thought a man would have to be berserk to kill more than 100 persons and that his men would have prevented such an "insane act."

The judge denied Daniels' motion, saying it was evident Salem had presumed the charge was that Calley personally killed 102. The government has said it intends to prove the murders were committed either by Calley or subordinates under his direction.

Burglar's Work Is Non-Partisan

A non-partisan burglar who broke into a San Rafael business today smashed the pictures of three presidents in a collection of photographs of U.S. presidents.

Singled out for destruction at Carson Manufacturing Co., 446 Francisco Boulevard, were the photoes of John Adams, a federalist; Dwight D. Eisenhower, a Republican, and Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson, police said.

The burglar bashed the photographs after attempting to pry a safe full of business papers and rummaging through offices, police said.

MILK PRICE HIKES FOR NORTH BAY

Marin and Sonoma counties are among six Northern California counties in which minimum milk prices will be increased Nov. 22, the state Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Marin consumers will suffer the greatest increase with the retail price of a quart rising one cent to 28 cents. Half gallons will sell for 54 cents, an increase of two pennies, the department said.

Prices in Sonoma, Lake, Napa, and parts of Solano and Mendocino counties will be increased a half-cent on quarts and one cent on half gallons, the department said.

Settlement In Lucky Stores Strike

A strike against Lucky Stores Inc., during which the supermarket chain once gave away $300,000 worth of food to keep it from being wasted, was reported settled today.

Officials of a Lucky Store in Fairfax said settlement was reached with the Office and Professional Workers Local 29 in negotiation Friday and early today.

No details were immediately announced.

Fairfax store manager Alden Hennings said picket lines there were pulled this morning. He said he was relieved the strike was over but that he was "hurried, trying to get back to a full operating schedule."

ed that the county not apply for Safe Streets Act funds.

Egil Krogh Jr., deputy assistant to President Richard M. Nixon for domestic affairs, wrote the supervisors saying the county should first approach the state for help. "You can freely utilize state manpower and funds, and possibly even the National Guard," wrote Krogh.

Marin's appeal for help will go before the Judicial Process Task Force of the California Council on Criminal Justice on Dec. 10 at a 9:30 a.m. meeting at Sacramento Metropolitan Airport.

Sausalito's Plan On Solution To Traffic

told of the city staff's ideas, said the district "is anxious to work with Sausalito to see what may be possible," but indicated he could make absolutely no commitments at this time.

The city manager, too, said his proposal would take long and careful study before the city could even begin to think of acting and many critical questions must be answered. For example, would a northern parking lot operation and bus service bring in enough money to replace the approximately $300,000 the city would lose in parking revenues if downtown lots and meters were eliminated? And, could Sausalito insure that visitors and tourists would not ignore the northern lot and park in residential streets close to the downtown area, thereby crowding out local residents and their guests?

But is downtown parking could be removed and the paved areas turned into parks he feels such a change could benefit all Sausalitans.

"If this could be made to work ,it would be to everyone's advantage," St. Cyr said, adding he believes decentralization of parking — toward which the city council has been moving in recent years — is a necessity.

He admitted downtown merchants may at first be hostile and fearful their businesses will suffer. But he feels strongly if a northern lot and shuttle service provides easy, dependable and convenient access to central Sausalito, more people will come to visit and to shop.

The city manager emphasized no total parking ban will be undertaken unless the city can be certain downtown businesses will not suffer. "It is surely against our best interests to hurt our businesses, since they provide such a large share of city revenues," he explained.

Four city councilmen, Mayor Alexander R. Imlay, Robin Sweeny, Earl Dunphy and Stephen A. Fraser, reacted to St. Cyr's plan with cautious optimism, particulary since it has not been formally presented to them.

Of the four, Councilman Fraser was the most enthusiastic, but he toohad reservations. "It is generally conceded Sausalito's congested waterfront is really one of the ugliest places on the bay, and consequently attracts a low type of visitor and junky shops," he said. Removing downtown parking, according to Fraser, would not only improve the quality of the city's tourists, but also provide "an opportunity to enhance forever the downtown waterfront and make it an area people, especially local residents, can use."

Imlay said a joint venture between the city and bridge district might be advantageous, because "if either had to do it alone (provide northern parking and bus service), it might never happen." But he said he could pass no judgement on city staff's plan at this time.

Councilmen Dunphy and Mrs. Sweeney both said they would not be opposed to the plan as long as it is carried out in a proper fashion and caused no harm to Sausalito as a whole.

The only councilman who registered strong objections to any "agreement" which would allow the central terminal was Wyman Hicks, who termed the bridge board's planned location "ludicrous."

Hicks, who has been most vocal in demanding a Marinship terminal, said the proposed site would locate the ferry facilities right next to the city's future municipal buildings and waterfront park. "It is just insane to disgorge 4,000 tourists into Sausalito at that point," he said and noted the bridge district is going to have to build a northern parking lot, since the city is "certainly not going to permit" more large parking areas south of Marinship.

"The city doesn't have to make any bargains with the bridge district to stop downtown tourist parking, because Mr. Luehring has already said the district will work with the city in setting up a northern lot," Hicks said.

Predictably, the two representatives of businessmen's groups interviewed saw the entire concept of a downtown without parking as a disaster.

"Parking downtown is essential as it is in any well-planned shopping center," said William Remak, interim secretary of Sausalito Artists and Merchants.

Robert Bauerle, president of the Sausalito Businessmen's Association had stronger words. "If this plan is adopted, it is evident the city council is out to destroy the main source of its income — tourism," Bauerle said. "The resident is going to suffer with a bigger tax bite to offset the loss of parking, sales tax and business license revenues the merchants now provide."

He continued: "If the egomania of certain councilmen is allowed to continue to dictate city policy, Sausalito could well become another Vina del Mar Park, closed 24-hours a day, seven days a week, a city without tourists and traffic, but one in which only millionaires could afford to live."

MORE THAN IT LOOKS LIKE — This is the Varian Clinac 4 linear accelerator which a volunteer campaign organization seeks to buy to replace the cobalt machine for treatment of cancer at Marin General Hospital. The rather ordinary-looking device has a $140,000 price tag.

$4,150 Is Raised For Linear Accelerator

A campaign to buy a linear accelerator to treat cancer patients at Marin General Hospital has raised $4,150 toward its goal of $80,000, Mrs. Walter Strauss of Terra Linda, Marin Medical Society Auxiliary president, reported today.

The linear accelerator would replace the cobalt machine which has been in use at the hospital for nine years. That machine, according to Ray K. Bolinger, hospital administrator, must soon be replaced as it is wearing out. And the linear accelerator is considered a much more satisfactory device, since it can pinpoint its rays on the cancer-infected cells much more accurately.

It will cost $140,000, and re-shielding the room which now houses the cobalt machine will add another $20,000. The hospital district, however, has put up $60,000 from its depreciation fund and agreed to pay the $20,000 for re-shielding the room.

First contributions to what is planned as a countywide fund-raising campaign were reported by Mrs. Strauss as $2,000 from Bernard Saccone of San Rafael, $650 from Sally Stanford of Sausalito, and $1,500 from an anonymous doctor.

The project of buying a replacement for the cobalt machine was first undertaken by the medical society auxiliary. As it proved too big for that organization alone, an advisory board was organized under Mrs. Strauss as chairman.

The board plans to canvass the county for funds, with the slogan: "Invest in something we hope you'll never need."

Drug Abuse Panel Will Hear Experts

Members of the Citizens Drug Abuse Committee of the Reed School District will hear two professional workers at their meeting in the Del Mar School library at 8 p.m. Monday.

The speakers will be Dr. Donald Young, staff psychiatrist in the children's service at the Marin County Community Mental Health Center, and Diane Howell, worker at the Marin Open House antidrug center in San Rafael.

Richmond's Board Bans KQED In School System

RICHMOND, Calif. (UPI) — The Richmond Board of Education has banned educational television station KQED from the district's schools after protests that the station's news programs were biased.

By a vote of 3-2 the board voted not to use the educational station's instruction programs, which had been used for several previous years.

Goy Fuller, board president, said he was opposed to KQED because of its "thoroughly biased news coverage."

Another trustee, Virgil Gay, said "My kids, frankly, watch too much TV at home." He also accused the KQED of "irresponsible programming."

In the past the district has paid up to $15,000 for instructional programs and materials supplied by the station.

Garbage Rate Hiked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The city garbage rate board has approved a 30 per cent increase in the collection rate, boosting most homeowners' bills to $2.40 a month.

The Picture Of Mrs. Thoresen

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Louise Thoresen, accused of pumping five fatal gunshots into her husband's back, is being portrayed by defense attorneys as the innocent victim of his volcanic and violent temper.

Three witnesses Friday corroborated earlier testimony that Mrs. Thoresen had been beaten several times by her husband, William E. Thoresen III, 32, an eccentric gun collector and heir to a Chicago steel fortune. William McDermott, a neighbor, said Mrs. Thoresen showed him bruises on her arm the night before the June 10 killing and said:

"The last three days have been a living hell." David Schutter, a Honolulu attorney who once did extensive legal work for the Thoresens, said Mrs. Thoresen's fear of death was so great that she was willing to give up her only child so that her husband would be fully satisfied by proposed divorce proceedings.

$500,000 Holdup

ATLANTA (UPI)—On the basis of an informant's rundown of the victims, Atlanta police say the haul from a mass holdup after the Muhammed Ali-Jerry Quarry fight is in the neighborhood of $500,000. Their earlier estimate was $200,000.

Puppies Left In Humane Society Were Put To Sleep Within Hours

A few days ago a friend took three two-months old puppies into the Humane Society because he couldn't find homes for them. He thought they'd be placed.

Less than four hours later, someone called him to tell him about a little girl who wanted a dog, so my friend telephoned the Society — and they said the puppies had already been put to sleep.

The tragic thing is that the woman in charge assured him they would try to find good homes for the animals — and then they were gassed just four hours later.

Helen, does this happen often? — NANCY

DEAR NANCY:

I'm assured by several animal shelters that it doesn't happen often, and shouldn't happen at all unless the dogs are incurably sick. Animals are kept for a specified period — not hours but usually days — and real effort is made to find them homes. Surely this was a mistake. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I'd like to add a few words to "Divided's" version of "What are Separated Parents?"

Separated parents are ones that used to love each other and had three children born out of that love, but now only see each other to discuss divorce plans.

It's when your Dad comes over to get his mail and leaves, still burning from the argument he and Mom just had.

It's Dad calling and asking you and your little brother if you have anything special to talk to him about and your answer, "No," knowing that your thoughts and feelings wouldn't change the decision he's already made.

It's having Mom go out and get a job, and coming home from school to an empty house.

It's having people say, "Hey, I saw your father the other day," and you answer, "Oh really?" knowing it's been days since you've seen him.

It's when Mom has appointments with the lawyer and she always comes back crying.

It's running out of excuses when people ask, "Where's your dad" because you just can't bear to say the words, "They're getting a divorce."

Its' thinking, "Who's going to carve the Thanksgiving turkey?" Or will there be one?

It's remembering that a little while ago it was "our furniture," and the dishes belonged to the family. Now it's "Your father's chair." "Your father will be coming over tomorrow to pick out his dishes," etc.

It's wondering what went wrong along the way and wondering if anything will ever be wholly right again. — DIANE

DEAR HELEN:

My mother doesn't make sense to me. She says I can wear pants on cold days, but I guess she means below freezing, because when the other girls are in pants I still have to wear dumb dresses — and it gets awfully cold in classes. Isn't 60 degrees okay for pants? — COLD

DEAR COLD:

It is for me, but I'm not your mother. Hope she "unthaws" soon. — H.

Sorting Laundry

For a lint clean laundry, be sure to sort clothes properly. Wash fabrics that give off lint separately form those that pick up lint and use enough detergent to hold the lint in suspension. Make sure the dryer lent trap is clean.

Gaucho Pants Can Be Varied

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to know more about the gaucho pants that are being featured in the fashion magazines. Are they difficult to wear, are they for sportswear only, and what is the correct length for them?

NANCY R.

DEAR NANCY,

The gaucho pants are varied, both in fabrics and accompaniments. For that "south of the border" feeling, a swashbuckling cape would be perfect, for the "frontier look", add or top with a cropped belted jacket, or lastly, for that causal country or city look, top your gaucho with an easy jacket and vest. The gaucho look is a sporty look but the imagination of designers has turned this into a rich gaucho look by the varied types of fabrics used.

Since they look best when worn with boots, I would say the length should be well below the knees, covering the tops of the boots. Anyone who looks well in a rather full A-line skirt can usually wear the gaucho pants with success.

MRS. MORTON S. Kantor, Muskegon, Mich is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

"I have found one particular slack pattern I like and use it for all of my wool slacks. Instead of lining all my slacks separately, I make one pair of slacks out of a nice firm, soft lining material, preferably polyester using a flesh color. Make a shorter waist and use snaps for a smoother closing. I always put these on first and then my wool slacks. I find the slacks fit better, wear longer and do not stretch out. It also saves hours of time that it takes to line each pair separately."

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm only 16 years old and although I like the mini skirts and dresses, I wouldn't mind having a few midi outfits in my wardrobe, especially since I sew and can afford to experiment a little more with fashion. My problem is that I'm only 5 foot 2 and I want to know if there is any way I can wear the midi length without cutting my height?

MARLA L.

DEAR MARLA,

You can wear the new length if you are careful with your selection and if your body measurements compliment your height. I would suggest an empire length for the bodice which would give you a longer length than a garment cut off or emphasized in any way at the exact waistline.

Also, a one color look will help, either wear boots or hose and shoes in the same color as your garment. Another way to make the midi look well on a short person is to take advantage of the slits that we find in coats, skirts, and dresses. Often these slits are as high as the original mini. Naturally with more fabric than ever used before, you will have to be cautious about excessive fullness in your clothes and choose instead, patterns with a leaner look.

One of the nicest things about the new length is that if you make it and don't like it, you can always shorten it to the correct proportion for yourself (much different than the story that is facing most of us when we try to lengthen something that didn't have the required extra fabric for this operation).

The part of your letter I most enjoyed was when you said you liked the minis but wanted to add a few midis. If all of us would adapt this attitude instead of trying to make a complete changeover, I truly think we could learn to enjoy all lengths and wear whatever our mood dictated for any particular time or occasion.

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to make a fake fur poncho for several reasons. First, they look easy to make; secondly, they seem to be a part of the fashion picture, and last, they sort of bridge the gap for the new skirt lengths. I am wondering if these need to be lined and if so, what could I use to keep the poncho from becoming too bulky?

MRS. J.B.

DEAR MRS. J.B.:

I love all of your reasons for deciding to make the fake fur poncho, and you'll never get such a strong fashion message for so little money. Fake furs usually run about 54 inches wide, the same as most woolens.

You will also notice that some of them, especially the ones with a stenciled design on the right side, will have a geometric or Aztec design on the wrong side which almost resembles a tapestry. These types of fake furs could be made without a separate lining.

The edges of the poncho could be turned back about 2 inches to either the right or the wrong side, depending on your preference. The outer edges could also be bound in vinyl or wool braids.

If you decide to line your poncho, be sure to use a lightweight fabric. We have found that a lightweight wool jersey provides extra warmth as well as "holding power", to prevent the poncho from slipping off your shoulders. The lining is usually brought to the edges of the garment, machine stitched and turned right side out. These are fun and can be a great addition to everyone's wardrobe, including children.

MUSIC REVIEW

'Faust' Production Overcomes Problems

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Gounod's "Faust," in a San Francisco Opera season which has had an unusual number of superb productions, may not be outstanding, but it has many virtues nevertheless.

The opera, in the third of five scheduled performances last night, apparently has benefited from practice, for on the whole it went smoothly, and certainly the audience loved it.

It is the kind of opera that critics often find fair game because it contains so much overly familiar melodious music and because it has some of the excesses of outmoded "grand" opera. But much of the music is truly beautiful when sung by beautiful voices, and there were several last night.

Interest centered in the American debuts of tenor Alain Vanzo of the Paris Opera as Faust and soprano Judith Beckman (winner of the 1961 San Francisco Opera auditions) as Marguerite, and in the local debuts of Roger Soyer of the Paris Opera as Mephistopheles and baritone Dominic Cossa of the New York City Opera as Valentin.

I was expecially impressed with Soyer's powerful, resonant bass that made him the focus of attention in many scenes, His Mephistopheles is sinister and evil, but he does not have the diabolical charm and verve which the great Bulgarian basso Ghiaurov showed the last time the opera was done here.

A very satisfying and attractive Marguerite, Miss Beckman has a lyrical soprano voice with an almost mezzo quality but also the ability to soar clearly into the stratosphere. I have heard better singing of the brilliant jewel song, but her appearance with Mephistopheles in the cathedral and her final prayer before her death in prison were peerless.

Vanzo was not a particularly ardent lover, but his clear, ringing tenor was exciting when it did not lose its beauty at full volume on his highest notes, especially in the famed "Salut Demeure" in the garden scene. The purity of his French diction was a delight.

Though Cossa was a very persuasive Valentin, his baritone was strong but not entirely smooth in tonal quality. Among the most effective bits of dramatic action were his duel with Faust and his death scene cursing Marguerite.

Whenever a role calls for comic touches, that versatile singing actress Sona Cervena is at her best, and the gossipy neighbor Marthe gave her that opportunity. I have never understood why so many composers assign young men's roles to women, but mezzo Sylvia Anderson as Siebel, another admirer of Marguerite, has the stature and full-bodied voice to carry it off well. The minor role of the student Wagner was well sung by baritone Richard Lombardi.

Stage direction by Allen Fletcher in his first work with the San Francisco Opera was lively, but big scenes looked too busy and crowded. Brief tableaux were colorful.

While the Skalicki-West sets were not distinguished, each was right in mood, with the most successful being the starkly simple cathedral scene, enhanced by organ music. The creaky parting of the prison gates was pure bathos that ruined what should be an inspiring finale.

Jean Perisson's smooth, sensitive conducting confirmed my opinion in "Carmen" that he has very special gifts.

Because of the excellence of the chorus, concerted numbers were high points — even the banal "Soldiers' Chorus."

HOMECOMING QUEEN — Jeanne Reiser was chosen homecoming queen today at Novato High School. She was one of eight candidates and was chosen to reign at this afternoon's football game and the coronation ball tonight in the new school gymnasium.

No Reason For Skyjack

MIAMI (UPI)—A sight-seeing hijacker with an old pistol and an Afro hair style forced an Eastern Air Lines jet with 82 persons aboard to fly to Cuba Friday shortly after takeoff from Raleigh, N.C.

"He was pretty free and easy with that gun—he held it on everybody," said Capt. Thomas W. Mayberry, pilot of the hijacked DC9.

The hijacker, identified by Eastern as a Gilbert Jones, boarded the first class section at Raleigh-Durham airport and commandeered the Atlanta-bound flight 21 minutes after it took off.

The hijacker gave no reason for seizing the jetliner, flight crew members said after returning to Miami.

Princess Grace Agrees To Benefit Appearance

LONDON (UPI) —Princess Grace of Monaco, who foresook an acting career as Grace Kelly to wed Prince Rainier, will return to the stage for the first time in more than 14 years Monday.

Lord Mountbatten of Burma said today the princess has agreed to stand in for Noel Coward whose hospitalization this week after an attack of pleurisy prevented him from appearing at a concert at London's Royal Festival Hall for the benefit of the United World Colleges.

Sir Noel and Frank Sinatra headed the list of entertainment personaliteis who agreed to take part in the concert.

"I was naturally worried about who would replace Sir Noel, remembering that it had to be someone who would know the stars well and have the respect of the audience," Lord Mountbatten said.

"On Wednesday night, I rang Princess Grace and asked if she would honor us. With her characteristic generosity, she agreed."

Lord Mountbatten, who is president of hte International Council of United World Colleges, said Member of Parliament Jeffrey Archer, concert organizer, flew to Monaco Thursday morning to brief Princess Grace on details of the affair.

"Frank Sinatra was so moved by her immediate response that he offered his private jet to the princess. She will be traveling back to Nice on his plane on Tuesday."

Tuesday is Monaco's national day.

On Solution To London Traffic: Just 'Scare 'Em'

LONDON (UPI) — Michael Pearson's formula for coping with London rush hour traffic: If you can't beat 'em, scare 'em.

Pearson, a 26-year-old heir to Britain's Viscount Cowdrey, has augmented his $72,000 personal fleet of two Ferraris and a Rolls-Royce with a 1941 Daimler "Dingo" armored car.

"I can't think of a better vehicle for avoiding being externally cut out by taxis and London Transport buses," the bearded former Life Guards regiment officer said Friday.

Two Crashes In Marin Injure Four

Four persons, including three members of one family, were injured in two traffic accidents in Marin yesterday, the California Highway Patrol reported.

David Meehan, 14, of Tomales, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with a concussion and scalp cuts suffered in an accident at 7:50 a.m. on the Bolinas-Fairfax Road.

Meehan was a passenger in an automobile driven by Florence G. Meehan, 45, of Tomales.

The highway patrol said Mrs. Meehan was passing an oil truck on a section of the road being resurfaced when her car collided head on with a truck and trailer rig driven by Donald L. O'Hare, 39, of Richmond.

Mrs. Meehan was treated at Marin General for bruises of the face. Another passenger in her car, Raymond Meehan, 14, was treated for bruises of the head, left ear and chest.

A Lucas Valley woman was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General with multiple bruises and muscle spasms. Sherry Harris, 20, of 4800 Lucas Valley Road, was admitted to the hospital at 8:10 p.m. following a traffic accident. Details of the crash were not available.

MUSIC REVIEW

Novato Bash Lacks Original Spontaneity Of Past Shows

By THERON A. NEWELL

"Burlesque Ain't Dead" was a crowd pleaser, but a big departure from past flings and bashes of the Novato Community Players.

The fast-paced show came off smoothly last night at the Novato Community House. It will be repeated again at 8:30 p.m. today and next Friday and Saturday.

The local talent in the Burke-Winston bash was trained to perfection, but lacked the spontaneity of previous shows in which members wrote and acted their own material.

The show was not lacking in comedy and off-color jokes, but it was done in too much of a Hollywood style and the jokes were too slow in coming across in many cases.

In "A Man Needs Someone to Love," Harvey Teague displayed a voice that has been hidden too long in Novato.

The dancing was probably the best the Novato Players have performed. Lighting and sound were also handled well.

There were these bizarre scenes: cannibals putting a missionary into a cooking pot with astronauts and Shakespearean actors doing a western square dance with spectators viewing "Mona Lisa" in an art gallery. One wondered where the burlesque title came from.

THE WEEK'S BUSINESS

Cut In Interest Rate—Big News

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The two key national interest rates, the Federal Reserve Banks' discount rate and the rate for prime business loans of big commercial banks, were cut a quarter point this week. And the General Motors strike was settled.

Even before announcement of the interest rate cuts, chief economist William Freund of the New York Stock Exchange said, on the basis of several surveys, the 1969-1970 recession appears to have hit bottom. But Freund warned that the economy faces the peril of more inflationary wage settlements.

Settlement of the eight-week-old G.M. strike calls for a 30 per cent wage boost to be spread over three years — between 13 and 14 per cent in the first year.

General reaction in the business community to the terms was "they're inflationary, but at least ending that huge strike will help the employment situation substantially."

Not all local issues at G.M. plants have yet been resolved and it was still unclear yesterday just when G.M.workers will return to their jobs. United Auto Workers officials now will take their proposals to Ford and Chrysler and they said they expected these talks to drag on into 1970.

The G.M. settlement followed recommendations by a presidential panel earlier in the week for wage boosts of 32.5 per cent over three years to four railway unions.

Stock traders evidently considered the G.M. settlement particularly inflationary and the interest rate cuts too small. At least the market reacted by going down.

Sales of domestic automobiles for the first 10 days were disappointing, down 38 per cent from a year ago. Chrysler sales were off 20.6 per cent although the big drop was caused by G.M. dealers' lack of cars. American Motors had a substantial gain.

The cut in the discount rate was from 6 to 5¾ per cent and the primate rate drop was from 7¾ to 7½ per cent. Short term interest rates generally continued to decline across the country and some long term rates declined. Government treasury bill yields fell to two year lows. A Bell system offering of $500 million in debentures was quickly snapped up at 8.66 per cent, indicating investors don't expect more offerings at such high rates.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said price cuts are becoming fairly common and the number of price boosts is diminishing sharply.

The Commerce Department said pre-tax corporate profits for the third quarter were up $3 billion from the second quarter but down $4.9 billion from a year ago, thus bearing out various earlier surveys.

The Commerce Department also said personal income was down $2.4 billion in October, mainly because of the G.M. strike, which caused so many layoffs in other industries.

And in a preliminary report, the department said the Gross National Product rose in real terms by 1.4 per cent in the third quarter, about the same as in the second quarter.

Meanwhile, unemployment was disclosed to have edged up to 5.6 per cent in October because of the auto strike and the Boston Herald-Traveler announced it will print free job wanted ads for the rest of the year.

Business inventories were revealed to have risen $620 million in September. Business sales fell about $570 million, again reflecting in part the impact of the G.M. strike.

Dun & Bradstreet said retail sales were up 1 to 5 per cent this week from a year ago across the country. The Commerce Department said total retail sales in October were down 1 per cent from September but were 3 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment in the airline industry continued high but the civil aeronautics board rejected for the present a joint proposal of American, Trans World Airlines and United Air Lines to effect $50 million in economies by pooling among 15 pairs of major cities.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court knocked out the rate reduction provisions of the state's recently enacted partial no-fault automobile insurance program. Several big companies said they will resume writing auto liability insurance in Massachusetts as a result.

Britain announced it will raise the export subsidy to $213 million from $113 million for troubled Rolls-Royce, Ltd., on the jet engines for the Lockheed airbus. The cost of the program has run way above expectations.

Finally, the biggest individual life insurance policy in history — $15 million — came up for settlement on the life of 32-year-old Oklahoma rancher E. C. Mullendore III, who was murdered, apparently by burglars. The policy was reinsured among many companies, no one having more than $500,000 of it to pay.

Gallinas Village CSD Sets Meeting

Gallinas Village Community Service District directors will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church to interview a volunteer to fill a vacant directorship.

Chairman Herbert C. Belben Jr. said Evans Burke of 701 Estancia Way has offered to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of David Banfield.

At last night's regular meeting, the directors agreed to ask the Gallinas Village Improvement Association whether it would jointly sponsor a Christmas outdoor lighting contest.

Camping Gear Stolen

Camping gear and clothing valued at $218 were stolen from the auto of Donald R. Markey of 777 Kearner Boulevard while the car was parked at his home between midnight Thursday and 9 a.m. yesterday, San Rafael police said yesterday.

Russia, U.S. Reach Accord On Naval Base Construction In Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States and Russia apparently have concluded an informal agreement under which the Soviet Union has pledged not to build naval bases on Cuban soil while reserving the right for its submarines and other ships to call at Cuban ports.

Under the unwritten U.S.-Soviet agreement, as best as could be determined, there is no restriction against the anchoring of floating Soviet service facilities in Cuban ports with the permission of the Cuban government.

The agreement appears to have been worked out through at least one secret meeting between U.S. and Soviet representatives after Sept. 25, the day that Nixon administration officials warned about Soviet construction activity at Cinefuegos Bay which could be a submarine base.

The officials said the activity might violate the 1962 agreement between the late President John F. Kennedy and former Soviet Prime Minister Nikita S. Khrushchev under which the Soviet Union promised to withdraw its missiles from Cuba and not reintroduce offensive weapons on the Caribbean island, while the United States pledged not to invade Cuba.

Among some of the equipment which caused U.S. intelligence experts concern were the presence in Cienfuegos harbor of one submarine tender, one rescue salvage tug, and two repair barges.

On Sept. 28, three days after strong warnings issued by the Nixon administration, the sub tender and the tug left Cienfuegos for Mariel harbor. The repair barges, which are believed to be capable of servicing Polaris-type missiles carried by the modern Soviet Yankee class submarines, however, remained at Cienfuegos.

The submarine tender and the rescue salvage tug returned to Cienfuegos Nov. 9. The continued presence of this equipment — even if all shore construction has been halted — continues to concern the Nixon administration which is keeping it under a close eye through aerial reconaissance.

So far there is no available evidence that this equipment has been used to service Soviet submarines.

Apparently the Nixon administration, upon detecting suspicious activity at Cienfuegos, sought assurances from the Soviet Union that it was not building a base where Polaris-type missiles might be served and even stockpiled.

The Soviet Union responded on Oct. 13, 1970, by repeating a Tass statement that it was respecting the 1962 agreement, and specifically added that it was not constructing a base. The State Department on the same day characterized the Soviet Tass statement "positive."

The State Department asserted Friday that the Russians are not building an on-shore naval base.

State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey has issued a carefully worded statement saying, in view of President Kennedy's press conference statement Nov. 20, 1962, to which this administration has referred, and the Soviet government statement issued by the Tass news agency Oct. 13, 1970, "we are confident there is undertsanding by the two governments of the respective positions on the limits of their action with regard to Cuba."

Death Closes Chapter On 'Jack The Ripper'

SOUTHAMPTON, England (UPI) —Dr. Thomas Stowell, who said he knew the identity of "Jack the Ripper" and started speculation the multiple killer was a grandson of Queen Victoria, has died, his secret undisclosed.

His son, Dr. T. Eldon Stowell, said his father died last Sunday. Details of the death, he added, would be disclosed later.

Stowell said he destroyed the file left behind by his father which was labeled "Jack the Ripper" and which his father maintained until his death held evidence that convinced him the killer of at least five prostitutes in London's East End in the late 1880s "was a scion of a noble family."

An article on "The Ripper" by Dr. Stowell, Sr., in the journal Criminology led the newspaper Sunday Times to raise the name of the Duke of Clarence, Prince Albert Victor, grandson of Queen Victoria, brother to King George V and heir to the throne in connection with the 19th Century murders.

Dr. Thomas Stowell, in a letter which appeared in the London Times Monday, the day after his death, said, "I have at no time associated his royal highness, the late Duke of Clarence, with the Whitechapel murder or suggested that the murderer was of royal blood.

"It remains my opinion that he was a scion of a noble family," the letter said.

The article in Crimonology which touched off the Duke of Clarence speculation said, "the evidence suggests that the murderer was a man so senior in the hierarchy of the land, of so noble a family that the police, when they realized who was involved, were forced to conceal his identity."

A check of royal engagements at the time of "The Ripper" murders furnished evidence the Duke of Clarence would have been unable to have carried out the killings, researchers said.

Dr. Eldon Stowell said he destroyed the Ripper folder his father left.

He declined to discuss reasons for the decision.

"My father left no instructions or request on what we were to do with it," he said. "I know he has been interested in the subject for many years and that it arose again recently — for what reason I don't know.

The Ripper case, he said, held no particular interest for him. "It was before my time," he said.

Plea Of Innocent To Pot Possession

Kathleen Mary Adami, 24, of Gate 6, Sausalito, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana. A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 23.

Miss Adami was arrested when she attempted to bring suspected pot into the Civic Center last Thursday.

Interpol Is Called Into Jewelry Haul

MONTEVIDEO (UPI)—Uruguayan police asked Interpol, the international police organization, for help today in finding nine leftist Tupamaro Guerrillas who stole an estimated $6 million in jewels in what is believed to be the biggest bank robbery in history.

The guerrillas, four of them women, used three kidnapped bank officials as shields to get past guards and enter the Bank of the Republic late Thursday night, just 160 feet from the heavily guarded Ministry of the Interior which controls the national police.

They spent three and one-half hours searching the bank vaults and selecting the most valuable jewels before escaping in three stolen cars, leaving the bank officials and six employees tied up.

Jose Ramon Guidon, the bank's assistant manager, estimated $6 million in jewels and $48,000 in cash was taken.

The preliminary inventory showed $400,000 in jewels was missing but the contents of many safety deposit boxes were unaccounted for.

Authorities said the Tupamaros, armed with machine guns and pistols, kidnaped Guidon, Treasurer Ange Rodolfo Lopez and Administrative Assistant Julio Martin Picun from their homes and used them to gain entrance to the bank.

An employee in the bank helped the guerrillas load their loot in 10 large bags and left with them, authorities said.

The Tupamaros kidnapped two Americans and a Brazilian last summer. They killed one of the Americans, Dan A. Mitrione of Richmond, Ind., and are believed to still be holding soils specialist Claude L. Fly of Fort Collins, Colo., and Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide.

The Guiness Book of Records lists the biggest bank robbery as a $4.77 million haul made by the Algerian secret army (OAS) on March 23, 1962, during the Algerian civil war. The book says the biggest jewel robbery was the theft of $1.75 million Feb. 11, 1962, in Pompano Beach, Fla.

Low Bidder On Fire Station

Swallow Construction Co. of Petaluma yesterday submitted an apparently low bid of $97,200 for construction of Petaluma Fire Station No. 3 on South McDowell Boulevard.

Second of the six bidders was James Construction Co., Inc. of Santa Rosa at $98,850. The project is estimated to cost $102,000 and will be financed by bonds approved by voters last June.

The city council will award a contract at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Argument Leads To A Stabbing

An argument over a girl resulted in the stabbing of a 23-year-old Sausalito man last night.

Michael S. Hart of Gate 6 was reported in satisfactory condition today in Marin General Hospital with a knife wound in the chest suffered following an argument with a friend, Michael G. Blaine, 23, of 238 Throckmorton Drive, Mill Valley.

Police said the incident occurred at 7 p.m. when Hart followed Chandler V. Hannon, 18, who gave her address only as Mill Valley, into the Blaine residence. Hart was apparetnly stabbed after striking Blaine, according to police. No charges have been filed.

$323 Tool Theft

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Doctors Can't Be Blamed For All Society's Health Problems

Van Dellen

The rules of health are simple. They include the use of common sense in nutrition, cleanliness, sanitation and immunization. Like other rules, they must be reemphasized from time to time — in the home and at school. Children particularly require this information because habits begun in childhood are carried into adulthood.

There is a growing tendency to unload an enormous number of social problems on the medical profession. Those associated with health are a good example. What can the average M.D. or medical society do about sanitation besides making recommendations to our politicians? To offer effective solutions, the medico must have the facts concerning the increased prevalence of diseases or deaths from inadequate sanitation. The same applies to air pollution.

UNDERNUTRITION in otherwise healthy children and adults is more common among the poor and ignorant. Is this a medical, social, political, agricultural or food industry problem? The need for a well-balanced diet cannot be overestimated. Everyone should know what to eat, but these items are unobtainable if grocery money is spent unwisely on snack foods, tobacco, alcohol, TV sets, or automobiles.

Nutrition goes beyond consuming the basic four — meats, dairy products, cereals, and fruits and vegetables. Overeating leads to obesity — a condition far more rampant than malnutrition. And what about cleanliness? It is a personal matter and a habit the physician stresses, but cannot control.

IMMUNIZATION prevents and controls many diseases. This is a medical and public health problem and by and large is available to rich and poor alike when our public officials cooperate.

There is said to be a shortage of physicians, but thousands of men and women with M.D. degrees are not assuming the responsibility for the medical care of our people. These individuals prefer to teach, do research, assume administrative duties or join the fight against poverty, war and civil unrest.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SHORTNESS OF BREATH

W. H. writes: I'm 52 and when I walk I get winded and have to stop. Do you think an attack of pneumonia 20 years ago could be responsible for my shortness of breath?

REPLY

This is unlikely, since complete healing usually occurs after an attack of pneumonia. On the other hand, the shortness of breath may stem from emphysema, caused by smoking, air pollution, or a previous infection. Heart trouble may do the same. Send stamped, addressed envelope for our leaflet on shortness of breath.

MILK AND FISH

K.D. writes: Is it safe to drink milk if fish is the main course?

REPLY

Yes. This old myth is shattered by the popularity of creamed tuna and similar meals.

PUNGENT ODORS

G.C. writes: Do garlic and onions make the perspiration smell like garlic and onions?

REPLY

BONE CANCER

REPLY

No.

Today's Health Hint — Feelings of guilt may lead to severe depression.

'Hopeless' Candidacy Gives Example Of Commitment

BEFORE LAST WEEK'S elections fade further from memory, Anne Smart's candidacy for state Senate as American Independent Party nominee is worth a closer look than any of us gave it during the campaign.

Most of us see the American Independent party as the party of George Wallace, and we see George Wallace as the far-right spokesman for white supremacy and "keeping Negroes in their place."

This image leads most of us to detest George Wallace and what he stands for, along with whatever he touches directly or indirectly. This, consciously or subconsciously, was transferred to Mrs. Smart. Her candidacy thereby represented something we detested; we didn't listen to what she had to say because we were sure we were not going to like it.

Actually, if we read over her campaign literature carefully, we find it not at all extreme. What her platform contained is immaterial; she was licked before she started. She must have known it.

One of Mrs. Smart's attributes is that when she believes in something, she works for it, regardless of the chances of success.

IF YOU HAVE attended a graduation ceremony in the past few years, chances are you heard the speaker exhort the young graduates to "commitment."

The call of the times is not to accept the ills of the world but to join the fight to cure them.

Bully for commitment! The world would have fewer ills if there had been more commitment in earlier generations.

But commitment is not without its hazards.

FIFTEEN OR MORE years ago, Mrs. Smart was shocked by pornography and blasphemy contained in books used in Tamalpais High School District.

With near-total commitment, she attacked what she perceived as evil. She was of course roundly and soundly denounced by educators, school administrators, school trustees and a large segment of the citizenship. She was accused, excoriated and damned.

In the end, the Tamalpais district adopted a new orderly, more reasonable system for book selection. And the district adopted an orderly, more reasonable system for receiving citizen complaints.

Mrs. Smart's commitment to her cause contributed more than any other single factor to the adoption of these orderly processes.

Her commitment did in fact bring change and improvement.

So far as we know, she never received the slightest bit of credit for this from anyone. All she got was denunciation.

To repeat, commitment is not without its hazards.

AS NIGHT FELL on the chill evening before election last week, there was 57-year-old Anne Smart in a supermarket parking lot striding vigorously about handing out her campaign literature. She was cheerful and smiling, boasting that although her two campaign aides had given up earlier owing to total exhaustion, she herself was getting her "second wind" and would keep going as long as there were people about to whom she could hand her literature.

More than 75,000 people cast ballots for state senator in Marin County. Mrs. Smart received only 2,129 votes.

It is doubtful if she was surprised.

She deserves to be proud that she carried out her commitment to her beliefs.

IT IS ALWAYS PAINFUL when a long-active senior citizen finally is turned out to pasture.

That's what happened to Dr. Leo Stanley in last week's elections. He served on the board of the Marin Municipal Water District for 24 years and then was defeated for re-election.

It is likely that his calendar age, 84, had considerable to do with the voters' decision to retire "Doc" Stanley.

Those who voted against him on account of his age couldn't know him very well. He is still youthful, energetic, active and presumably will continue to be so for a long time yet.

When his term officially expires, he will have more time to pursue his other interests, including writing and preservation of local history.

It is likely that most people who voted in the Water District Division I contest last week were not even residents of Marin when Doc Stanley served as San Quentin surgeon and carried on an extensive private medical practice in Marin. He was widely and favorably known at a time when personal acquaintance and personal knowledge determined how most votes were cast.

Doc Stanley's personal integrity and his dedicated interest in the water district were widely known, first hand, by voters. He didn't have to campaign for re-election. He merely gave his legion of friends and acquaintances a chance to vote for him again every four years.

But time has marched onward. Marin has grown. All of our community problems, including those of the water district, have become more complex. A seemingly well-qualified "newcomer" (compared with Doc Stanley's residency in these parts) came along to campaign on the issues in the present-day fashion.

The result has been retirement for Doc Stanley.

But the retirement will be limited only to water district participation. Leo Stanley can be counted upon to be vigorously active in those community matters of his special interests for a good many years to come. Our sadness at seeing him turned out to pacture is assuaged considerably the expectation that he will go on rendering service to the community, as vigorously as ever.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to Steven Henry and Jan Sonander of Boy Scout Troop 1, Mill Valley, who produced a professional-grade guide book for helping to save the environment which is being distributed by the troop.

BOUQUET to San Francisco Supervisor Dianne Feinstein for starting an effort to get legislation allowing local control of filthy movies. We'd like to see Marin public officials do likewise. Centainly state control has proved no control at all.

BRICKBATS to those lamebrains who think it's funny to telephone schools and public buildings with warnings that "there's a bomb planted in your building."

A belated BOUQUET to Peter C. Meyer, Marin County elections officer, for the smooth handling of the general election. The count was completed at 11:25 p.m. — certainly a modern-day record for this county — and everything went amazingly smoothly. What a contrast to some past elections!

Weather Over The Hill

Marin's weather varies greatly within very short distances. A hill, a valley, proximity to water, as well as less obvious factors, combine to make this a place of great variation.

Kentfield is just over a small hill from San Rafael, but it almost always receives half again as much rain on any given rainy day.

Little Woodacre, in the San Geronimo Valley, seems to have the most of everything weatherwise — the coldest, the hottest, the wettest — depending on the season.

The direction of the winds on Marin's rolling topography help account for the different weather over the hill.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Rainbow Pleases; Complaints Annoy

Driving to Marin this evening from the City, it was a smile that arrived on my face when I again saw the glorious colors on our two tunnels!

Arriving home I read the paper and got disturbed over two of our obviously "ancient" residents.

Ruth A. Taylor and her blast about Pepperland. Couldn't quite understand this, for if it was so bad why hasn't it been in the I-J every night? And, why haven't the police closed it up?

And, then the article below it by Bertha Krug on the rainbows on the tunnels.

I'm a mid-fortyish longtime member of Marin's family, fully realizing now why the younger generation think that my age group and those older than myself are just not with it.

Have the people that have complained about the beautiful colors that were put on the tunnels done anything to improve our environment? Has the dear soul that complained about a dance hall away from anything that the sounds could annoy done anything in the way of helping the younger generation to understand he world they live in?. . .

Ferries 'Restored' By Private Firm

Your Nov. 6, edition in "What Our Readers Say" column carried an article by a Jerome Kay. For Mr. Kay's information, we, as a PUC regulated carrier, have provided a daily ferry service between Tiburon and San Francisco since 1962 and which has grown from a mere handful of commuters to over 700 per day. Obviously, Mr. (Stephan C.) Leonaudakis has had nothing to do with "restoring" the ferry boats.

How To Detect Undercover Agent: Cast Slur At J. Edgar Hoover

WASHINGTON — In the past month we have seen 15 FBI agents drop out of the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York because a professor made critical remarks about J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI's stalwart leader.

Following this, 11 FBI employees dropped out of the course on "Violence in America" at American University because the professor there cast aspersions on Mr. Hoover's leadership.

There will probably be more of this as time goes on, and it is conceivable that every university in the country could soon be on J. Edgar Hoover's black list.

What isn't generally known is that there is a conspiracy among university professors to criticize J. Edgar Hoover publicly.

THIS IS WHY they're doing it:

It is assumed that the FBI has planted undercover agents in all the major universities in the country. These undercover agents look exactly like radical students. They have long hair, wear beards, go shoeless, and use all the obscene words. In the past they have been impossible to spot on campus.

But not long ago a professor at a Midwestern college made some derogatory remarks about J. Edgar Hoover. Three of the radical students immediately walked out of the class in a huff. Everyone was very surprised when they announced they were leaving the school.

It turned out they were FBI undercover agents, whose job it had been to infiltrate the radical movement.

They had been ordered to put up with any indignity to win the confidence of the radicals, except to sit there and take criticism of Mr. Hoover.

A FEW WEEKS later in California, a professor in government statistics made the point that the higher the crime rate rose in the United Staes, the more kudos J. Edgar Hoover received from Congress and the administration. The professor was trying to show that bad news does not necessarily bring criticism from government. He said that as far as his statistics showed, there hasn't been a year when the FBI did not report a rise in crime in the United States, and each time it did, Mr. Hoover received congratulations from the President.

Two radical students in his class broke into tears and announced they could no longer stay in school. It was a blow to everyone, because one of the undercover agents had just been elected president of the SDS and had been in charge of an antiwar demonstration in Governor Reagan's office.

WELL, THESE TWO incidents suddenly made professors all over the country realize that the easiest way to spot an FBI undercover agent was to criticize J. Edgar Hoover.

And so professors are now waging a campaign to make remarks about the head of the FBI.

The FBI knows, of course, what is happening, but they're caught in a bind. If they keep their agents on campus to catch the people responsible for student violence, they will be exposing FBI employees to defamatory remarks about Mr. Hoover.

So far the FBI has left it up to the individual agents to decide whether to stay or leave. But they're proud that in every case so far when someone has sullied J. Edgar Hoover's name, the FBI undercover agent has indignantly dropped out of school.

DeGaulle's Life And His Advice Contain Lessons For America

WASHINGTON — The columns of newsprint marking Gen. Charles de Gaulle's departure from the world stage show that he had no false modesty when it came to instructing others on how to conduct themselves. During his incredible, crowded career he spoke no wiser words than when he warned President Kennedy against becoming involved in the Vietnam war.

The American president was in Paris in 1961 for a state visit. De Gaulle told the youthful President from across the sea that Vietnam could become a quagmire from which the United States would find it difficult, if not impossible, to find a way out.

From bitter experience De Gaulle knew the cost of colonial wars. French involvement in Indochina after 1945 had cost an untold treasure of blood and money. In the last years before the settlement of 1954 the United States had been pouring in help at the rate of $800 million a year, all in vain as De Gaulle was well aware.

IN LIGHT of the defeat in Vietnam, the French war in Algeria was even more lacerating. That war, waged by professional soldiers to hold a proud French possession, generated the kind of divisiveness that the Vietnam war has aroused in the United States.

De Gaulle knew he had to end a hopeless war and he must have known, too, that he alone could bring it off. The way he defused the military and the passionate colonialists was worthy of Machiavelli. Assuming new and concentrated authority under a constitution which he had put over with the electorate, he seemed to side with the generals while contriving to bring the war to an end.

But it was a close thing. Those of us in Paris at the time will not forget, at the climax of the revolt of the generals in Algeria, the rumor sweeping the city that a thousand paratroopers were preparing to take over. With the army drastically cut back and spread thin, they could have taken a more or less defenseless city.

De Gaulle brought the war to an end, but with a backlash that had its own perils. The secret army organization permeated the military and gave encouragement to extreme rightists. At least two attempts were made on De Gaulle's life.

As though to compensate for the losses abroad, the president of the Fifth Republic inflated the grandeur of his beloved France far beyond the capability of a nation of 50 million people. He was determined to make France a power on a par with the two nuclear giants. To this end he fostered a nuclear development, defying the limited test-ban treaty restricting tests in the atmosphere, that could be scarcely more than a perilous nuisance in the big-power game. Along with other foreign and military adventures, the cost of the nuclear development contributed to a serious inflation. The student-trade union revolt of the spring of 1968 and the currency crisis of the same year followed.

In the triumph and tragedies of this man who stood so tall against the horizon are profoundly important lessons for the United States. First of all is an understanding of the cost of concluding a war that has meant so much sacrifice. It cannot be painless. Steady nerves and a willingness to face grave risks are essential, as De Gaulle demonstrated in Algeria.

Far more important, however, is the lesson that grandeur and rhetoric are not enough. De Gaulle brought unity of a kind to France after the trauma of the Nazi occupation and the defeat in two colonial wars. He invoked the greatness of a great past. But he did not undertake the fundamental changes that must be made if France is to be a world power. It was perhaps too much to expect De Gaulle, who so passionately loved the past, to work these changes.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

By PHIL NEWSOM, UPI Foreign News Analyst

Oil riches from Libya, manpower and professional skills from Egypt, agricultural produce from Sudan. . .on paper the proposed federation of the three North African nations appears to be a natural.

The late President Gamal Abdel Nasser dreamed of a Pan-Arab "unity of purpose" almost from the moment of seizing power in 1952, and his would be the guiding spirit in the new federation which began taking shape last December after failure of the Arab summit to agree upon a common strategy against Israel.

That it is being approached with caution is the result of past disappointments.

EGYPT AND SYRIA entered a constitutional union in February, 1958, and became known as the United Arab Republic, a name which Nasser retained even though the partnership with Syria broke down in September, 1961.

A proposal which would have linked Syria, Egypt, Iraq and Yemen never got beyond the paper stage.

In the 1950s and even into the 1960s there was talk of political union among the Arab Magreb countries of northwestern Africa—Morocco, Tunisia, Algeria and Libya. They did achieve some economic cooperation but the idea of closer ties appears to have evaporated, particularly as Libya has turned to the East.

DESPITE PAST failures, the proposed new federation presents interesting possibilities. Union among the three would create an African nation of more than two million square miles and 48 million people.

It would be the seventh in size in the world and 14th in population.

Libya has more oil wealth than it can use properly, the Egyptians have a seemingly incurable unemployment problem and the Sudan has undeveloped lands.

The three countries abut each other.

Nasser, reluctantly, it was said at the time, took over the rule of Syria at the request of Syrian politicians and army officers concerned about increasing Communist and Soviet influence in their country..

There is another important point. The men discussing the new merger are virtual dictators over their people, who have not yet been offered a choice. In the Sudan there are serious political differences between the Moslem north and the black tribesmen of the south.

Nor, among the three nations, has it been decided where the veto power lies. History has shown there is no such thing as co-equal dictators.

THE LATEST PROPOSALS

The Paris Peace Talks — Assessment Of Proposals

Editor's Note: The Vietnam peace talks in Paris have been going on between the United States and North Vietnam since May 10, 1968, and the expanded talks that brought South Vietnam and the Viet Cong to the table have gone on since Jan. 19, 1969. There has been no evident progress over that long period. In this dispatch a veteran reporter who covered the war itself for more than three years, and has been reporting the peace talks for two years seeks to put into perspective the situation as it stands today on the basis of the latest proposals.

By RAY F. HERNDON

PARIS (UPI)—The Paris peace conference is a place where everybody involved thinks the other fellow is trying to get something for nothing.

As the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese see it President Nixon and the South Vietnamese government are trying to get them to surrender the only leverage they have — the prisoners they hold, the pressure they are maintaining on U.S. and South Vietnamese forces, and the unpopularity of the war among the American people — without giving any real value in return.

As the United States and South Vietnam see it, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong aren't offering any bargains either. In simplest terms it looks to Washington and Saigon as though the Communists want to move into a house (Saigon), evacuate the occupants and take over the keys before they will even discuss whether they'll pay anything for the house.

President Nixon did make certain concessions to the Communists in his last peace plan but to Hanoi and the Viet Cong the asking price still was too high.

President Nixon's five-point peace plan basically called for 1) a stand-still cease-fire, 2) an international peace conference to deal with all of Indochina, 3) the immediate and unconditional release by both sides of all war prisoners, 4) an unspecified political settlement, and 5) the offer to talk about the total withdrawal of U.S. troops "as part of an over-all settlement."

As gleaned from their statements and private comments, this is how the Communists view these proposals:

CEASE-FIRE

1) The Vietnam war is a "presidential war," not a popular war declared by Congress; 2) The U.S. president is popularly elected, so 3) One way to make the presidential war — and thus the president himself — more unpopular is to make American casualties go up from time to time.

Therefore, if the Communists agreed to the cease-fire, they would be surrendering their ability to influence U.S. public opinion, surrendering their ability to bring greater pressure on the White House because they would no longer be causing American casualties.

Moreover, if the Communists agreed to a stand-still cease-fire, they would be tacitly admitting that U.S. troops have the right to stay on Vietnamese soil — something they do not admit. So much for the cease-fire.

CONFERENCE

Ever since the Soviet Union and Red China pressured North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh into accepting half the cake, so to speak, in the 1954 Geneva conference, the Hanoi leadership has been wary of the idea of settling its problems in big international conferences.

Just as Red China openly expresses fears that Russia and the United States will come to some arrangement and then impose it on Peking, the Vietnamese Communists are fearful that the Russians and Americans might get together in some side room of a conference hall, and Hanoi would get sold out in the process.

For years after the 1954 Geneva Conference, where the Russians and the Chinese made just such a deal with the West, the attitude of Hanoi leaders could be summed up thusly: with friends like the Soviet Union and the Chinese, who needs enemies?

And if the record of Geneva-type conferences were not sufficiently tainted in Hanoi's eyes after 1954, the same formula was tried again in 1962 for neighboring Laos, and it failed to restore peace there as well.

POW RELEASES

The Communists attitude toward prisoner releases is basically this: Prisoners are one of Mr. Nixon's problems, not one of theirs. Hanoi does not even admit to having troops in the South, so how could there be any North Vietnamese prisoners? Even though it is fallacious reasoning (there is ample proof that Hanoi's troops fight and many have been captured in the South), the prisoners are not an emotional issue in North Vietnam.

The Communist dictatorship in Hanoi is not subject to the same pressures as is the popularly elected American president.

There are thousands of Viet Cong prisoners, but the Viet Cong know that the countryside in South Vietnam is so dangerous that their captured colleagues are probably better off and are certainly safer than the Viet Cong on the outside. Further, in the mystique of liberation politics, getting a prison record under a "warlike and fascist" government is the equivalent of earning a Boy Scout merit badge. So much for prisoners.

TROOP ISSUE

President Nixon's proposals on troop withdrawals and a political settlement are related, as are those of the Viet Cong.

In essence, Nixon is saying the United States is prepared to set a withdrawal deadline for all U.S. troops, but "as part of an over-all settlement." In other words, no promises on total withdrawal until agreement is reached on the political future of South Vietnam.

The argument is as basic as which comes first, the cart or the horse? Nixon says political settlement first and then withdrawal, and the Communists demand exactly the opposite. The Communist reasoning: There cannot be a fair political settlement or elections under American bayonets. The American rebuttal: If U.S. troops are withdrawn, there is nothing left to negotiate.

CONG PLAN

The Viet Cong "global peace solution" is a complex maze of 10 points, to which Viet Cong Foreign Minister Nguyen Thi Binh offered eight "clarifications" on Sept. 17. But the Communists have only two demands they say are "fundamental."

The fundamental demands, which Washington has always rejected, require the rapid, total, unilateral and unconditional pullout of U.S. troops, and the overthrow of the Saigon government as the troops withdraw.

The only new elements in the revamped Viet Cong package of Sept. 17 were the offers of a limited cease-fire, a suggested U.S. withdrawal deadline of June 30, 1971, and the promise to talk about prisoner releases after Washington gives up the fight.

The Viet Cong cease-fire offer is a masterpiece of vague diplomatic wordage. It says that if Washington first agrees to withdraw all troops by June 30, 1971, the Communist troops will "cease attacking those units in the process of effecting their withdrawal."

Given the best interpretation, the Viet Cong offer could mean that Communist troops would be ordered to stop attacking U.S. troops as soon as Nixon agreed to their withdrawal deadline.

At worst, it could mean that the Viet Cong are only promising not to shoot U.S. troops in the back as they board planes and ships to leave, and that any troops not actually withdrawing would be fair game.

Because the Viet Cong refuse to give their offer the best interpretation, or any interpretation at all, the United States can reasonably suspect the worst.

Once the United States has given up the fight, then the Viet Cong promise to talk about prisoner exchanges. But that is all they are promising —to talk.

The juxtaposition of the prisoner question and Vietnamese Communist demands for indemnification from the United States makes it appear that Hanoi and the Viet Cong want to blackmail the United States into paying millions of dollars in indemnifications (read ransom money) to get the prisoners back.

THE DEMANDS

The Viet Cong demands about a political settlement are basically this: The Saigon government must be overthrown, all organized resistance to the Viet Cong must cease to be organized, then the Viet Cong and their fellow travelers will form a "coalition government."

In the process, the two top men among the Saigon leadership are ruled out of any participation in the future of Vietnam because they are bad men. In other words, the republicans can run in the election, but none of their leading politicians.

All the while, the Viet Cong say South Vietnam's problems will be solved by the South Vietnamese. What about all those North Vietnamese making war in the South? There are none, of course, reply the Viet Cong.

The solutions advanced amount to each side asking the other to renounce what it has been fighting for all these years.

The United States has been fighting for the right of its South Vietnamese allies to determine their own future.

The Viet Cong peace plan would make sure that the South Vietnamese who are allied with the United States would not have this right.

On the other hand, the Communists have been fighting for a unified Communist Vietnam, and Washington says that if given a free choice under the U.S. peace plan, the South Vietnamese would hardly choose communism.

So if Hanoi accepted the Nixon plan, it believes it would have lost.

Some day, presumably, there will be some kind of settlement. But first, something, or one side or both, must give more than has been seen so far.

LAW, ORDER ATTITUDES

Deserters Fear FBI In England

By JOHN HAY
Toronto News Service

LONDON — Hundreds of United States Army desererts and draft-dodgers who are hiding out in Britain fear an imminent concerted drive by FBI agents and British police to flush them out.

Stiffening law-and-order attitudes on both sides of the Atlantic has increased the pressure to catch them and deport them back to America.

The president of the Union of American Exiles in Britain, Harry Pincus, told me recently he believed that a drive by the American authorities has already started.

He said: "The FBI seems to treat Britain as the 51st state."

As the pressure mounts, however, a group of British parliamentarians is moving to change British law so that U.S. deserters and draft-dodgers can be granted political asylum. The move is being spearheaded by labor peer Lord Brockway, who recently led a deputation to Lord Windlesham, minister of state at the Home Office.

Lord Brockway told me: "We were concerned that two American deserters had been extradited within a fortnight. "Lord Windlesham denied that there had been any 'activation'. "But a week later it was announced in America that there was to be increased pressure in Britain."

Lord Brockway and his colleagues believe that Britain is not living up to its long-standing tradition of political asylum in the case of U.S. deserters.

They want the law amended so that servicemen who desert the U.S. Army because they object to the Vietnam war can claim political asylum.

They point out that refugees from behind the Iron Curtain are granted political asylum almost immediately, without question. Often the reason for escaping is economic, and not political.

British law regarding U.S. deserters and draft-dodgers falls into two categories.

Draft-resisters — who have not yet been called up — are treated as ordinary aliens. They find it difficult to get suitable jobs, but they are free to remain.

Deserters have no protection. They can be extradited at the request of American authorities. If picked up by British police, they have no right to appeal for habeas corpus. British courts cannot free them. Under the Visiting Forces Act of 1952, the Americans have absolute power to operate in Britain in matters like this.

The Home Office recently claimed that since 1952 the total number of U.S. deserters sent back from Britain was 10.

However, Member of Parliament Frank Allaun says that Lord Windlesham has admitted that many American deserters might have been sent back without Home Office knowledge.

However, others believe this may be a vast understatement.

Said Pincus: "Tens of thousands of Americans have deserted from the Army around the world. Many of them are unaccounted for.

"Britain is the other big English-speaking country in the world. The language problem does not exist. Who knows how many there may be here, living below the surface?"

Ironically, there is no bar to draft-dodgers or deserters entering Britain. U.S. servicemen are allowed to travel freely. Most of the deserters in Britain come direct from the U.S., Canada or West Germany.

According to Pincus, many servicemen are posted from West Germany to Vietnam. When they receive their postings, they go "over the hill" to Britain.

Once in Britain, they lead the life of a fugitive. They have to go underground. No social security. No identity. Few friends. Many scrape a living at manual jobs, gardening, washing dishes in hotels.

They must be careful about how they contact their parents and friends back home in the U.S.

One deserter, U.S. Marine Richard Lee Haygood, was traced recently after he wrote a letter home. He was shipped back to the U.S. to face desertion charges, leaving his pregnant English wife in Britain.

Pincus, who is 27, can't return to the U.S. without facing charges of draft-dodging and a possible five-year jail sentence on each count.

He came to Britain about six years ago to study psychology. In October 1967, he went with a group to the American Embassy and handed in his draft card. He was declared a delinquent by U.S. authorities and drafted twice. Failing to join up, he was put under indictment and a warrant was issued.

'SOARING 70S SYMBOL'

An Airport For Today's Traveler

By ORVAL JACKSON

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI)—Travelers of the jet age, along with residents of the Tampa Bay area, can look ahead to the day they receive a present —an airport designed specifically for the traveler of the 1970's.

The new $88 million ultra-modern airport terminal now under construction here is expected to be ready not long after the first of the year. It oirginally had been set for a Christmas unveiling but because of work stoppages the completion date slipped into 1971.

A sprawling five-building complex, it is looked upon as the first airport facility in the nation designed specifically for today's air traveler.

Gone will be the long and wearying walks from the parking lot to the terminal and then to the boarding area. Gone will be the helter-skelter dash from one side of the terminal from an arriving plane to the other side to catch a connecting flight leaving within minutes.

Designers of the complex decided after a survey of other airports in the nation to cut down on the walking required of passengers, and came up with a high-speed transfer system that results in a passenger facing a maximum walking distance from the airport garage to planeside of 700 feet.

This compares to 1,735 feet at Chicago O'Hare, 1,730 feet at Atlanta, 1,650 feet at Dallas Love Field and 1,485 at New York La Guardia.

The walking distance for persons on connecting flights will be even less. Vehicles operating much like a sideways-moving elevator, each capable of holding 125 standing passengers, will move between the main terminal and the four satellite buildings where the planes do their loading and unloading. The moving operation takes only 40 seconds. For connecting passengers, it'll be a short walk across the lobby of the main terminal from one transportation car to another which whisks them out to their connecting flight in another 40 seconds.

The passenger transfer system is capable of moving 840 persons one way in 10 minutes, according to George J. Bean, director of the Hillsborough County Aviation Authority which operates the airport.

"This is equivalent to the 10-minute movement of passengers from four fully loaded DC-8s or two jumbo jets, plus greeters and well-wishers," Bean said.

"If the passenger can limit his total walk to hundreds, instead of thousands, of feet, the speed with which he can be processed in or out of a terminal complex is increased and the over-all convenience of air travel is restored to him."

To add to the convenience of travelers, the entire complex is color-coded from the highway signs leading in, all through the main six-story terminal, and on to the air-side buildings.

Signs at the entrance of the airport will tell arrivals which colors to follow to a given airline; tickets already purchased at downtown offices will be color-coded to the particular airline.

Thus, on arriving at the terminal, the passenger coming by car can drop off his baggage at the lower level, and while it is being processed on through to the plane, he can drive up the ramp to one of the three top parking decks where he leaves his auto. A few steps to an elevator and the passenger is at second floor operational center containing ticket slaes and airline offices. When he's ready for boarding, the passenger merely gets aboard the proper transfer car and heads for the air-side satellite.

The three parking decks atop the main terminal can handle about 2,000 cars and the building is designed for expansion by an additional three decks. In addition, there will be outside parking some distance away for between 2,000 and 3,000 cars for persons who wish to have long-term parking or who may desire the lower parking rate.

For persons driving or picking up passengers, ease is the by-word. The terminal features 2,000 feet of curb-side parking at the two lower levels to facilitate loading and unloading. Cabs, buses and limousines will be parked in special areas away from the curb-sides, leaving curbs open to public use.

The airport is being constructed with an eye to the future, and allowing for expansion as needed. "This is being built from the ground up to handle jumbo jets now in use or any that are now under consideration," Bean said.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

"France is a widow," French President Georges Pompidou told his people this week. Charles de Gaulle, the World War II leader of the Free French and the former president, had died at the age of 79.

De Gaulle was buried quietly, privately in the village of Colombey Les Deux Eglises. The general had directed that officials and foreign heads of state not attend the funeral service. His fellow villagers and tens of thousands of pilgrims laid him to rest in a humble ceremony without eulogy while visiting dignitaries, including President Nixon, attended a high requiem mass in the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris.

Nixon had said he would discuss no business with other leaders on his visit to Paris and, aside from an 11-minute informal talk with soviet President Nikolai Podgorny, he did not. He had a 90-minute discussion with David K. E. Bruce, the chief U.S. negotitaor at the Paris talks.

The U.N. General Assembly this week, as it does every year, took up debate on the admission of Communist China. For a change, the United States did not oppose the move outright, but argued that Nationalist China should not be kicked out. Both Nationalist and Red China reject the concept of two Chinas.

General Motors and the United Auto Workers reached agreement on a contract that would end the UAW's strike. The UAW Council approved it on a 9-1 vote and strikers are expected to approve it in the coming week. It provides wage increases and fringe benefits of 30 per cent over three years.

A presidential mediation board recommended a 37 per cent hike for railroad workers. But the leader of one union asked for 50 per cent and threatened a strike against freight shipments in December.

Two U.S. generals —Maj. Gen. Edward C. D. Scherrer and Brig. Gen. Claude M. McQuarrie Jr. —and a Turkish colonel were released by Russia and returned to Turkey. They had been detained after their plane landed on the Soviet side of the border. U.S. Maj. James P. Russell, the fourth man held, flew the plane back later.

Poland and West Germany made progress toward a treaty establishing normal relations. Premier osef Cyrankiewicz of Poland said he would welcome German Chancellor Willy Brandt to his nation when the pact is completed.

Raffaele Minichiello, the U.S. Marine corporal who last year hijacked a Trans World Airlines plane from California to Italy, was sentenced in Rome to seven and one-half years imprisonment. That would be reduced because of time he already has spent in custody and a recent amnesty.

The trial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr. — charged with murder in the alleged massacre at My Lai, South Vietnam — began at Fort Benning, Ga., with selection of a military jury.

Conflict Looming Over Tidelands

The Town of Corte Madera and Bay Area colleges may find themselves in conflict by 1972 over the future of Corte Madera's tidelands.

A survey published by a state advisory body lists 196 acres of the tidelands south of Corte Madera Creek as a desirable site for academic research. Town officials have urged the area as the site of a multimillion-dollar ferryboat and bus terminal for Marin commuters.

The Corte Madera tidelands known as the "Heerdt Marsh" and at least seven other Marin County shoreline areas are listed in "Marine Resources for Higher Education," the survey publised by the state's Coordinating Council for Higher Education.

The council submitted the report yesterday to the state's Interagency Council on Ocean Resources, which has the task of preparing by 1972 a 10-year master plan for coordinated use or preservation of all California ocean resources.

The Coordinating Council for Higher Education surveyed College of Marin, Sonoma State College, San Francisco State College and every other California college or university interested in research along the state's shoreline. It received recommendations that 47 sites throughout the state be preserved for higher education use, under "highest priority."

Sonoma State College also said it wanted to see the Petaluma River tidelands at San Antionio Creek left undistrubed for research work.

Andreas B. Rechnitzer, who directed the survey, pointed out that the report does not ask public ownership of all the priority tidelands. Rather, it urges that higher education institutions continue to have access to the tidelands listed, and that the Shoreline areas be preserved against destruction.

ONE OF 12

The Marin resources servey was only one 12 "inputs" delivered to drafters of the Comprehensive Ocean Area Plan. Other reports came from state health, highways, air pollution, water quality, recreation, fish and game, and environmental quality agencies.

Jon S. Golehouse, associate professor of geology at San Francisco State, inspected the Corte Madera tidelands for the survey. He said the land, listed as owned by Frank M. Burke has also been discussed as the site for a municipal dump and golf course. The proposal is now quiescent, but Corte Madera and Larkspur are debating over which city should be the site of a Golden Gate Bridge District ferry terminal.

LAND VALUES

Golehouse pinpointed 96 acres of marsh — which he said was valued at $2,000 per acre — and 100 acres of mudflat — valued at $1,000 per acre — as being of scientific interest. But the site was given no specific priority in the state survey.

The San Francisco State teacher urged that the waterfront be kept as a marin reserve either under state ownership or "academic institution custodianship."

Net Depot Land Put On Market

A parcel of land which Marin County turned down for an addition to Tiburon Uplands Natural Preserve has been offered for sale on the open market.

Sealed bids will be received at 49 Fourth Street, San Francisco, by the General Services Administration, a federal agency, until 11 a.m. on Dec. 17, when the parcel will be sold to the highest bidder.

The plot, a 5.3-acre chunk of the Old Tiburon Net Depot, lies on the south or inland side of Paradise Drive above the liburon Oceanographic Center.

The land was declared surplus in 1967 and turned over to the GSA for disposal. It was offered to the state first but turned down, a GSA spokesman said.

It then was offered to Marin County; and $15,000 was budgeted for its acquisition in fiscal 1969-70. But the fiscal year ended before appraisals were completed, and on July 7 the board of supervisors refused to reappropriate the sum, saying the item was of "low priority."

Youth Is Bound Over On Airport Arson, Burglary

William Phillip Nance, 20, of Santa Rosa, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on charges of burglary and arson stemming from the $250,000 fire Oct. 12 at Gnoss Field. He is to be arraigned Tuesday.

Officers said that Nance and three other youths apparently went to the airport to steal gasoline. Upon discovering they had to go inside a building to release a lock on a gas pump, they reportedly stole a tape recorder and a radio and then allegedly set fire to the building to cover fingerprints.

The other youths are still being held in Sonoma County on other charges.

Fried Chicken Facility Permit Will Be Asked

Kentucky Fried Chicken may take over C's Drive-In at 510 Miller Avenue in Mill Valley.

Keith Holmes of Los Altos, representing Kentucky Fried Chicken, will ask for a use permit from the Marin County zoning administrator Monday at 2 p.m. in the Civic Center.

Holmes plans to expand the existing drive-in and convert it into a fried chicken take-out facility.

That afternoon, a use permit will be requested for a pet clinic for the next door property at 524 Miller Avenue. The building is now used as a dog grooming salon. Veterinarian O. B. McRory of Mill Valley plans to convert the building into a pet clinic.

Proposed Zoning, Sign Laws On Agenda

The Fairfax Planning Commission will report on its progress on proposed zoning and sign ordinances at a meeting of the Fairfax City Council at 8 p.m. Monday.

The council will also consider a request from the Fairfax Lion's Club to erect a bus passenger shelter at Manor Road and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. The council put over consideration of the request from last Monday until it could determine whether the proposed site of the shelter was on city or privately owned property.

Contract For Dorm Could Be Delayed

Awarding of contract for a new 20-bed girls dormitory at Marin Juvenile Hall may have to wait, unless the county can come up with funds by freezing other spending, County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell declared yesterday.

Fostmeier Construction Co. of Rohnert Park, lowest of nine bidders, offered to build the new dormitory for $316,688. The nine bids will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday for awarding of contract.

"Unfortunately, there are insufficient funds in the capital improvement fund," said Mitchell.

He explained that money allocated for the dormitory was used to buy McNears Beach near Peacock Gap. About $240,000 in federal aid will be coming for the McNear purchase, but this reimbursement is not expected until next year.

Until this reimbursement arrives, Mitchell said he cannot certify that funds are available to pay for the dormitory. "This certification must be backed up in order to avoid a personal liability on my part," said Mitchell.

He will recommend to the supervisors that they either (1) delay awarding the dormitory project or (2) make a temporary transfer from other capital improvement spending such as for construction and improvement at McNears Beach and Stafford Lake, landscaping and utilities at Juvenile Hall, medical care payments and other expenditures.

The Hippie Shakes Up Marriages

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI)—When a hippie was elected justice of the peace in Lawrence, Kan., the state attorney general promptly ruled that the office of justice of the peace had been abolished by an act of the legislature in 1968. Therefore the hippie's election is void.

But so, it would seem, are the hundreds of marriages performed by Kansas justices of the peace in the last two years.

To clarify that situation Attorney General Ken Frizzell came forth with another ruling Friday.

"Couples involved in marriages performed by defrocked justices of the peace are married under Kansas common law at the very least," Frizzell's office said. "They are the same as if a minister married them. In the eyes of the law, they are married.

"If they want to separate, they're going to have to get a divorce just like anybody else."

All the trouble started Nov. 3 when voters elected Phillip C. Hill, a bearded, long-haired Yippie leader who professes to make his living as a dope dealer. Although he was on the ballot as a Democrat, neither Democratic party officials nor most of the 6,000 persons who voted for Hill knew who he was.

Once the news was out Frizzell vowed to "pull the plug" on him, and the state Democratic chairman perdicted he would spend the shortest term of office in Kansas history.

When Frizzell nullified Hill's post, he also nullified those of other J.P.s around the state.

San Rafael Romps To 42-8 Victory

Crushes Drake In Finale

By DAVID EINSTEIN

The San Rafael High School Bulldogs ended the 1970 season last night in the same rampaging fashion with which they began it two months ago. They loosed a savage ground attack on the Drake Pirates and rolled to a 42-8 victory before 2,500 fans at San Rafael High School.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser and halfback Scott Duncan han for a pair of touchdowns apiece as coach Bob Muster's crew claimed sole possession of second place in the final Marin County Athletic League standings. The victory was their fifth against a single loss in league play, their seventh overall.

MOST POINTS

In dropping the Pirates to fourth place with a 2-4 record, San Rafael rolled up the most points for any MCAL team this year, eclipsing the mark they set in a 40-0 win over Washington on the opening day of the season.

Moving undeniably on the ground, the Bulldogs racked up a 21-0 halftime lead. They poured it on in the third period, capitalized on two fumble recoveries and an interception to score their final three touchdowns.

271 YARDS

With Gansloser and senior Ray Griffin directing the attack in alternate quarters, San Rafael rolled up 271 yards on the ground, using nine different ball carriers. Duncan and fullback Mark Farrar led the way with 78 and 69 yards respectively, and each punched across for a touchdown in the first quarter.

Gansloser scored the Bulldogs' fourth and sixth touchdowns on runs of eight and 34 yards as the Pirates fell apart in the third period. Sandwiched in between the junior signal caller's romps was Duncan's second touchdown, a six yard burst that gave him 78 points for the season — by far the league title.

Griffin hit Duke Besse with a six yard pass in the second quarter for San Rafael's other touchdown. And John Morehouse, who has missed only one extra point all year, was perfect six times.

Drake, which could collect only 37 yards on the ground, avoided becoming the Bulldogs' fifth shutout victim of 1970 in the final minute of play, when reserve quarterback Tom MacAusland flipped a screen pass to Steve Hale, who rambled 58 yards to score.

WARRIORS WIN

Mullins Key To Victory

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors are trying not to let the Los Angeles Lakers run off and hide in the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division.

On a Friday night in which the Lakers ran their record to 9-4, the Warriors used Jeff Mullins' three-point play with 1:36 remaining to move in front for good in a 107-102 win over the San Diego Rockets.

Mullins, whose three-point play put his team in front 101-99, led the Warriors' attack with 24 points while Joe Ellis had 23 and Nate Thurmond 22.

Stu Lantz tallied 23 points and Elvin Hayes 20 for the Rockets.

Selke Says Finley Forced Him Out

OAKLAND (UPI) — Frank Selke claimed Friday he was eased out of the position of general manager of the California Golden Seals by new owner Charles O. Finley.

Selke said Finley refused to honor the final year of a four-year contract he (Selke) signed in 1967 with the hockey team's original owners. Instead, Selke said the Chicago insurance magnate handed him a new, one-year contract for 1970-71.

"He has tendered me a one-year contract at substantially fewer dollars than my present contract calls for," said Selke.

"The document which he has tendered to me is not acceptable. I have neither resigned nor quit. I am simply refusing to accept less than that to which I am entitled."

Selke said Finley had placed him in a position "which makes it impossible to continue with the Seals."

However, Selke wished the Seals good fortune in the months ahead, stating he was "proud . . . and gratified" to have been part of the organization which put together the present team.

"With very little to work with, except our wits and dedicated hockey people, we have given the Seals an exciting team that is capable of really going places this season," said Selke, "plus a reserve of excellent young players that should make the Seals a contending team for years to come.

"It isn't easy to turn my back on a situation which has all the ear marks of success in the days and years ahead."

Sabres Put An End To Seal Win Streak

Waived a couple of weeks ago and claimed by the expansion Buffalo Sabres, Andrea stung his former mates with his first goal of the season Friday night to snap a 2-2 deadlock and instigate a 4-2 whipping of the Seals.

The Sabres' win, only their third this year, ended a seven-game losing skid and abruptly halted a four-game California win string at a critical time for the Oaklanders.

Faced with three successive games in three separate cities, the Seals skate against Pittsburgh tonight after already having blown what would have appeared to be the easiest test of their seven-game trip.

In an ice hockey oddity, the Golden Seals outshot Buffalo by 14 shots but still managed to lose.

Wingers Gary Jarett and Gary Croteau each gained his fifth goal of the season in the second period as the Seals erased a 1-0 Bufaflo advantage. But Skip Krake's tally later in the middle period created the 2-2 tie which was broken by Andrea.

The Seals, displaying the strong forechecking which gave them homestead victories over Buffalo New York, Toronto and Montreal, kept the puck in their offensive zone for 36 shots on Buffalo goaltender Roger Crozier. Smith had to handle only 22 shots but 10 came in the Sabres' strong third period.

The heat will be on the Seals following tonight's contest, as the Oakland skaters must contend Sunday with the rough Boston Bruins, top steam in the NHL East.

Tar Runners Wind Up In Second

Collge of Marin's cross country team completed its dual meet season yesterday with a 25-30 victory over DeAnza J.C. of Cupertino yesterday in Kentfield.

Don Makela won the meet with a time of 23:17 over Marin's 3.8-mile course. Marin finished the Camino Norte Conference with a 5-1 mark, second to undefeated West Valley J.C. of Campbell.

Other Marin point winners, all with their best performances of the year, were Seamus O'Reilly, fourth; Jay Neuhaus, fifth; Steve Silvey, seventh, and Tom Weindel, eighth.

Next meet for the Tars will be the Northern California championships next Friday in Santa Maria.

North Is Favored In Warner Battle

Marin County's annual Pop Warner football League North-South all-star game will be played tomorrow at Novato High School, beginning at 1 p.m.

The North, including players from co-champions Novato and Terra Linda, and runnerup San Rafael, will be overwhelming favorites. Players from Tamalpais, Redwood and Drake comprise the South.

Bronc Ace Waits For The Raiders

DENVER (UPI) — Floyd Little loves to run against those pro football teams from the San Francisco Bay area.

The speedy running back of the Denver Broncos gets his final 1970 crack at a Bay Area team Sunday when the Oakland Raiders visit Mile High Stadium.

Little, who leads the American Football Conference with 632 yards rushing, got off an 80-yard touchdown burst against the 49ers in a losing cause Oct. 25. On Oct. 11, he dashed 54 yards off tackle for a TD against the Raiders in a 35-23 Denver loss.

Floyd needs only 97 yards to equal his previous high of 729 yards, set last year. The four-year veteran also needs just over 150 yards to hit the 2,500 mark for his career.

"This is certainly the biggest challenge of the season for us," said Broncos coach Lou Saban. "Oakland has the most explosive offense in football right now and they're really rolling."

The game will feature three of the top four running backs in the AFC. In addition to Little, Oakland's Hewritt Dixon and Charlie Smith rank second and fourth, respectively, and need only two yards to top the combined total of 1,000 yards this season.

Daryle Lamonica has been plagued all week with a bruised left shoulder, suffered last Sunday in a 23-20 win over Cleveland. But Raiders coach John Madden left no doubt in anyone's mind when he said: "Lamonica will start at quarterback."

Lamomnica will be facing one of the fiercest rushes in pro football in Rich Jackson, Dave Costa, Pete Duranko and Paul Smith. The Bronco front four has dumped opposing quarterbacks 32 times for a loss of 290 yards.

This is a crucial game in the Western Division of the AFC, with Oakland 4-2-2 holding a half-game edge over Kansas City 4-3-1 and one game over Denver 4-4 and San Diego 3-2-2.

Ex-Player To Appear In NFL Investigation

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Former Cleveland Browns defensive back Bernie Parrish said Saturday he had been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury here which will investigate the National Football League, beginning Monday.

Parrish was waived out of the NFL several years ago and ended his career with the Houston Oilers of the American Football League.

Only three of the 26 teams in the NFL had not yet received subpoenas to appear before the grand jury which reportedly will investigate possible anti-trust violations.

The teams that say they have not yet been subpoenaed are the Houston Oilers and Miami Dolphins and the Oakland Raiders.

There have been published reports that the Raiders would appear before the panel but the Oakland team has refused to confirm or deny them.

A Justice Department Spokesman said, however, all 26 teams will be subpoenaed.

Parrish, now employed by the Teamsters Union in St. Louis, said he did not know what the investigation was all about.

"I have been served with a sbupoena," said Parrish. "I will appear before the federal grand jury Wednesday and will have a statement after I testify, if it is permitted."

No Illusions About Tour For Baxter

SUNOL, Calif. (UPI)—Rex Baxter, the good looking Texan who found a home in Cleveland, has no illusions about tournament golf.

When he quit the pro tour two years ago after eight futile years of trying to make a living, he meant it.

Today, with two rounds left in the $50,000 PGA Club Professionals championship, he is the leader by three strokes over another hard-working pro, Francisco Lopez, who went the same route and came up with a handful of dust.

"No, even if I win here I won't go back on tour," Baxter said Friday after shooting a sparkling four-under-par 68 at the Sunol Valley's Cypress course for a two-round total of five under 139.

"All that's behind me now," Baxter continued. "I have a good job in Cleveland (Beechmont Country Club). I think the people there like me and most of all for my family's sake, I like the regular hours, although it's been quite an adjustment."

In the PGA club championship, the 34-year-old Baxter has a chance to win $8,000.

Lopez, five years older than Baxter and not half as secure jobwise, shot an opening round 68 but skied to a two over 74 Friday, mostly because he had to play in the wind and the final two holes under the lights on the tougher Palm course.

While Lopez was having only minimal trouble, Dick Whetzel, head pro at the posh Prince Georges Country Club in Landover, Md., nearly shot himself out of the tourney with a second-round 79. He and Lopez had opening-round 68s.

49ers' Nolan Hopes For Early Offense

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers hopes to come up with a first-half offense against Houston on Sunday to complement his second-half defense.

In the past three games, San Francisco has trailed Denver, 14-6, and Chicago, 13-10, at intermission, while deadlocking Green Bay, 10-10, before pulling them all out in the second half. Meanwhile, the Prospectors' defense has not yielded a second-half touchdown in those three gamaes.

"We've had slow starts for the past three games in the first half and that is a situation we must take care of as quickly as possible" said Nolan.

The 49ers (6-1-1) have been installed as 10 1-2 point favorites to hand the Oilers their sixth loss against two wins and a tie. San Francisco is already off to its fastest start in its 25-year history and Nolan doesn't want to lose any momentum against the Oilers, whose top two backs-Hoyle Granger and Woody Campbell-are sidelined with injuries.

For the first time in weeks, the 49ers are healthy with the exception of defensive end Stan Hindman. But he is nearly fully recovered from a leg injury and could take a turn on the defensive line shuttles.

When quarterback John Brodie, having his best season of 14 in the pros, completes his first pass against Houston, it will be No. 2,001. He tops the National Conference passers with nearly a 60 per cent completion percentage.

The amazing thing about Brodie, 34, is that he has gone without an interception in seven games this season.

Houston's offense is built around quarterback Charley Johnson, who has a trio of nifty receivers in Jerry Levias, Charley Joiner and Alvin Reed. Levias also is a top return man.

Redwood Frosh Win Grid Title

Redwood High School's freshman football team blanked Marin Catholic High School's frosh 26-0 yesterday to finish the Marin County Athletic League season with an undefeated record and a championship.

Scoring touchdowns in yesterday's game at Redwood High in Larkspur were Bill Edralin twice and Jeff Vogel and Mark Paige. Redwood's championship record was 5-0.

Instant Replay Needed For Fans In Stands

Television and instant replay give armchair sports enthusiasts an advantage over fans in the grandstands. It isn't just the advantage of a comfortable home seat. The armchair fan has the advantage of the second look at close calls on the instant replay.

So why shouldn't fans who pay their way into the grandstands also be given the advantage of the instant replay? If they screamed loud enough for equal time, as the politicians do, they might get instant replays right at the scene of action.

To be sure, instant replay screens in the grandstands or a big multi-sided scree that could be seen by all the customers would present lighting and installation problems. But such problems are not insurmountable. Certainly, they are not impossible to solve in a practical manner.

Instant replay at the scene of action isn't a novel idea. Paul Haney first suggested it. Haney now is vice president in charge of public relations for the Astrodome. He used to be the "Voice of Apollo" for the manned spacecraft center in Houston.

"You have to be superman with a pair of binoculars to see a face in a ootball game or one in a baseball ceremony at home plate," said Haney. "And what about that catch of a pass along the sidelines? Wsa the receiver in bounds with both feet? Or what about that close play at first base? Did the throw really beat the runner?

"Instant replay would immediately give fans in the stands a second look. It wouldn't be in competition with baseball umpires or football officials. Theirs are judgment calls and all fans understand that. But the yearning of fans at the scene of action for an occasional second look is quite understandable."

Good officials and umpires would probably welcome instant replay at the scene of action. They are not infallible but only in isolated instances are their judgment calls seemingly in conflict with instant replays. And in those cases it could be the camera angle that creates the confusion.

As for the practical problems of installing workable instant replay screens on the scene of action, Haney has this to say:

"The major obstacle is the amount of light required. But I remember the obstacle of putting a six-pound television camera on the moon."

Compared with putting a camera on the moon, putting instant replay in parks should be child's play for the commissioners of baseball and football. Surely, Bowie Kuhn and Pete Rozelle realize that.

Australians Running Away In World Golf

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—Australians David Graham and Bruce Devlin held a commanding 10-stroke lead today going into the third round of the World Cup Golf Tournament. But Devlin wasn't satisfied.

"It's not good enough," he said Friday after he added a 69 to an opening 66 to go with Graham's 65-67 giving the pair from down under a record 21-under par for the halfway mark.

10 STROKES

The Australians led the Argentine team of Roberto De Vicenzo-Vicente Fernandez by 10 strokes, Denmark's Henrik Lund-Herluf Hansen by 15 strokes and Dave Stockton-Lee Trevino of the U.S. by 16 strokes.

And Graham was only one stroke behind De Vicenzo's 64-67—131 lead in the individual standings as the two Aussies and the 47-year-old Argentine continued to master the 6,800-yard, par-72 jockey club course.

A total of more than 15,000 Argentines swarmed over the course on Friday to cheer hometown hero De Vincenzo on. And he responded with a birdie three on the short, 354-yard 18th hole to their delight. It allowed him to keep the lead going into the third round.

CROWD

"It's the biggest crowd I've ever seen at a South American tournament," said De Vicenzo, who lose the Masters Tournament in a playoff with Bob Goalby in 1968 after signing an incorrect scorecard at the end of regulation play.

The 21-under-par total by the Australians broke the 36-hole record of 14-underpar set by Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus when they won the World Cup in Hawaii in 1964. The U.S. has won the cup in eight of the last 10 years but appeared to have little chance for a repeat after a pair of 73s by Trevino and Stockton on Friday.

"If I told you what I thought, I don't think you would be able to print it," Trevino said at the end of the second round.

HUDDLE

Graham, who failed to make the U.S. professional tour in a recent test tournament in the United States, also joked: "on one of the last holes, I told Bruce: 'if you don't make a four on this one, I'll chop you in the throat'.

"He made his four."

The two Australians played superb golf and had only four bogeys in 72 holes between then in the first two rounds.

NFL ROUNDUP

Browns-Bengals Natural Rivalry

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It certainly didn't take the Cleveland Browns and the Cincinnati Bengals very long to become "natural rivals."

When owner Art Modell shifted his team into the AFC, he insisted that the Browns be in the same division with the Bengals and the Pittsburgh Steelers.

That was a maneuver that has saved the Browns' whole season. It means that the Browns are in a division where they are able to be tied for first place with only a 4-4 record and the Bengals-Browns rivalry has quickly become one of the keenest in football.

Since the Browns and Bengals are both in Ohio, it would be a "natural" rivalry under any circumstances. But since the man who now runs the Bengals — Paul Brown — is the same man who gave the Browns their name, the rivalry has an added dimension.

Brown has left little doubt that beating the Browns is one of his top goals. The Bengals did it in an exhibition game this year by a 31-24 margin but Cleveland came back to win the first regular game by a 30-27 score. The game was played in Cleveland and the Browns' fans couldn't help noticing that Paul Brown avoided the customary postgame congratulatory handshake with Cleveland coach Blanton Collier.

This was especially unusual since Collier was a member of Brown's first staff back in 1946.

But Brown, who feels he was treated unfairly by Cleveland when the Browns fired him and gave Collier the coaching job, still has strong feelings about the Browns.

Cincinnati only has a 2-6 record this year and isn't in the race but the Bengals could make their season by upsetting the Browns. Cleveland, which is now tied with Pittsburgh—which meets Kansas City—for first place, needs a victory after being beaten by George Blanda's heroics last week.

Cleveland has lost two straight games and Collier is switching to rookie Mike Phipps in place of Bill Nelsen at quarterback. The Browns got Phipps when they traded Paul Warfield to Miami for the Dolphins' No. 1 draft choice, which was Phipps. They figured Phipps was insurance against Nelsen's bad knees but he's getting a starting assignment sooner than he expected.

St. Louis is at Dallas in the Monday night TV game in a battle for first place in the NFC Eastern Division.

Baltimore, which has a three-game lead in the AFC East, is a heavy favorite over Buffalo this week and is about the only team which is assured of one of the eight playoff spots.

But Minnesota can just about wrap up a spot this week when it meets Detroit for the second time in three weeks. The Vikings hold a two-game lead over the Lions in the NFC Central and a victory in this game would give them a three-game lead over the Lions.

Detroit was shocked last week by Tom Dempsey's record 63-yard field goal as the gun sounded and is now in a position of having to win this one to stay in the race.

NBA HIGHLIGHTS

Cavaliers Back To Hard Times

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Cleveland Cavaliers are back in stride again.

The Cavaliers, who tied a National Basketball Association record by losing their first 15 games, broke out of it Thursday night with their first victory over Portland. But it was back to hard times Friday night when the Seattle Super Sonics beat Cleveland 111-91, the Cavaliers' 16th loss in 17 games.

Cleveland is on course to break the NBA mark for fewest victories in an 82-game schedule. That was set in 1967-68 when the San Diego Rockets won only 15 games while dropping 67.

Dick Snyder had 26 points and player-coach Denny Wilkens had 24 as the Sonics raced off to an easy victory. McCoy McLemore led the Cavaliers with 18 points.

In other NBA action Friday night, Los Angeles downed Detroit, 122-109, Atlanta edged Boston, 116-114, San Francisco beat San Diego, 107-102, Phoenix defeated Cincinnati, 115-109, Philadelphia overcame Buffalo, 119-111 and New York stopped Chicago, 106-98.

Jerry West and Gail Goodrich scored 28 points each to lead the Lakers over Detroit. The two guards combined for 25 of the Lakers' first 26 points in the third period as Los Angeles overcame a nine-point Piston lead. Dave Bing led Detroit scorers with 20 points.

Walt Bellamy scored on a halfcourt pass from Bill Bridges with one second remaining in the game to give the Hawks their victory over Boston. Bellamy sank a free throw to tie the game and Jim Davis stole the ball from the Celtics to set the stage for the winning basket. Lou Hudson led the Hawks with 35 points while rookie Dave Cowens' 29 paced the Celtics.

Neal Walk sparked a third-quarter rally that lifted Phoenix oevr the Royals. Walk scored nine of his 19 points and hauled in seven of his 15 rebounds during that period to rally the Suns from a 15-point deficit. Clem Haskins and Connie Hawkins each had 26 points for the Suns while rookie Sam Lacey led Cincinnati with 20.

Jim Washington scored 12 of his 18 points in the last period to rally Philadelphia past Buffalo. Billy Cunningham, Hal Greer and Bailey Howell each had 20 points for the 76ers while Bob Kauffman led the Braves with 28.

Dave DeBusschere scored 24 points and Walt Frazier and Dick Barnett had 18 each as New York downed Chicago. Bob Love paced the Bulls' attack with 20 points.

McDaniel equaled the Yankee record for saves with 29 in 1970 and had a 2.01 earned run average while winning nine games. He was a teammate of Hubbs with the Chicago Cubs in 1963. Later he played for the San Francisco Giants before being traded away.

The award is based on contributions both on and off the field to baseball. Hubbs was killed in a plane crash while still playing for the Cubs.

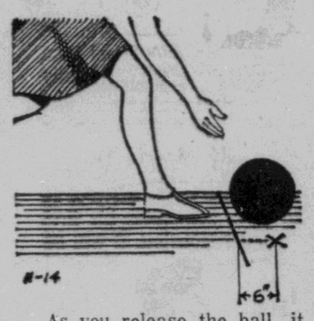
BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



As you release the ball, it should land about six inches beyond the line. Years of bowling have convinced me that this is just about the right distance. Pitch it farther and you take spin off the ball. Not pitching it out at all or "dropping" the ball, leads to poor control.

Sonomans Host USF

Sonoma State College Cossacks football team will host the winless University of San Francisco Dons tonight at 8 o'clock at Santa Rosa's Bailey Field.

It will be Sonoma State's first ever "Community Appreciation Night," with Sonoma State fans admitted free when accompanied by a paid ticket buyer.

Sonoma State's record is 3 wins, 3 losses and one tie, compared to second year coach Vince Tringali and the USF record of 0-8.

The Dons of USF have a big offensive line, some good backs, but are hurting on defense.

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentine heavyweight Oscar "Ringo" Bonavena, who is slated to meet Cassius Clay next Dec. 7 in New York, was suspended for 90 days by the local municipal boxing commission Friday for "refusing to get a haircut."

The suspension, which applies locally for the time being, will be sent to the Argentine Boxing Commission which has ties with International Boxing Commissions.

It was not immediately known if the suspension would possibly affect the fight with Clay.

The brief statement said the 28-year-old Bonavena had been suspended for his repeated refusal to have his hair cut and for presenting himself in professional bouts counter to regulations."

Houston Coach Drops Players For Curfew

HOUSTON (UPI) — Head Coach Bill Yeoman of the University of Houston Friday night dismissed three football players from the varsity squad for missing an 11 p.m. bed check Thursday night.

Wiebe Leading Grand American Drag Racing

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — John Wiebe blasted down the quarter mile in his double A fuel dragster in 6.98 seconds Friday to lead the qualifying for the Grand American Series of Professional Drag Racing finale.

The Newton, Kan., driver, holder of a slim lead for the $20,000 top prize in fuel dragster ranks, had a speed of 204.83 miles per hour.

In fuel funny cars, Don Prudhomme, Granada Hills, Calif., set a low qualifying time of 7.21 seconds in a plymouth barracuda. The top speed in the same division, 200.01 miles per hour, was established by Dick Harrel, Kansas City, Mo., in a Camaro.

KARL STEIN AT MONTANA

A Record Setting Season

Stein is an art major who also makes pass intercepting and punt returning an art in itself.

Stein is the senior free safety on the University of Montana football team and in his two-year career has pilfered 19 passes and returned the interceptions for 398 yards.

The senior from San Anselmo set a Big Sky pass interception record in 1969 with 11, and this season he set a conference interception return record with 207 yards. Both are school records.

Stein also has tied a single game school conference mark for a number of interceptions. He and four others have picked off three passes apiece. Stein did it against Northern Arizona in 1969 and Northern Illinois in 1970.

Not only is the 6-foot and 195-pound senior a threat in the defensive secondary, but as a kickoff and punt return artist also.

Stein has tied a conference and school record for the most punts returned in a single game with seven and has set a season punt return mark with 38. The old record was 27 set by Montana's Ron Bain in 1968.

Stein also holds the most yards returns from punts with 398 yards. The old conference mark was 388 yards set by Montana State's Gary Popiel in 1967.

The free safety also holds another mark for the most "one tackle away from a touchdown" runs. In his two years and 19 pass interceptions, 66 punt returns and 28 kickoff returns, Stein on several occasions has been one tackle away from a return for a touchdown.

"One of these days Karl is going to break one," Grizzly coach Jack Swarthout said. "He's been so close on so many occasions that I think he'll pop one pretty quick."

Swarthout said Stein has the natural instinct to go to the ball and is the Grizzlies most sure-handed receiver. "He could play split end for us," Swarthout said.

University of Montana's Karl Stein was honorable mention All-American on the Kodak and Associated Press teams. He was also first team All-Big Sky and All-District Six (NCAA).

Swarthout believes Stein will top those honors this season as a senior. "He is a tremendous individual that works for the team." Stein and the other players on the undefeated Grizzly team play as a team, and Swarthout said he is proud of them.

"You know guys like Stein could go out for themselves, but they don't. They work as a unit and win as a team," Swarthout said.

Stein was one of eight ineligible players (because of transfers) on the 1969 Camellia Bowl team. This season when the Grizzlies go to the camellia bowl Stein will be in action. Tht game, Dec. 12 in Sacramento, will be against North Dakota State.

Stein is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward V. Stein of 7 Raven Road, San Anselmo.

JUST LUCKY

West opened the king of hearts and then shifted to the nine of clubs. South won with the king of clubs, led a diamond to dummy's queen, and returned a spade to try a finesse with the jack of spades.

West won with the ace of spades, of course, but South eventually had to give up two more trump tricks to East. Down one.

South could have made the contract if he had played a low spade from his hand instead of the jack. Is this the right play, or is it just lucky?

ACE IS LOCATED

The ace of spades is surely located in the West hand for West's vulnerable opening bid. If the ace is a singleton, South surely gains by leading a low spade from his hand instead of getting to dumy to try a finesse with the jack.

What if West started with two spades? If West started with A-Q of spades, he is sure to get two tricks. If West started with A-10, A-9, or A-8, West will get his ace, and East will get the queen even if declarer begins by finessing with the jack. They will get two trump tricks likewise if South leads a low spade first and later tries a finesse with the jack.

TRUMP TRICKS

What if West started with three spades? West is sure to get three tricks if he has A-Q and one other spade. If West has three spades to the A-10 or A-9, the defenders will get two trump tricks whether South takes an immediate finesse with the jack of spades or whether he first leads a low spade and next finesses with the jack.

In short, South never loses by leading a low spade. He gains when West has the singleton ace: and South avoids a guess when West has the doubleton A-Q.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ K 7 6 5 3
♥ 7
♦ K 9 8 4
♣ K 5.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not quite worth an opening bid. If the spades were headed by A-J instead of by K-J, the hand would be worth an opening bid of one spade.

Lutheran Branch Elects President

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (LC) — A top-ranking young theologian has been chosen as president of the American Lutheran Church.

At the ALC's fifth biennial convention, Dr. Kent S. Knutson, 46-year-old president of Wartburg Theological Seminary at Dubuque, Iowa, was named on the fourth and final ballot of an election marked by open political campaigning unprecedented in the annals of American Protestantism.

Only a simple majority was required as he defeated Dr. David W. Preus, the last survivor of nine other candidates for the office, by a decisive vote of 566-to-411.

Dr. Knutson was the youngest of the 10 candidates nominated by the 18 districts of the ALC, his rivals ranging up to 64 years of age.

Elected to a six-year term, he will lead a church that, with 2.5 million members is the third largest Lutheran body and ninth largest Protestant denomination in the United States.

Established in 1960 by a merger of three bodies, the ALC was joined in 1963 by a fourth church. The union brought together the old American Lutheran Church (German), the Evangelical Lutheran Church (Norwegian), the United Evangelical Lutheran Church (Danish) and, later, the Lutheran Free Church (Norwegian).

Dr. Knutson was born in Goldfield, Iowa, on Aug. 7, 1924. After graduating from Iowa State University at Ames with a bachelor of science degree in 1947, he worked for a brief period as a chemical engineer.

In 1949 he went to Norway for a year's study at the University of Oslo, then entered Luther Seminary at St. Paul, Minn., and received his divinity degree in 1951. He has also attended the University of Minnesota, the University of Heidelberg in Germany, and Columbia University in New York City. He received a doctorate in philosophy from Union Theological Seminary in New York City in 1961.

Dr. Knutson served as pastor of Our Saviour Lutheran church in Staten Island, N.Y., from 1954 to 1958, then joined the faculty of Luther Seminary in St. Paul as assistant and later associate professor of systematic theology. He was also director of graduate studies from 1960 to 1969. He came to his present post as president of Wartburg Seminary in 1969.

Dr. Knutson is chairman of the standing committee of the Division of Theological Studies of the Lutheran Council in the USA and a participant in the current theological conversations between Lutherans and Roman Catholics in this country and between Lutherans and Anglicans abroad.

"Wer'e having the worst recession in 25 years, and I don't see any recovery in sight," said a prominent church leader.

He happened to be an Episcopalian, but the same statement could be made about many other major denominations.

The religious recession has been developing for several years. It is reflected in virtually every available index of public interest in religion. Bible sales, for example, have dropped about 25 per cent over the past decade. Church-related newspapers and magazines are losing subscribers at a painful rate. Sunday School enrollment has declined every year for the past six years.

In retrospect, it now appears that the postwar boom in religious interest crested in the late fifties, and has been subsiding slowly ever since. The Gallup organizations' annual survey of church attendance peaked in 1958, when49 per cent of America's adult population attended worship services on a typical Sunday. In 1969, only 42 per cent turned out, and the 1970 figure probably will be even lower.

The impact of the recession is most conspicuous in that ever-sensitive gauge of human concern —money.

The Episcopal Church, because it has just published a fresh batch of financial statistics, provides a convenient example of what's happening in many mainline denominations.

In 1967, the Episcopal Church (meaning the parent national organization) went $1 million into the red. In 1969, despite budget cuts, it failed by $1.7 million to raise enough funds to balance its expenditures. In 1970, officials estimate the church's receipts will fall nearly $4 million short of its pared-down $14.7 million budget.

The immediate cause is easy to identify. Only half of the church's 90 dioceses were able or willing last year to meet their annual quotas for contributions to the parent body.

A few withheld funds out of pique over the church's efforts to help black people, Indians, Spanish-Americans, young people and other "voiceless" groups to organize themselves for more effective representation in the nation's decision-making processes.

But many Episcopal dioceses defaulted on their quotas solely because they, too, are hurting for money. For example, the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D.C,. —one of the healthier dioceses of the church —asked its parishes last year for $652,000 as a rock bottom minimum to carry on diocesan programs. The parishes responded with pledges totalling $568,000, but only $545,000 was actually paid in.

The financial pinch really begins at the parish or local church level, and is simply passed along to higher echelons. Consider these figures, from a once-thriving parish in the wealthy Maryland suburbs of Washington:

In 1963, income from individual pledges and plate offerings totalled nearly $140,000. In 1970, with luck, it will be about $125,000. And there has been a lot of inflation in those years, so that the actual drop in constant dollars is even greater than it appears.

IN EARLY CHILDHOOD

Some Kinds Of Religious Training Can Be Harmful

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The view is widely held among parents that any religious training a child receives is bound to do him some good.

But it doesn't necessarily work that way. Some kinds of religious training, although well intended, may be very harmful to a child's spiritual development.

Take, for example, the matter of prayer. Parents with any degree of personal faith usually make an effort to teach their children to "say their prayers."

No one would deny the value of helping a child form the habit of daily prayer from his earliest years. But it matters enormously how a child is taught to think of prayer.

MISTAKEN VIEW

A mistaken view of prayer, implanted or encouraged by parents, may cause a youngster to become an atheist in his teens.

In a recent issue of the Christian Herald, religious educator Better Garton Ulrich recounted the story of a mother who couldn't comprehend why her college-age son had rejected belief in God.

The mother "recalled fondly how, as a small child, her son had prayed with unquestioning faith that God would grant him a bicycle. It was obvious from the tone of her reminiscences that the parents, in buying him the bicycle, had deliberately encouraged the child to believe that if he only prayed believingly enough, his prayers would be granted."

RELIGIOUS TRAINING

This kind of "religious training" is disastrous because it teaches a child to think of prayer as a letter to a heavenly Santa Claus. It may work for a while, but sooner or later the child will pray for things the parents don't know about, or cannot provide. He will then conclude either that there is no God, or, worse, that God exists but doesn't love him any more.

Even if a child should somehow escape this kind of disenchantment, he will never be able to grow into a mature religious faith so long as he thinks of God as a wish-granter. For any such concept gets the man-God relationship exactly backwards. Instead of seeing himself as the creature and servant of God, a child sees himself as the center of the universe, and sees God as a genie whose role is to protect and please him.

This doesn't mean that a child should be discouraged from asking God for things — including bicycles. It does mean that children should be taught from the very start to pray in the spirit of Jesus.

Jesus habitually addressed God as "Father in Heaven." The term can be a pitfall for children if they're allowed to form anthropomorphic images of God. But it is not difficult for parents to make clear that even though God does not look like a man, He does deal with His human children in the manner of a loving father.

This concept of God as Father teaches a child to acknowledge his dependence on God and at the same time prepares him for the possibility of getting No for an answer occasionally.

"A child does not cease to love and trust his parents merely because they sometimes refuse to give him what he wants," observes Miss Ulrich. "In fact, as he matures in understanding, he learns, either by the teaching of his parents or through experience, that often it is BECAUSE his parents love him that they refuse some of his requests. Just so he can be taught that a loving God denies some of our requests."

The lesson can be made clearer by teaching a child to conclude his prayers as Jesus did by saying: "Not my will but thine be done." This short sentence, whenever it is said sincerely, encompasses the deepest truths that a human being can learn, at any age, about his relationship to God.

Implicit in it is the faith that God can always be trusted to watch over us with a loving concern for our ultimate best interests. And it also constitutes a humble acknowledgment that it is God's will, not ours, that really matters, for this is His universe and we exist solely because we are part of His creative purpose.

Marinite Elected To Head GTU Directors

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Mrs. A. Crawford Greene Jr. of Ross has become the first woman to head a board of directors of a major theological institution in the United States.

Her elevation to the chairmanship of Berkeley's ecumenical Graduate Theological Union came recently at a meeting of directors. Mrs. Greene, a Catholic, succeeds Rev. Paul Hinkger of Piedmont, who will remain on the board.

GTU President John Dillenberger said of her election: "The dedication to the ecumenical goals of the FTU and the energetic leadership Mrs. Greene has shown as a trustee has been an inspiration to our board and the heads of the nine-member institutions . . ."

Mrs. Greene, wife of a San Francisco attorney and the mother of four children, was originally nominated to the board of Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Episcopal Bishop of California.

New officers besides Mrs. Greene are Henry Bowles, first vice chairman; Richard Dinner, second vice chairman, Jane Newhall, secretary, all of San Francisco, and William P. Jaeger Jr., treasurer, St. Helena.

DURING SEPTEMBER

9,300 Free Ferry Riders

A report that 9,300 persons rode free on the Sausalito ferry in September yesterday brought a collective gasp from Golden Gate Bridge District directors.

The report, by district auditor Gordon E. Dahlgren, strongly criticized the fare collection system on the ferry, noting that 92,579 rode during the month, but only 83,279 fares were collected.

Transit Mgr. Donald White explained that the 9,300 difference between passengers and fares collected was accounted for by infants, concessionaires and district personnel riding close herd on the operation during its first full month of service.

Dahlgren's report, however, said that such exceptions to fare-paying passengers could make a small difference, "but certainly not to the amount of 9,300."

His report came before the finance-auditing committee, and many directors clearly were not convinced by White's explanation. He and Dahlgren were asked to work out a better system of fare collection and to report back to the committee within one month.

Especially disturbing to the directors was the practice of sometimes using the same ferry crewman to both sell tickets and then collect them at the end of the voyage.

No suggestion was made that there had been any dishonesty, but several directors criticized the system for leaving too much room for crewmen to pocket receipts.

Dahlgren's report, based on a trip he took aboard the vessel early last month, said that the ticket window aboard was unattended at times. "It seems highly possible that the cash box could be picked up by anyone who waited for the right opportunity," Dahlgren said, since "the box was locked but not fastened down or concealed from passengers."

He noted that White had made several changes in fare collection procedures since September, among them improvements to the public address system so passengers can understand directors for ticket handling.

Dahlgren's suggestions for improvements included a consideration of one-way fare collection.

Luehring commented that some of Dahlgren's suggestions, because of their cost, could mean "you spend $2,000 to collect $600."

The Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

BICYCLES — Received an opinion from the district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, that no legal bar stood in the way of proposed use of the seat sidewalk for bicycles. Luehring was asked to devise a test of such use.

ATTORNEY — Voted, after a 10-minute closed meeting, to pay Jenkins $50 an hour for his services. Jenkins previously reported that, because of an unexpectedly heavy workload of bridge district business, he had "used up" his annual $17,000 retainer within two months after he was hired on July 1. The amount of the retainer dated from the days before the district got into the transit business.

TRAFFIC Received a report from Luehring that the rate of increase in traffic had fallen to 1.6 per cent in October compared with the same month last year. If the previous rate had continued, the month would have had 17,337 vehicles during the average three-hour morning commute period. Instead, it had 16,194. Luehring atrributed the decline to increased parking rates in San Francisco, the general slow-down in the economy, and increased ferry patronage.

TOLLS — Received report from Luehring that 62,125,314 vehicles had crossed the bridge in the two years since the one-way toll system started Oct. 19, 1968.

PLAN — Received report that the long-range transit plan being drafted by Kaiser Engineers will be presented to the board on Nov. 24.

TEST — Received report that a device capable of counting dual-wheeled vehicles has been installed in a toll lane for testing for possible use in plans to modernize the toll plaza.

FERRY Ratified expenditure of $5,517 for the annual inspection and other maintenance work on the Sausalito ferry.

PAINT — Accepted a low bid of $26,500 from Superior Coating & Chemical of Orange County to provide 10,000 gallons of international orange topcoat vinyl paint, and a low bid of $9,500 from the same company to provide 4,000 gallons of vinyl white wash primer paint.

COMMITTEE — Set a meeting of the transportation committee at 9:30 a.m. next Friday in toll plaza offices to screen naval architects to design ferries for the district, and to review staff progress on the joint bus and ferry system approved by the board.

Subdivision Maps On Agenda

Final maps for two additional East Petaluma subdivisions and a request for prezoning for another development will be considered at the Petaluma Planning Commission meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Final maps will be submitted for Monarch Pacific Unit No. 8 between St. Francis Drive and Perry Lane as well as for Casa Grande Unit No. 4 on Ely Boulevard South.

The M-T Development Corp. will request prezoning for single and multiple residences for property on Old Lakeville Highway between Casa Grande and Frates roads.

Land Use Session

The Novato City Council will discuss the land use of the triangle between South Novato Boulevard, Diablo Avenue and the Nave Shopping Center at an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the community house.

San Rafael Accidents Injure Four Persons

San Rafael police reported yesterday that four persons were injured in auto accidents in the city. Three were treated for injuries at Marin General Hopsital and the fourth declined medical assistance.

Bruce G. Wallace, 24, of 360 Tennessee Avenue, Mill Valley, was treated at the hospital Thursday for cuts and bruises on the upper lip after his car crashed into a parked car on Fourth Street near Alexander Avenue at an undetermined time.

After ricocheting off the vehicle of Richard E. Kohler of 11 Heather Way, Larkspur, Wallace's auto severed a fire alarm pole 350 to 400 feet down the road and damaged a sign at Bermuda Pool Service, police said. Officers found no skid marks at the scene.

Anthony Lee Santos, 18, of 412 Hickory Lane, San Rafael, was treated Thursday for bruises and his passenger, Robert Hanas, 17, of 30 Novato Street, was released from the hospital without treatment after Santos' pickup hit two parked cars on Third near Mary Street at 10:50 p.m.

Elaine Bundy, 48, of Berkeley said she would see her own physician following an accident Thursday involving her car and that of Rita M.C. Elliott, 21, of 19 Allyn Avenue, San Anselmo, at 4:04 p.m. on Second Street near Brooks Street, police said.

San Rafael Gives Fire Test To 88

Eighty-eight men, believed to be the largest turnout in recent years, have taken the written examination for the job of firemen in San Rafael.

Six jobs will be filled in the department in January, but there are four men on the eligibility list, meaning there are only two definite openings for the applicants, reported Virginia H. Congdon, administrative assistant.

There was a record number of applicants for the job, 142, with 135 qualifying and 88 taking the written test Thursday night, she said.

Those who aren't hired will be placed on the department's eligibility list for one year, Mrs. Congdon reported.

Applicants have yet to take a physical agility test, an oral test and a medical examination.

Petaluma Council Will Consider Developments

Two plans for residential developments and an annexation application — all sure to be opposed by East Petaluma Homeowner organizations — will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Included will be a request to approve the Briarwood annexation on Casa Grande Road for residential development as well as an application to prezone adjacent land for a mobile home park and single family residences.

Attorney Arthur L. Lafranchi will appeal the decision of the planning commission to deny rezoning for a mobile home park on 28 acres adjacent to the Candlewood Mobile Home Park on North McDowell Boulevard.

Plea For Mobile Home For Nursing Classes Is Slated

College of Marin nursing students, who have been attending classes at Marin General Hospital, may be forced out into the parking lot because of space shortage in the hospital.

Lyla S. Cromer, nursing instructor, has applied for a variance to allow the temporary use of a mobile classroom in the parking area in front of the hospital at 250 Bon Air Road.

The request for the mobile classroom will be considered at a special hearing before the Marin County zoning administrator at 10:30 a.m. on Nov. 20. The hearing will be held in Room 308-A on the third floor of the Marin County Civic Center.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST LEADER

Poverty Program Is Hit

The head of America's largest non-Catholic denomination said yesterday government-administered poverty programs only make "the rich richer and the poor poorer."

Dr. Carl E. Bates, president of the 11.5-million member Southern Baptist Convention, told an audience at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry that the exception to this rule is church-sponsored programs.

"The church was concerned with poor people long before anyone else was," said the 56-year-old minister. "As soon as poverty became big business, the government jumped in." Church programs actually help poor people, while federal ones usually don't he said.

On the subject of war dissent, Bates said that people have a right to protest war, "but not in the streets. I'm surprised the government has let this (protest) go on as long as it has."

Because of the unique composition of the Southern Baptist Convention, to which he was elected head in June, it cannot speak for its 35,000 member churches on such issues as joining the National Council of Churches or taking part in an ecumenical movement among churches.

"The churches don't belong to the convention, they only cooperate with the convention," said Bates, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Charlotte, N.C., since 1959.

The power flows from the churches to the convention, rather than the other way around, he said, adding that "this is an enigma to many people."

Dr. Bates said he personally has some great reservations about the National and World Council of Churches, which have been accused of being too liberal by some conservative churchmen.

"I would like to catch hands with every Christian brother in the world," he said, "but the positions that the National Council and World Council have taken would leave me without a place to go."

Bates declared that the current generation "is far more sincere than mine was in their search for truth," but said theres' always been a youth revolution.

Our generation had rebels looking for a cause," he said. "I found the only cause worth dying for is Christ."

Earlier, in a talk before some 150 faculty and students of the seminary, Bates warned his audience, never to stop learning. "You must be a student," he said, "and maintain a growing edge in your mind and soul."

If he were a teacher at the seminary, he said, he would not sign the diploma of a student who had not mastered the Bible and the grammar book.

He cited himself as an example, saying he spends a portion of each morning reading and studying. "I dare you to catch me unprepared to preach," he said.

Only through Bible study, he said, can one learn the word of God. "If you can handle the word," he said, "I will handle your problems. If you can't, you're in trouble."

Students To Hold Park Fund Walk

The San Marin High School Ecology Action Club will sponsor an eight-mile walk next Saturday to raise money for promotion and acquisition of park land.

The walk starting at 9 a.m. at Lee's Brothers parking lot off Seventh Street, will proceed past San Marin High School, Novato High School, and along Reichert and De Long Avenues.

Walkers will have sponsors who will pledge to pay a certain amount for each mile they cover, and do not necessarily have to complete the eight miles.

Club members are visiting all Novato schools to invite students to participate, and "walk cards" are available at San Marin High business office. The card will be stamped at checkpoints along the march route, according to Carold Childs, club president.

Club members will supervise children under 10 who aren't accompanied by an adult or don't have permission from their parents to walk by themselves.

Walkers will go to their sponsors after the walk to get paid for the number of miles they completed and the money will be sent to Walk for Parks, 15 San Marin Drive.

The money will be used for promotion and acquisition of parks in Novato, Norma Tood, club sponsor, said. She did not know whether it would be given to the city parks and recreation department or the Novato Civic Foundation.

The club expects to have about 1,000 in the march.

Tiburon Ferry Commute Book Hike On Monday

The year-old commute book rate of 50 cents a ride on the Tiburon ferry will become 67.5 cents Monday.

Albert Ellidge, president of Harbor Tours which runs the ferry to San Francisco, said the increase has been forced by rising operating costs.

Ellidge said the Golden Gate Bridge District set the rate at 50 cents after it took over the strike-bound operation in November and it was retained by the company when the strike was settled in April.

The rate had been 67.5 cents from 1962 until the bridge set its price, Ellidge said.

To Caricature, You Must Exaggerate

See Page M2

Pencil, Paper, Eraser And Imagination

"Castro is perfect!"

That statement coming from a revolutionary might well be expected, but from a 15-year-old Tamalpais High School student who thinks Richard M. Nixon and Spiro Agnew are great, it sounds puzzling.

The answer to the riddle, however, is that young Robby Miller draws cartoons and caricatures that rank with the best. He loves to sketch the Cuban dictator whom he says is a "cinch to draw," but has drawn more praise with his caricatures of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew.

Robby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Miller who are both students at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Mill Valley. The talented Miller family resides at 1B Lockett Lane, on the seminary campus.

YOUNG ROBBY has been "doodling" as long as his mother can remember, but it has been the past three years while at the seminary that his work has been readily seen by the public. Several of his caricatures, including a couple of seminary professors, were put on display in the seminary library this summer and were an immediate hit.

"I don't know why I do so many political figures," Robby said, "but I guess it is because they appear in newspapers and magazines so much I have something from which to sketch."

ROBBY ASSURES his friends that the humorous caricatures of Nixon and Agnew have no political implications — "I'm in favor of them!"

Although Robby's actual training has been mostly self-taught with some help from school art classes, his career — if it can be called that at this early stage — has really just begun. Last year he drew caricatures of students who submitted articles for the campus student newspaper, The Current, for the publication's use.

Asked if her son ever won any awards or honors with his art work, Robby's mother laughed and answered: "He won a camera once for coloring the back of a cereal box. He was about 10 then. . .and it took about a year for the camera to come!"

LOOKING AT a drawing one might think it would take several hours, if not days, to complete. However, Robby says some may only take five minutes, while others could take a couple of days.

A soft lead pencil, paper and a good eraser are the necessary tools, he added.

Drawing isn't the only activity that absorbs Robby's free time, as he is also skilled in leatherwork. He has tooled a family Bible, fashioned a hairpiece for his mother and created several other items.

He points to his father, who was an engineer for several years before coming to Golden Gate for work on a theology degree, as his teacher. The senior Miller had a set of tools easily available.

THE TALENTED Miller family includes two other boys, Les, 12, and Mark, 10. Les is expressing a strong interest in origami — the Japanese art of folding paper into various shapes and forms.

Mrs. (Nancy) Miller is a special student at the seminary while Bill is finishing work on a Master of Divinity Degree in anticipation of enrolling for a Master of Religious Education Degree. These are the two primary degrees given by the seminary.

Miller left a financially rewarding position as senior engineer with Litton Industries in Southern California to come to the seminary. He had been involved in the aerospace program and worked in the three Titan missile programs as well as the Apollo and airborne computer programs. He had previously worked from Northrup Institute of Technology, Inglewood, Calif.

CONCENTRATION is one of the keys to successful caricaturing and cartooning, says 15-year-old Robby Miller of Strawberry. Also important is a creative imagination. Young Robby's subjects range from the nation's top political leaders to figures on the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary campus where he resides with his parents who are students there.

(Photos by Preston North)

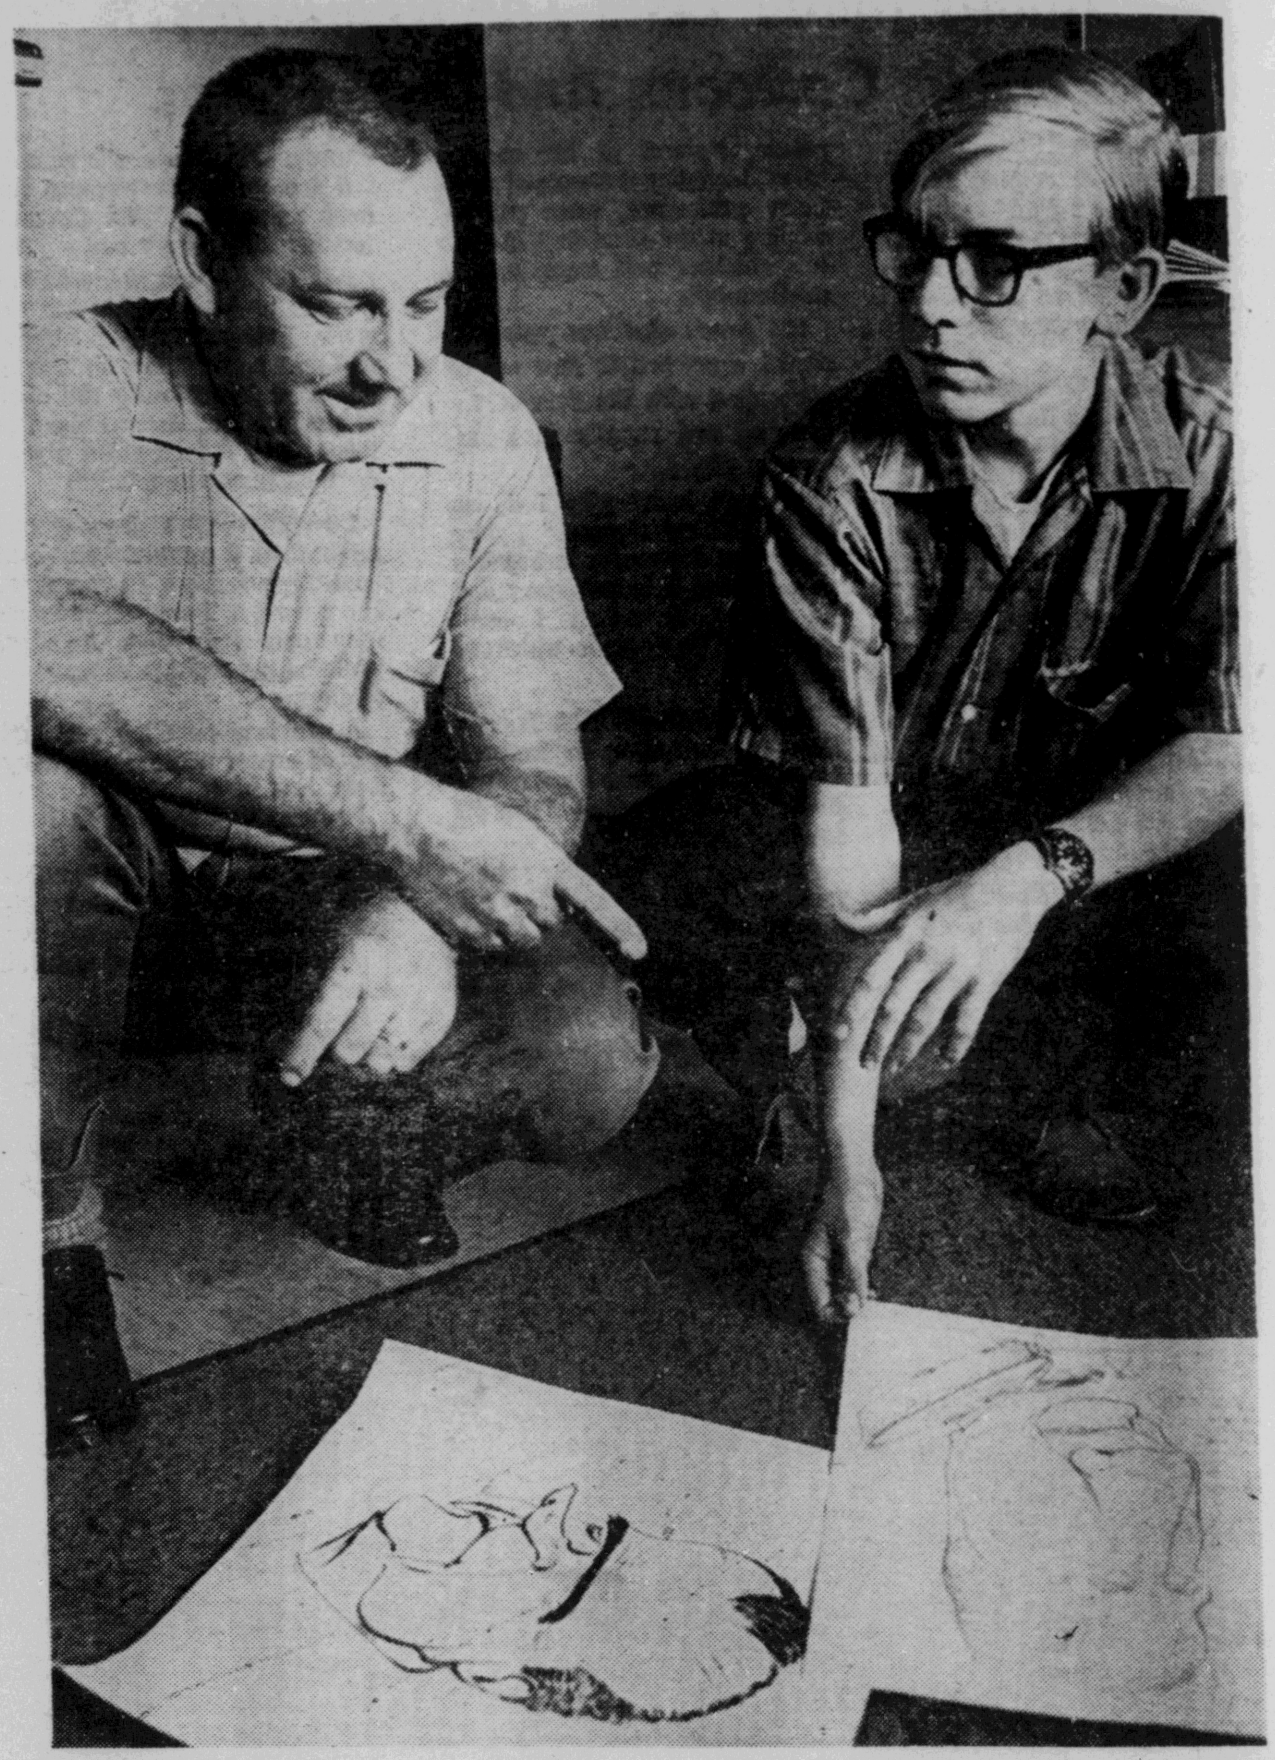
ROBBY SAYS drawing a caricature of someone is an "exaggeration," to use the proper lingo.

You hit upon the person's most striking features, he explains, and then exaggerate their visual impact.

So while pencil, paper and eraser suffice as tools, a keen perception, steadfast concentration and a creative imagination are other requisites. Young Robby's admirers say he has these in abundance. And that there is no need for exaggerating his talents for visual exaggeration.



"I LIKE THE ONE of Agnew best," decides Bill Miller, Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary student, as he checks caricatures drawn by his son, Robby, of the vice president and President Richard M. Nixon. The teen-ager hastens to explain that while his drawings exaggerate the features of the President and vice president, no disrespect is intended: "In fact, I'm for them."

Eight Enlist In Mental Health Cause

Community Center At Marin General Sponsors A Work-Study Program

Eight young men and women of college and young adult age are rediscovering the old truth that by extending help to others, they develop and benefit themselves.

They are the current participants in a work-study program initiated by the Community Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital to assist community groups in their efforts to prevent mental illness and foster mental health.

They represent the second group at the center to be so organized by Connie Lashbrook, community mental health educator. Both have met with striking success. And as a result, plans call for an expansion of the program.

PRESENTLY THE eight young men and women are working in such facilities and programs as the Sausalito Street Ministry, the Marin Drop-In Center and the Creative Living Center in San Rafael, and the Mill Valley Drop-In House.

As they assist in those programs, the volunteers find their own capabilities, sensitivities and knowledge expanding.

The long-range objective, says Mrs. Lashbrook, "is to develop a core of para-professionals in the area of mental health care."

AND THE HOPE is that a program ultimately will be organized with an affiliation with colleges and universities on a credit basis.

"The response from both the organizations where the participants in the work-study program are involved, and from the men and women themselves, has been amazing," Mrs. Lashbrook says. "They find great joy in working with other people, and they thereby find they are growing themselves."

Some of the young people are finding that they especially enjoy the community aspect of their participation.

Judy Donaldson, who grew up in Sausalito and attended Tamalpais High School, is working in the Street Ministry in Sausalito by editing and publishing a weekly newspaper and helping the concept of the Street Ministry grow.

JUDY SEES the Street Ministry as an expression of Christ's love for young transients, and is enthusiastic about the goal of making the church relevant to young people.

"It is a communication between people with different life styles," she said.

Marcia Canning, another member of the current work-study program, was born in Marin but has lived throughout the world while her Air Force father was stationed at different bases. Marcia helps at the Creative Living Center at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Rafael, assisting in psycho-dramas and in art therapy.

"WHEN I AM able to put something out, it's helping me as much as the people I work with," Marcia says.

"Why Aren't Raincoats Waterproof?"

Most rainwear is not waterproof. Drycleanable rainwear has a water repellent finish which may make it proof against a shower, but it is not waterproof. Further, it is generally true that when this rainwear or similarly treated sportswear is drycleaned, even the water repellency is lost. A water repellent finish should be renewed with each drycleaning.

The only waterproof rainwear is a completely plastic garment. Such rainwear is often uncomfortably hot in summer and stiffens in the cold. Fabric garments with vinyl resin finishes which may make them waterproof should not be drycleaned. They will stiffen permanently in drycleaning and become unwearable

Another participant, Gino Fon, is older than most of the other members, but he has an abiding interest in helping at the Marin Drop-In Center to assist men and women involved in drugs.

But whether it is their own special efforts, or in the field trips to such facilities as the Community Mental Health Clinic mental retardation unit in Kentfield, or in the weekly seminars attended by the entire group, the participants in the work-study program are enthusiastic about their efforts.

"This is one of the programs where everyone gains, including the residents of Marin who are benefitting from a really excellent preventative program," the two leaders say.

"We at the Community Mental Health Center are aware that our focus must be on prevention and mobilizing human potential, as well as on care for mental illness. And programs such as this work-study group are vital setups in that direction."

LARKSPUR LOOKS TO THE FUTURE

Two lumber mills followed, and a cluster of homes developed around them.

The 1906 earthquake caused a population jump as San Francisco residents left that devastated city for more tranquil Marin. By 1910 the year-round population was 514 and the summer population 1,200.

The town, incorporated in 1908, experienced its sharpest growth with the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge. In 1960 the population figure stood at 5,700, and in 1969 at 7,986.

With the growth has come dramatic change. In downtown Larkspur along side historic old buildings are new edifices. The once dirt road through town has long been paved. But still, 50 per cent of the city's land area remains undeveloped, and a projected saturation figure for 1985, including areas the city might incorporate, anticipates a population of 20,000.

A new roadway through the town is planned. A 40-acre park project along Corte Madera Creek is to be started soon. Signs point to more and more new commercial developments.

These, and other projects, farsighted Larkspur citizens realize, are certain to bring about changes even more dramatic than those in the city's past history.

To discuss how these changes can be directed toward the healthiest type of growth is the objective of a town meeting to be held next Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Redwood High School.

Pictures on this and the following two pages show how the village that sprang up around two lumber mills has blossomed into a progressive suburban city. Now, its citizens are asking: "Where is Larkspur going in the critical years ahead?"

THE DIFFERENCES that a few years can make are dramatized in these two photographs, both taken by Emme Gilman, along the banks of Corte Madera Creek in Larkspur. The photograph above was taken in the 1950s, the one below recently. The most noticeable difference is the absence of the houseboats that once lined the bank. Now a 40-acre park project along the creek will bring yet more change. For other photographs showing even greater changes in Larkspur over a longer span of years, turn to Pages M10 and M11 in this issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine.

The Changing Face Of Larks

MAGNOLIA AVE. NORTH FROM MADRONA AVE.

IN THE YEARS before and at the turn of the century, the viewer, standing at Madrone Avenue in still unincorporated Larkspur and looking up Magnolia Avenue would see this still very pastoral scene. The roadway was dirt and the sidewalk was wooden planks. Now that same section of Magnolia is a bustling, well trafficked business thoroughfare as shown in the Emme Gilman photograph below. Next Saturday, Larkspur citizens will assemble at Redwood High School for a town meeting to discuss the future of their downtown business area and other subjects that will determine the kind of city they will have after the growth and changes certain to come during the years and decades just ahead.

CITY OF LARKSPUR LOOKING NORTH

THE LARKSPUR business district of the turn-of-the-century had the air of a quiet country village that is apparent in the historical photograph reproduced above. A dirt road, wooden sidewalks, frame buildings and picket fences were among the features of the landscape. Below, that same area, as pictured by Emme Gilman, has a far different look today. A few landmarks, such as the historic old Blue Rock Inn and a real estate office, remain. But most of the structures such as the newer business buildings and St. Patrick's church and school, at extreme left, have been added in the seven decades that have come and gone. What will the decades ahead bring, Larkspur citizens now wonder.

FOR MANY CALIFORNIANS, Baja California means Tijuana and little else. But more and more travelers are discovering the fascinating resort city and free port of Ensenada, shown above encircling Todos Santos Bay. The inauguration of regular cruise service along the Baja California coast, and particularly the inexpensive three and four-night "party cruises," have brought an influx of visitors from north of the border to the picturesque Mexican town.

Sailing South Of Border To Ensenada

The Travel Pages

By NELSON FITCH

Ensenada is only a one and a-half-hour drive from San Diego via the new highway, and my family and I have visited there often by car. But approaching the picturesque Mexican town by ship aboard the luxurious cruise ship Princess Italia of the Los Angeles-based Princess Cruises, on one of the line's popular three-night party cruises, was a new experience.

The sun flashed like a broken mirror on the blue satin waters as we sailed into Todos Santos Bay. The town sprawled along the Baja shore as gay and casual as an old serape.

PERSISTENT tugboats prodded and pulled as the Italia nestled gently alongside a wharf stacked high with baled cotton destined for shipment to Japan and Europe.

A mariachi band blared happily from the docks as the gangway was lowered, and my family and I joined the nearly 400 passengers swarming ashore for a day in Ensenada.

We took a taxi (rates are modest — $1 to the center of town) — to the nearby sportfishing docks before going into town. Our 12-year-old son was intent on trying Ensenada's famous deep sea fishing, so we dropped him and a friend off at the boats.

THE REGULAR party boat had already left but for $8.50 each they rented an 18-foot outboard-powered boat, including the guide, bait and fishing rods. We agreed to meet later.

Friends we had met earlier on the Italia waved as they buzzed across the bay in a water ski boat. During the summer, ski boats are available near where the ship docks. Boat, crew and all equipment for an hour's skiing or instruction are $20.

MY WIFE AND I began our tour of Ensenada with a stroll down First Street, a block up from the docks. A multitude of tiny stands and stores offer baskets, leather goods and all sorts of Mexican arts and crafts at very reasonable prices. Merchants have bowed to the tourist penchant for haggling, so don't necessarily accept the first price offered.

The better stores have fixed prices, however, and deal largely in imports from Europe.

Ensenada is a free-port, which means there is no duty on imported merchandise. European knits, ceramics, jewelry and art objects are available at a fraction of U.S. costs.

MY WIFE HAD already made some purchases in the duty-free gift shop aboard the Italia (which had a surprisingly diversified roster of items from around the world). Now she really went to work'

Luckily, our spacious cabin on the Italia was more than ample for my wife's new serape for our guest room and Madrid-made chamois bag, for my son's sandals and sombrero, and my obsidian or black volcanic stone figurine.

There is also plenty of historical significance in Ensenada.

THE CHURCH of the Sacred Heart (Iglesia del Sagrado Corazon) at Third and Obregon streets was founded in 1890 — the first church in Ensenada and one of the most picturesque in the Southwest.

Santo Tomas Winery at 666 Miramar Street was founded even earlier, in 1888, by an Italian family. It is now the largest winery in Mexico and the only one in that country to produce champagne. Grapes come from the Santo Tomas and Maneadero valleys, just south of town.

The wine is still aged in the magnificent 200-liter wooden casks brought from France when the winery was founded.

TOURS AND wine tastings are conducted at Santo Tomas, but hours vary, so check first with the tourist office located on First Street in the heart of town. Emilio Mendez is the director of tourism and will answer questions.

Wandering Ensenada's side streets, away from the main tourist haunts, is always fun and provides interesting photographic possibilities. Many old buildings were constructed well before the turn of the century, and sections still look like sets out of western movies.

Our favorite attraction, however, is Hussong's Cantina. It was established in 1892, and I doubt if it has been swept since that time, let alone painted. Always jammed, Hussong's offers loud music, good booze and a fine time for those who like to bend an elbow.

MOST OF THE Italia's passengers preferred to return to the ship for meals, which is understandable as the continental cuisine is absolutely marvelous and temptingly served by an Italian crew.

However, there are many fine restaurants in Ensenada. The best of all is El Rey Sol.

Pepita Geffroy, the owner, was educated at the famous Cordon Bleu school of cooking in France. She has a ranch nearby and raises her own produce, poultry, herbs and spices that go into authentic French dishes as well as into American steaks, seafood and Mexican specialties.

THE DAY PASSED quickly and by the time we arrived back at the docks, the boys were waiting with a sack full of yellowtail, bass and barracuda, and pleading to go horseback riding.

Horses rent from $1.50 an hour at several locations. Just ask anyone where you can rent a horse (language is no problem in Ensenada, since most store clerks speak English).

Those who appreciate fine horses may want to visit San Miguel Village, seven miles north of Ensenada. Tomas Robertson, who operates a trailer park and leases homesites to Americans, also raises and trains Arabian horses and puts on horse shows.

WE HAD ALSO planned to visit La Bufadora (the, Blowhole), but time went by too quickly. La Bufadora, a famous attraction on Punta Banda, several miles south of town, has been turned into a park. Waves crashing against the rocks provide the pressure to send a geyser shooting 100 feet into the air.

It's a dramatic sight in a beautiful location. Small stands sell fresh clams, oysters and fried fish.

Nightlife in Ensenada centers along First Street, and there are many excellent nightclubs with top entertainers. I particularly recommend the San Nicolas, El Cid and the Bahia for music, dancing and entertainment.

The entertainment aboard the Italia herself was as fine as I have seen in Los Angeles, Ensenada or elsewhere.

SAILING DOWN from Los Angeles we watched a top singer and comic as well as other entertainers, including two bands. Now the same group was ready to regale us as we set sail for Guadalupe Island, further south off the coast of Baja California.

The ship's newspaper told us this volcanic island was uninhabited except for mountain goats and elephant seals lolling about on the beaches. Even though there were no stores for my wife and fishing boats for my son, we were eager to tour the coast of this fascinating island on the Italia's motor launches when we arrived there the next morn-

Florida's Sports Fishing Capital

Village Draws The Tourists

Chances are unless you are an avid sports fisherman or deep sea diver you probably have never heard of Islamorado village on Windley Key off the tip of Florida.

Billed as the sports fishing capital of the world, Islamorada enjoys a resident population of 2,500, not counting visiting fishermen; but its balmy breezes, swaying cocoanut palms and clear ocean waters attract tourists from all over the world.

Windley Key follows Key Largo in a scattering of coral islets, called keys, that reach far south into tropical seas. Strung together by State Highway 1, they extend nearly 175 miles from Miami to Key West, and the linking causeways sometimes reach seven miles across the blue-green Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

Among the well-known people who vacation there, former President Harry S. Truman calls Key West his favorite vacation spot. L. B. Maytag, president of National Airlines, maintains a home there and flies his private plane to his office near Miami International Airport.

Many citrus fruits grow in the keys. It is the distinct tartness of the local limes that gives key lime pie its flavor and its fame.

Outlying coral reefs that have plagued sailors over the centuries gives the ocean its sparkling clarity and turquoise hues and draws deep sea divers to scour wrecked ships and Spanish galleons still trapped in the shallows.

IF YOU ARE planning a winter vacation overseas and looking for a site off the beaten track, Finland is well worth your consideration. In sophisticated Helsinki you can enjoy fine food, shopping and nightlife. And at Pyhatunturi, north of the Arctic Circle, you can enjoy the ancient Finn pastime of snow sculpturing, above, as well as skiing, sleighing and skating. If you are there for Christmas, you'll be invitied to attend colorful yule church services and to enjoy a Christmas feast and other festivities. It's a short motor coach run from Helsinki to Russia's beautiful Leningrad. And there's the sauna bath. Finnish National Tourist Office, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y., 10017, will provide full details on a special six-day, $297 package that includes the Lapland and Leningrad experiences.

Check Rates First

Travelers planning to go abroad this winter and bring back goods worth more than the $100 duty-free allowance are advised by Trans World Airlines to check in advance on the customs rates on various articles.

They cite these examples: 16 per cent duty on leather handbags and pocketbooks; 26 per cent on prism binoculars; 9.5 per cent on motion picture cameras.

A free pamphlet, "Rates of Duty for Popular Tourist Items," is available from any customs office or the Bureau of Customs, Washington, D.C., 20226.

The Case For The Hippies Who Have Chosen Isolation

By DON KEOWN

Just as young people are prone to classify all their elders as Establishment figures, so is the older generation inclined to take a one-dimensional view of the younger, lumping them, particularly if they are bearded, beaded and/or barefoot, as Hippies.

And whereas the term Hippie was once reserved for those who had "dropped out" from society, in today's confused dialogue it is more frequently applied to still very much involved militant young activists. Their involvement consists generally of attempts to overthrow or undermine the power structure, sometimes violently, and it concerns us all and frightens many of us.

But he is still with us, almost unnoticed because he is quieter and poses a less immediate threat to existing values than his more militant brethren. And, more and more, he has become a segregated person, living apart from outsiders in communal groups that may be urban or rural but which are essentially isolated.

These communes are sometimes a source of agitation for close neighbors worried by a life style they cannot fathom. We have had our instances of this in Marin. But their sphere of influence seems miniscule when compared to the waves created by youngsters who have chosen not to retreat from, but rather to do battle with the Establishment.

Whereas radical activists have been plagued by a surplus of self-appointed vociferous spokesmen, the "drop outs" have been pretty much without a voice.

They may have found one in Raymond Mungo, who first attracted attention with his book "Famous Long Ago" and now has followed it with "Total Loss Farm."

Mungo is part of a communal family residing on a Vermont farm, building there, they hope, an alternative way of life to the "urban nightmare" they had lived before.

The writer had tried activism and decided that it had failed. "The movement," he felt, had become more a rival bureaucracy than an alternative to the power structure. The farm "has given me the insulation from America which the peace movement promised but cruelly denied."

"Total Loss Farm" covers one year in the lives of Mungo and his fellow adventurers. It begins with a canoe trip down the Concord and Merrimack rivers through filth that contrasts painfully with the clear, clean streams Henry David Thoreau had described. There follows a hectic coast-to-coast automobile trek to escape the Vermont winter. And finally, a return to the farm and a summer spent in a rustic life tied closely to the soil.

Mungo too obviously sees himself in the role played by Jack Kerouac for an earlier generation of young drop-outs. The influence of Kerouac upon Mungo's writing style and thinking is apparent — and unfortunate. Although Mungo is somewhat more restrained, the undisciplined aspects of Kerouac's writing are marked, particularly in the account of the automobile trip. And the imitation seems a self-conscious, not altogether natural one.

One remembers that Kerouac, for all the bombshell brilliance with which he burst upon a too staid literary scene, wound up an oafish, clownish figure more to be pitied than admired. One feels that Raymond Mungo writing — and thinking — as Raymond Mungo, not as an imitation, latter-day Jack Kerouac, is the more formidable and preferable figure.

Actually the resemblance between the Kerouac Beats and the Mungo Hippies is not that great. True, both have "dropped out." But the Beats did so more from sheer indolence than out of disillusionment with the society they were quitting. Their's was not a moral stand, for they were essentially amoral. But the Hippies described by Mungo as his traveling companions and commune sharers are, despite their disavowal of existing social standards, basically a moralistic group. They really have not so much quit the struggle as they have chosen their own separate and distinctive means of carrying on the battle.

"When I say that we had fear, and imply that the terrorist attacks on the established powers are also a product of fear," Mungo writes, "I do not mean to exonerate the IBMs and Chase Manhattan Banks of that old world, who deal in fear as their stock-in-trade.

"I mean only that we cannot find hatred in our hearts for men or institutions of which we are not ever afraid, and that our fear is not so much of temporal harm to our bodies ... but of rejection from the human race.

"Yes, what we dread the most is that subhuman treatment, that unspoken or spoken assumption that We are not like Them, that We stand apart, that We are not Their brothers. The unkind world or glance it is, and not the punch in the nose, that kills us.

"And I mean to leave you with the consideration that it is far easier for this kind of determination to occur in places where many folks live, and we are always strangers, than in other spots where humanity may not so thoroughly cover the face of the planet; and to suggest, as many have before me, that the human survival instinct includes a self-destruct clause applicable to overcrowded situations."

"Innocence," claims Mungo, "is the only possible hope." And life on Total Loss Farm is a true hedonism — a quest for "the best of everything."

He summarizes its philosophy thusly:

"I do not seek to be represented. I do not seek to tear down your buildings or march on your castle or sit at your desk. I am interested neither in destroying what you have put up nor in gaining castle of your empire. I demand nothing, and nothing is my inheritance."

But if Mungo and his friends demand nothing of us, they do ask something:

"I live in the world, in the woods, with my friends, where not many people come by and the planet is entire and friendly; we like to be left alone except by those who can help. You can help by giving the planet, and peace, a chance.

"I ask only that you treat yourself right, give yourself the best of everything; and in so doing, you will be acting for me as well. If you can't stop, at least wave as you go by. Slow down, perhaps stop working; you'll find the time for everythink you really want to do."

Thus Mungo reveals a certain contradiction in his too passive philosophy. Even his movement — or non-movement — must proselytize if it is to achieve the lasting effects for which it aspires. If his "We are saving the world" claim is to be justified, he and his friends must have the help and the cooperation of others. The withdrawal is not complete.

Still, his is basically a decent philosophy that stands up well against the now somewhat shattered arrogance of the Establishment, the complacency of orthodox liberals and the mindless hysteria and violence of some of the more radical activists.

There are flaws. Many will chaff that its practitioners support their way of life in many instances upon the welfare largess provided by the very Establishment they criticize. Of greater concern, however, is the tolerance, or even the encouragement, of drug use, a practive that is stupid at best and suicide at worst, as evidenced by the tragedies of Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix.

Despite his Kerouac hang-up, Mungo is capable of some splendid lines. And we suspect that in his emphasis upon congestion, Mungo has quite accurately put his finger upon the primary cause of man's malaise today.

But fleeing that overcrowding cannot be regarded as any final solution to the problem. Done en masse, it simply transfers the sites of the congestion. More lasting answers must be found. Quite possibly these lie in combining some of the ideals and tactics of these communal people with the best from the several other life styles being practiced by other Americans, and adding yet other mores and motives that are still in the developmental stage.

AGATHA CHRISTIE
No. 80 is a clinker

To accuse Agatha Christie of writing a novel deficient in suspense and mystery seems, somehow, akin to charging Shakespeare with a lack of histrionics, or claiming the Testament to be short on piety.

Nevertheless, to this longtime Christie admirer, it seems that this gifted lady, at age 80 producing Novel No. 80, has finally turned out a "clinker."

"Passenger to Frankfurt" uses as its central character Sir Stafford Nye, a British diplomat, and enmeshes him in intrigue that eventually explodes into a global revolt waged by the dissident youths. But behind the young rebels are sinister forces manipulating and using them. The effort is to unmask and disarm these power-seekers. Sir Stafford has the help of a beautiful and mysterious countess, and of various figures in and out of government.

The usual keenly-drawn Christie characters are diffused and the allignment of political ideologies is unconvincing. And for this reader, at least, "A Passenger to Frankfurt" just doesn't come off.

Give us next, dear lady, another of your Miss Marple or Hercule Poirot yarns that never fail. And all will be forgiven. One strikeout, if this is such, in 80 times at bat remains a most remarkable performance. Although the analogy might more appropriately be worded in the terminolgy of cricket.

DOVER PUBLICATIONS deals largely in reprints, but "The Divine Proportion" by the British mathematician and physics teacher H.E. Huntley is a $2.50 paperback original. It is subtitled "A Study in Mathematical Beauty" and Dr. J. Bronowski has labeled it "a delightful book to read . . . . It wanders here and there through some of the most attractive byways of simple mathematics, returning always to the oddities and pleasures of the golden section. This is a browser's book — a happy, untidy traveling or bedside book for those who know how to enjoy the charm of numbers and shapes." While the mathematical material doesn't seem "simple" to this neophyte, it does, indeed, seem intriguing. It is a refreshingly original exploration of the idea that mathematics and aesthetics are more closely akin than most people suspect.

The World's Money In A State Of Flux

In spite of what the blurb on the inside cover says, this is NOT a book that everyone will need — or want — to read. It is a book on an interesting subject, money, but the detailing of the workings of international monetary systems will probably be of interest only to economics students, bankers, and an occasional stockbroker who happens to follow the fluctuations of the gold stocks.

The authors chronicle the gradual decline of the world monetary system as set up at the Congress of Vienna in 1815. At that time the basic rules were adopted by the major European countries and included the provision that trade between nations could be settled either by barter or with gold. This system would continue to work only if each country spent about as much as it received in foreign trade. If a country overspent, it would soon run out of gold and be unable to settle its debts.

The gold standard made some sense in 1815 when about two-thirds of the money in circulation in the major nations was gold or silver but in 100 years the percentage fell to about 15 per cent in spite of an increase in the gold supply. The demand for money had increased at an even faster rate and thus nations were accepting the pound and the dollar in payment as long as they believed that these currencies were convertible into gold.

Two other factors upset the smooth workings of the international monetary system in the 20th Century. These were the exporting of economic difficulties and world war. It was immediately following the second World War that the conference at Bretton Woods was called by the major nations in an attempt to put the system back into working order.

The authors go on to detail this conference and other formal and informal structures set up over the years to foster trade between nations and in some cases to stave off economic disaster. The era of the De Gaulle confrontations is discussed along with the flight of currencies from countries in economic or political trouble including the student riots in France which succeeded in toppling De Gaulle — primarily through the loss of France's gold reserves.

The United States comes in for a fair amount of criticism for its consistent deficits, loss of gold reserves and consequent loss of confidence in the dollar. In this respect the authors are hardly out on a limb. The Wall Street Journal in an editorial discussed the drive for European monetary integration with the goal being to limit the ability of the U.S. to continue balance of payments deficits. Yale Prof. Robert Triffin wrote in the Morgan Guaranty Survey:

"The changed mood of the European central banks can be traced largely to their increasing impatience with the practical necessity of absorbing dollars into official coffers and to their inability to check the spectacular rise of interest rates in the Eurodollar market — to 12 per cent and more last year — under the impact of huge American borrowings."

Harry G. Johnson, a professor at the London School of Economics and also the University of Chicago, says the Federal Reserve is in reality, but not constitutionally, the world's central bank.

What's the end of all this? The bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, says it best in its annual report: "The fact is that the international monetary system is passing through a process of radical change, the outcome of which no objective observer can claim to know."

Len Deighton Switches From Thrillers To War Documentary

"In building toward this work of powerful documentary fiction, he has written six spy stories," the jacket says of novelist Len Deighton.

If "Bomber" is a final product, then we much prefer the preparation that came before it. For "Bomber" did not grip our attentions as did "Funeral in Berlin" and "The Ipcress File."

Yet other reviewers have praised Deighton's newest novel as "agonizing in its reality" and "a major contribution to epics of World War II." So we suspect that in our case, the problem lay, not with book and writer, but with reader. Quite probably, we just weren't in the mood for yet another fictionalized documentary, a technique somewhat overused.

"Bomber" is Deighton's recreation of a World War II bombing raid from Britain against Germany that went tragically wrong. Over a 24-hour period, Deighton covers in infinite and minute detail the converging destinies of many people in two war zones. A longtime airplane buff, Deighton brings expert knowledge to the technical aspects of his subject. He adds touches of romance and suspense. And his novel is a deglamorization of war that is commendable in these times when forces for peace can use all the help obtainable.

Yet, for us, the pages went slowly. It seemed the novelist had chosen too broad a canvas, and then crowded it with too much detail. The jumping from place to place, character to character, never permitted us to really become acquainted with the individuals in his cast or to become involved in their problems. Too many were introduced too briefly. Irrelevancies slowed the pace.

The distinctively crisp, understated, almost enigmatic Deighton writing style is recognizable, but less so than in his spy thrillers.

What we began reading with an anticipation of pleasure became almost a labor, and this was not entirely because of the well-merited horror with which Deighton regards and treats war. Quite likely we read the book at the wrong time under the wrong conditions, and other more favorable reviewers are right in assessing its qualities affirmatively. For we are well aware of the immensity of the assignment that Deighton has undertaken, impressed by the enormous research that has gone into it, and conscious of the professionalism with which it has been executed. Still, it simply didn't work with us. And we, for one, hope to see Deighton back doing those splendid Harry Palmer thrillers, although this seems somewhat unlikely in view of the success being enjoyed by "Bomber."

Rescuing A Figure In Obscurity

There are many interesting forgotten men in American history, among them Hannibal Hamlin, Lincoln's first vice president.

What might have been the course of post-Civil War history had not Lincoln dumped Hamlin as his 1864 running mate in favor of the loyal Southern Democrat, Andrew Johnson, is a fascinating subject for speculation.

H. Draper Hunt, youthful associate professor of history at the University of Maine, has sought to rescue Hamlin from the obscurity to which the history books have consigned him. He has done a considerable research job, as attested by the plentiful quotations and the multitude of footnotes (the latter, happily, being relegated to the back of the book where they belong).

Having completed the research, however, Hunt has not known quite what to do with it. Too many — and too long — quotations are the meaningless stock of the politician (of which Hamlin obviously was a prime example). There is too much "filler" and too little that is revealing of the biographical subject. The reader is left a bit unsure of how much Hannibal Hamlin was flesh and blood with real convictions and emotions and how much was hollow political "image."

If Lincoln's first vice president is not to return to obscurity, he needs a little more rescuing.

A Haunting Climax To A Novel

THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND by Alice Walker; Harcourt Brace Jovanich, Inc., 247 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

This story embodies the simple chronicling of the lives and ways of the poor southern black family of Grange Copeland, a menial laborer.

Nothing new is revealed in it. But the suffering, the hopelessness and the cycle of miseries from generation to generation are effectively echoed.

In an attempt at freedom he leaves his family and journeys to New York. He somehow manages to survive and prosper there in the fast-paced black netherworld.

Upon his return to the South he learns that his wife has died and the son is married and mired in the same predicament as he, thus renewing the cycle.

Copeland then establishes a warm, totally unforeseen rapport with his son, Brownfield, to whom he once only barely spoke.

But Brownfield, too, has perversely channeled blame for his own situation on his wife and murders her.

He, however, has dearly loved his children and one, Ruth, has become his favorite.

And when formal adoption of the girl is denied him, the third and final life of Copeland comes to a violent end. This occurs in a fatal courtroom shootout that is hauntingly reminiscent of today's newspaper headlines of stories in which men are driven to suicidial efforts to obtain that to which they feel they have a right.

The New Cookbooks—

By MAXINE KEOWN

The weeks before the holidays are a busy time for cookbook publishers, and this year has been no exception.

The prize "plum" in the 1970 fall deluge has to be "A World of Menus and Recipes" (Bobbs-Merill, $10) by Gertrude Bosworth Crum.

San Francisco-born, Berkeley and Paris educated, Mrs. Crum has been novelist, columnist, reporter and consultant, but now is known for her Menus-by-Mail planning service to cooks. The menus and recipes that have been responsible for her success there are now to be found in her book, and they are, indeed, varied, distinctive and appealing. In all, there are 100 menus for both general and specific occasions, containing 600 recipes. Some are elaborate. But what stamps the book as particularly useful are the many simple dishes and touches that mingle with the more complex. Mrs. Crum does not hesitate to take advantage of the so-called "convenience" or prepared foods. Yet, the overall effect is usually one of elegance.

It is a book whose contents surpass one's expectations. The proposed menus are difficult to resist. And if one succeeds, there are still individual dishes and ideas within the menus that will prove invaluable to the cook in quest of flexibility in her kitchen fare. It's an excellent gift book.

"The Everything Cook-Book (Hawthorn, $8.95) by Betty Wason, veteran cookbook author and food editor, is a 907-page effort to live up to its ambitious title. And it largely succeeds. It is the encyclopedic type cookbook, a la Good Housekeeping, filled with not only 2,000 tested and varied recipes, but with experienced, practical counsel in great detail upon such subjects as menu planning, shopping, entertaining, weight control, the serving of wines, storage, etc. The publisher offers: "Sample any five recipes and if you are not completely satisifed, return the book and your purchase price will be refunded." Start off with the Saltimbocca or the Sweet Potato Buns, and right away the publisher is off the hook.

"Russian Cooking" (Time Life, $7.95) by Helen and George Papashvily is another in Time-Life's splendid Foods of the World Series. The Papashvilys, he an immigrant from the Caucasus, both of them much traveled in the Soviet Union, have put together an entertaining review of Russian cuisine — what it is, and how it came about. Like all books in the series, it is beautifully illustrated. Recipes, from borsch to tortes, are repeated in a spiral-bound booklet for handy kitchen use. The book maintains the high standards of this series by providing not only a superb array of ethnic dishes, but also a keen understanding and deeper appreciation of a most interesting and tasteful cuisine.

Nika Hazelton who has authored a number of cookbooks on European ethnic cooking and other culinary subjects takes up a largely overlooked cuisine in her "The Belgian Cook Book" (Atheneum, $7.95). Following a discussion of the roots and special qualities of Belgian dishes, she offers 137 recipes, most of which will be new to American chefs. She makes it clear that Belgian gastronomy is separate and distinct from French, German and Dutch cooking with a special appeal all its own. Some examples: Chervil Cream Soup, Rabbit Flemish Style, Belgian Endive and Avocado Salad, Pork Braised with Red Cabbage, Brussels Beer Waffles. It's an intriguing book.

"Kitchen Safari" (Atheneum, $7.95) by Harva Hachten takes up the delicacies of a continent coming in for increased and well deserved attention from gourmets. It is a compilation of the recipes of various African lands, reflecting the inventive ways of the native chefs plus the influence of the European colonizers and Asian immigrants. It is not to be confused with Soul Food, which is strictly American. The dishes here are Algerian Couscous, Banana Beef Stew, Groundnut Sauce, Fresh Fish Stew, Yam Balls, Green Cornbread and the likes. Lots of exotics here, and yet generally not difficult to prepare, for the recipes have been adapted to American needs.

"How to Gorge George Without Fattening Fanny" (Haw thorn, $5.95) is the catchy title of a clever book by Nancy Gould that emphasizes foods that taste rich but are low in calories. Such as Farmers' Chop Suey, Iranian Shah Soup, Jewish Noodle Pudding, Scimpi Scampi and No Flabbage Cabbage. The calorie count is given for each dish. And the author's aim is "to brighten up the drudgery of dieting." For the most part, her suggestions seem anything but bland and uninteresting.

"Cooking With Wine and High Spirits" (Cornerstone Library, $1.25) is a paperback, the product of Rebecca Caruba with the highest of credentials. More and more, wine and other alcoholic beverages have come to be regarded as essential to gourmet cooking. Miss Caruba outlines a tempting array of dishes in which spirits play a part — the likes of Syllabub, Swedish Apple Cake, Oysters Madeira, Scotch Omelet, Eggnog Chiffon Pie, Norwegian Strawberry Soup and Lobsters Flambe. This one is definitely not for the calorie counters. But it's perfect for those who like their dishes with a little added zest and flair.

New Process Protects Books

Smith's process is based on a nonaqueous, or waterless, solution consisting of an organic solvent and a moderately alkaline deacidifying chemical agent. Documents treated with this solution — by brushing, spraying or immersion — are protected from acid attack and their life expectancy is prolonged indefinitely.

Virtuoso Performances By Jazz Stars Burton And Mann On Vibes And Flute

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

The vibes at one time were considered unwelcome intruders in the realm of jazz because the fans associated the music with reeds, horns, drums and occasionally the banjo.

But Lionel Hampton dissipated all doubts about the character and expressiveness of this instrument in a relatively short time and opened the way for others to follow.

Among today's practitioners, Gary Burton certainly is to be considered a virtuoso. And his agility with the electric vibes puts his music in proper perspective to the emphasis on souped-up sound.

On "Good Vibes" (Atlantic SD 1560), Burton achieves an admirable level of consistency whether it is on Gil Evans' "Las Vegas Tango" or on the three compositions of his own included in this album — "Vibrafinger," "Boston Marathon" and "Leroy the Magician."

Burton receives fine support from Sam Brown, Jerry Hahn and Eric Gale on guitars; Richard Tee on piano and organ; Steven Swallow on bass and electric bass; Church Rainey on electric bass, and Bill Lavorgna and Bernard Purdie on percussion.

Like Gary Burton, Herbie Mann transformed another unlikely instrument, the flute, into a leading piece in the modern jazz band. There seems to be no end to his stamina in producing one fine album after another. His latest, "Big Boss" (Columbia CS 1063), is a gem that includes "Watermelon Man."

All the numbers were composed by musicians oriented jazz or blues.

Time To Start Thinking About A Living Tree

Garden Page

Time to start thinking about a Christmas tree already?

Yes, it is — providing you are thinking in terms of a living Christmas tree this year.

Marin nurserymen report that more and more residents of our county are turning from cut trees, that must be discarded after the holidays, to living trees that can continue to benefit their owners for weeks, months and years after the Christmas season has passed.

THOSE WHO do so reap additional benefits beyond the holiday cheer that the living trees bring into a home.

For container-grown, living trees may be used indoors for Christmas, then planted outdoors to beautify and improve the environment.

Used in the landscape, or kept in tubs for future years, the trees filter the air, provide oxygen and lessen noise and sound. Nature's own filtering system found in trees and shrubs is an essential contribution towards a better environment.

IN ADDITION to the esthetic and ecological reasons to use living Christmas trees, there's the fun experience for the family of shopping for the tree. Marin nurseries have an assortment of trees featuring those varieties best suited to our area.

As a group, the pines offer the most selections. But there are good choices of spruces, too. And the cypresses and cedars also rate top consideration.

ALEPPO PINE is bushier in growth and has a conical shape. Scotch Pine has bluish-green foliage and is attractively dense.

All can be grown in tubs for several years and later transplanted into the garden.

A STATE-WIDE favorite is the Deodar Cedar, with its familiar gray-green needles and graceful arching branches. In the ground or in a large tub, it will reward you with years of pleasure.

When brought indoors for Christmas, your tree should be watered generously and kept away from the direct radiance of a fireplace or heater. During the rest of the year, treat it as you would any other tubbed plant.

THE DEODAR CEDAR is one of the more popular chaices as a living Christmas tree as well as landscape specimen, with Californians. But there are many other evergreens that can be housed inside in tubs during the holiday season, then moved outdoors to enhance the property after the yule period is over. Screens Help Flower Beds

Everyone loves flowers, but few people know how to design a flower garden so that it's attractive all year long.

The frame is the most important: A backdrop screen that the flowers can show off against. Although nearly any style will be complementary, the fence shouldn't be painted. Flowers look best against natural wood tones or the silver shadings of weathered cedar.

Next important is to include a few evergreens in the flower bed. With the screen, they'll give the area structure year-around and will fill in nicely between bloom dates.

Last, set a simple garden bench near the flower garden to add a sense of both permanence and invitation.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- Holly, pyracantha and cotoneaster shrubs — in great variety — are in full berry now at nurseries. Use them in the landscape to brighten the fall and winter months.
- Lawns fed in November will stay greener through winter months despite a natural tendency to go dormant.
- Shop nurseries now for bright spots of foliage and other indications of the autumn season.
- November is the best time to plant tulips in California. Hurry for the best selection of flower forms and colors, and follow your nurseryman's recommendation on how deep to plant the bulbs.
- Camellias can be planted now. Several of the earlier-blooming varieties are already flowering.

When Fall Clean-Up Is Finished, Use Bedders In The Bare Spots

Bloomed-out annuals have been removed, perennials have been cut back and summer-blooming bulbs have been lifted. When this is the case, a gardener's best friend are the bedding plants.

Happily, there is no lack of bedding plant material — including both annuals and perenials — for renewal of the growth and bloom cycle. Several bedders will bloom in mid-winter and the others will get your garden off to a fast start in late February or March.

Since the introduction of the Pacific Beauty strain several years ago, this once common annual has become something of an aristocrat — the delicate shadings of lemon, cream, orange and persimmon being no less bright for their refinement.

Pansies and violas are other quick-to-bloom winter annuals and far longer lasting than most. Keep the flowers cut and new blooms will keep appearing through spring into early summer. These are ideal over newly-planted bulbs in that they give quick color and bloom with, and after, the bulbs.

STILL ANOTHER for winter color is the fairy primrose — which is a border and edging plant without many rivals. Line a walk with these and enjoy their lasting spikes of lavendar, pink or white through the coldest months.

In planting for early spring, the gardener has a wide choice of material. Nurseries will have a large selection, including Iceland poppy, cineraria, stocks, snapdragons, English daisy, spice pinks, alyssum — and others.

Your nurseryman is the best guide to the local bloom calendar followed by these prolific bedders.

Winter Heating For The Garage

A Spot Unit One Answer

Want to bring some heat to an area — such as a garage — that gets chilly at certain times of the year?

You can extend a gas or oil-fired or hot water system to the particular section or provide regular electric heating, or you can solve the problem with high intensity spot heating. One unit that furnishes this type of heat puts out 1,500 watts of radiant heat and functions much like a miniature sun—heating objects directly, rather than surrounding air.

The high heat output eliminates the need for insulation and in many cases can take the chill off partially exposed areas in the home such as a breezeway or patio. Since the unit is not used full time — only when the area is in use — electrical costs need not be high. A new heating element which combines the strength of ceramic materials with the heating output of coiled wires is the operating "secret." The new material also provides instant warmup with no power-consuming current surges.

Installation is one evening's work and requires only a common electrical junction box, on-off switch and the required length of 12 AGA, grounded wire to hook the unit to the service entrance. (Check local electrical codes before installation.) Weighing less than four pounds, the unit requires no more support than most lighting fixtures and attaches to electrical junction boxes with two machine screws.

The heater operates on ordinary 120V house wiring, and requires its own 20 amp circuit, either fuse or circuit breaker controlled. The only other restrictions affecting installation are to make sure the unit is placed no closer than 12 inches from adjacent walls and ceiling and not less than six feet from the floor.

THIS BAR doubles as a bookcase or stereo cabinet. To build it, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Easi-Bild's Book No. 661 — "How to Build Family Room Furniture." You will wind up with directions, not only for building the bar, but also for constructing your own table and a wall wardrobe. Sliding panel doors are one feature of the bar, which is paneled with prefinished paneling. And the top is plastic laminate. The step-by-step directions have been simplified so that no great previous experience in furniture construction or skill with tools is required. Be sure to include your zip code number when ordering.

BIRD BOON

A Home Office Where Clutter Can Be Hidden

There isn't any law that says you have to be neat. Indeed, a certain amount of chaos spurs many people to action.

If you tackle household accounts better in an atmosphere of controlled confusion, feel no shame.

But one does like to hide the debris when the boss' wife or the neighborhood nitpicker drops in. The answer to that is a home office that can be quickly closed off.

"IMPOSSIBLE! No space," you say. Think again.

A tiny four-by-five foot area easily can accommodate an ample built-in desk with drawers below and shelving above. Add a comfortable desk chair on casters, an extension phone, your mounds of papers, phone lists and memorabilia, and you're in business.

A desk with a countertop of plastic laminate or other durable material is easily cleaned. Build in a bank of drawers on one side. Consider making the lower drawer deep enough for files. Adjustable dividers can be installed.

THE OTHER side can have one shallow pencil drawer, leaving space below to push in the chair when not in use.

So much for convenience. Now for amenities.

Your office may be messy, but it won't seem like little hell if the materials you use have quality and comeliness.

WALLS PANELED with western softwood panel boards will "dress" the office, tone down the clutter and, by their grain and texture, provide an aura of warmth. Use matching lumber for the desk and shelving.

Clippings, postcards, photos and notes may be displayed by tacking finishing nails into the paneling grooves. When you take an item down, the wood will show no scar. Or you can use double-sided sticky tape.

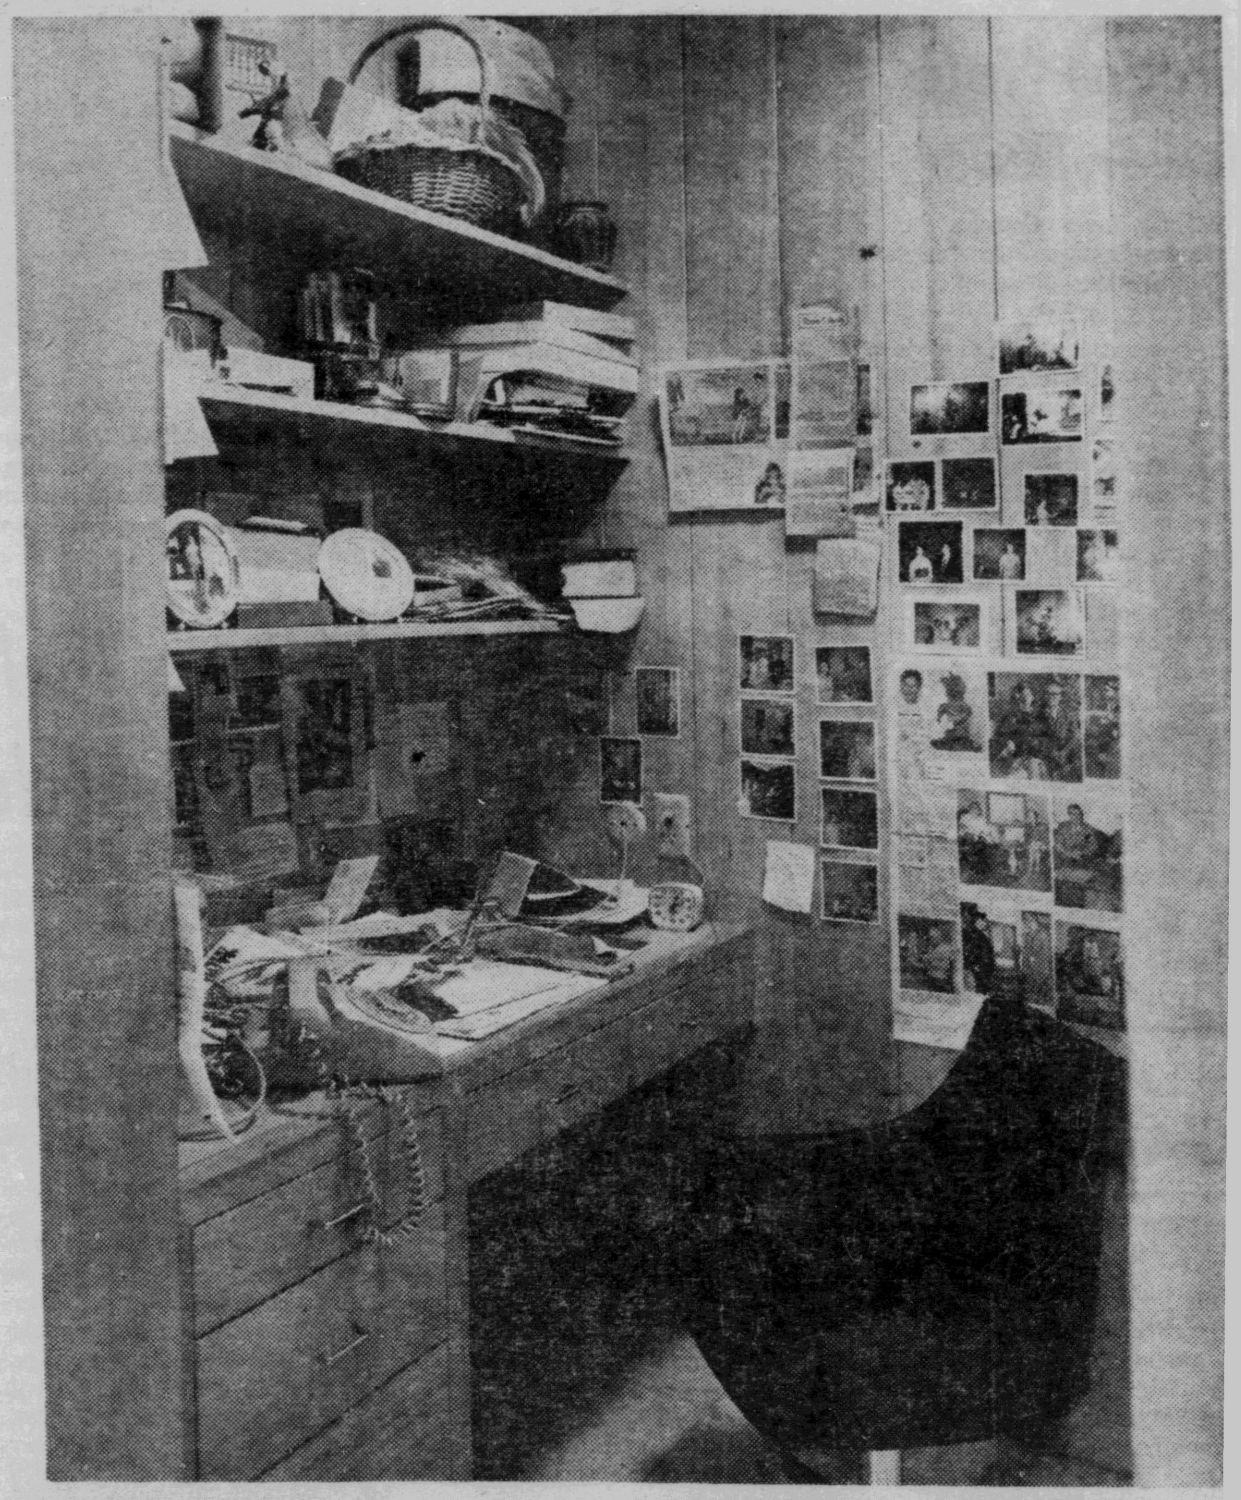
Can you think of a better solution to the problems of a home maker, den mother, United Crusade chairlady or P-TA president?



THOSE WHO THRIVE on clutter need a nook to contain — and sometimes conceal — the clutter. A five-foot-square office is equipped with drawers, shelving, telephone and — for concealment purposes — a louvered d Mementos can be tacked up at the joint the tongue-and-groove panel boards with marring the wood.

Two Sinks Equal Convenience For Woman Who Entertains

Some women consider family entertaining their hobby. They are the ones who spend hours preparing for guests. Whether for an evening of cocktails or a large dinner party, they have the art of creating a memorable evening.

For such persons, the addition of one or more sinks can make entertaining easier and more efficient. One company makes a line of small stainless steel sinks called "hospitality" sinks, that can be installed in a variety of areas around the home.

A second sink in the kitchen, located on a work island or counter peninsula, provides the perfect place for the man of the house to prepare drinks while the hostess uses the main sink to finish up last minute details.

The hospitality sink is an excellent bar sink. The bar area, usually located near the center of activity, is a logical place to install a double or single-bowl hospitality sink. The double bowl models have wooden cutting boards that are handy for cutting drink garnishes. When not being used for cutting, the board fits neatly over one of the sink bowls, forming an excellent ice storage compartment.

Another feature of the hospitality sinks is the blender unit which is built right into the sink apron. A tall gooseneck faucet enables the bartender to fill tall glasses, pitchers and punch-bowls with ease. Because of the properties of stainless steel, the sink will not chip, warp or stain.

Buy The Cheapest Material That Will Do The Job Right

If you're planning on an extensive building project — like a wall of shelves and cupboards for your basement or garage — Better Homes and Gardens' new "Handyman's Book" suggests this money-saving idea:

Use lower grades of dimensioned stock and plywood to cut costs of materials — your biggest expense. Lower grades often meet job specifications, especially where materials won't show.

Use No. 2 and 3 grades for framing and furring; A-D (good one side) plywood for built-in and cabinets which will be painted. Holes can be filled and sanded.

Where To Look When You Need More Storage Space

Virtually every house has unused space that has valuable storage potential.

These out-of-the-way places, lined with aromatic red cedar, provide moth-repellent storage for all household woolens.

Here are some ways and means to increase your storage facilities:

Another location is in a dormer or irregularly shaped area adjacent to a sloping roof.

Crawl space also can be used for more than simply collecting junk. If you are short of storage space for blankets and woolens, build a cedar-lined storage chest on casters so that it can be rolled into and out of the crawl space.

Unused portions of the attic or basement also are natural locations for adding storage capacity. Frequently, some of the framework already exists, and it becomes a matter of adding to it.

Cedar closet lining for achieving moth repellency is available in pre-packaged bundles or cartons. The lumber material is tongue and grooved for ease of installation, and comes in random or uniform lengths.

The material is nailed to existing walls or framing, without any other backing. It requires no finishing.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jackie Gleason doesn't necessarily need the exposure on CBS which has to pay him anyway, but CBS certainly needs to have Jackie on the air this new season of our discontent.

During his years of one-hour weekly shows on CBS, I always felt that this was a bit too long for Red Skelton. Now that he's on NBC at 30 minutes weekly, that seems too short a time. Well, at least he's on, which has to be a plus.

"Bonanza" certainly had it made long before David Canary joined the cast as the Candy character for a couple of seasons, but he added a vital something to the series that is missing now that he is no longer on it.

When you watch syndicated reruns of certain of former network series, some of which were dropped by the nets several seasons ago, one has to wonder. Compared to much of the new stuff of the past two seasons, they seem like masterpieces of video entertainment.

Composer Aaron Copland's 70th birthday, today, will be saluted tardily with a Dec. 27 CBS telecast, season's first of the 14-year-old New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts. Leonard Bernstein will narrate and conduct "A Copland Celebration."

CBS has acquired rights for national telecasting in 1970-71 of several games of the rapidly rising American Basketball Association, which probably is only a year or two away from merging with the veteran National Basketball Association. The first broadcast will be the ABA All-Star contest Jan. 23. Some regular season Saturday and Sunday games, and at least two playoff games will be aired.

FIRST SHOT IN RUBELLA CAMPAIGN

William Byrne, 12, of San Rafael, receives a shot of rubella vaccine administered by Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer. The doctor was sharpening her aim yesterday in preparation for a five-week campaign starting Monday, against rubella, which afflicts unborn children. County health teams hope to vaccinate about 80 per cent of the county's school children. The jet injector shots will be painless, Dr. Albrecht said, so anxious youngsters may relax.

Cyclone Hits Pakistan; 25,000 Reported Dead

Tidal Waves Follow; Million Are Homeless

DACCA, East Pakistan (UPI) — A cyclone and 30-foot tidal waves that devastated the coastal islands and southern shores of East Pakistan with heavy loss of life yesterday is the greatest disaster in the nation's history, the government said today.

Initial casualty reports said 25,000 had died. Dispatches and visitors arriving from the scene said another 100,000 persons were missing, many of them feared dead.

Entire islands vanished in the storm, some reports said.

MILLION HOMELESS

A pilot who flew over the scene estimated as many as a million persons in a 10,000 square mile area may have been left homeless. He said there were no signs of life in some areas.

Newspapers said heavily-populated Hatiya island remained under 20 feet of water until yesterday afternoon. The Daily Purbodesh and Daily News said officials feared half of the island's 162,701 population may have perished. The newspaper reports were not confirmed.

2,000 ISLANDS

Many of the 2,000 offshore islands in the Bay of Bengal southeast of Calcutta were struck by cyclone winds up to 150 miles an hour and 30-foot tidal waves which raged Thursday night and early yesterday. Most remained cut off from communications, including Dubla Island where 13,000 Hindu pilgrims had gathered for religious rites under a

'Devil Winds' Whip Blazes In Timberland

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — Seven fires, three of them still out of control, burned more than 51,000 acres of brush and timberland in three Southern California counties early today.

The largest, the bear fire, charred more than 35,000 acres in the San Bernardino National Forest and destroyed one home. At one point that blaze was reported spreading at the rate of 1,000 acres an hour as Santa Ana "devil winds" of 60 to 70 miles per hour whipped through the San Bernardino mountains.

The fire, burning in the Running Springs area bout 15 miles from Big Bear Lake, a popular resort area, apparently was set by an arsonist. Authorities said the flames were threatening several small communities in the Smiley Park and Igos areas, which were ordered evacuated.

Another blaze in the San Bernardino National Forest, the Cucamonga fire, is burning out of control in an area so rugged that firemen had to use horses and mules to pack in equipment.

That blaze, rekindled from smouldering roots left over from the 40,000 acre Lytle Creek blaze which broke out Sept. 28 and burned for nearly a week, was whipped over more than 1,000 acres by the wind and spread into the Angeles National Forest.

More than 1,000 men were on the lines in the Bear fire and 65 in the Cucamonga fire with another 150 en route to that blaze. There have been no reports of injuries.

Three other fires charred about 5,600 acres in nearby Riverside County, but all were contained by 6 p.m. (PST) yesterday. All were blamed on arsonists.

The largest, called the Jordan Fire after the Reche Vista and Loma Linda blazes combined, charred more than 4,100 acres and destroyed three homes, one of which was unfinished, and a $20,000 California Division of Forestry fire truck. There were no injuries.

Fourth Juror Selected For Calley Trial

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—A former platoon leader who took his men on sweeps through six Vietnamese villages was selected today as the fourth member of the court-martial that will try Lt .William L. Calley Jr. on charges of murdering 102 Vietnamese civilians during a similar operation in 1968.

The new juror, Capt. Ronald J. Salem, 34, of Soux Falls, S. D., was the only court member selected during the Saturday session. At least five jurors are needed to complete the jury.

Failure to achieve the minimum necessary postponed the scheduled start of trial testimony Monday. Col. Reid W. Kennedy, the military judge, ordered the prosecution to have seven prospective jurors ready to be questioned Monday morning.

He adjourned the session at 10:40 a.m. after the prosecution had excused Maj. Nelson O. Newcombe of Auburn, Maine, and the defense had thrown out Lt. Col. Richard W. McKee, Tampa, Fla.

The prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel, requested that the court remove Salem because

UAW Members Begin Voting On G.M. Pact

DETROIT (UPI)—The 375,000 United Auto Workers who have been on strike against General Motors for 61 days began voting yesterday on a new contract which would put them on the same pay scale as junior executives.

Voting began at scattered locals around the country. The UAW said it expected to have the results by Friday, and would present them to G.M. the next day.

The workers in at least one plant — local 544 in the Pittsburgh suburb of West Mifflin — voted Saturday to accept both the national and local contracts, said John McCarrel, president of the local.

Both the production workers and skilled tradesmen must vote to accept the pact for it to be ratified.

Meanwhile, the UAW has scheduled resumption of contract talks with Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. for Nov. 23 — the day when the G.M. contract would go into effect if it is ratified. Although the union set a strike deadline of Dec. 7 against Ford if no agreement is reached by that time, no such deadline was set for Chrysler.

Henry Ford II, board chairman of Ford, said he expected his company would go along with the G.M. settlement almost completely. Chrysler's chief negotiator, John D. Leary, said the company would have to study the tentative G.M.-UAW act to determine how that would affect Chrysler's position at the bargaining table.

The UAW already has said that Chrysler's financial troubles and its position as the smallest of the Big Three automakers would not affect its demands for the same terms G.M. agreed to.

Earl Bramblett, G.M.'s chief bargainer, said yesterday the tentative pact would cost G.M. $2.4 billion in wages alone over its three-year life. He said G.M.'s UAW workers, who now make around $10,000 per year, would be making between $12,000 and $13,000 by the end of the contract's final year.

Sausalito Hopeful Ferry Sessions Will Solve Traffic Headache

By PAT ANGLE

Next week the City of Sausalito and the Golden Gate Bridge district will begin negotiating on the location of a permanent ferry terminal along the city's waterfront.

And some city officials are hoping the bargaining will result in an agreement which would make it possible to eliminate all non-resident parking in Sausalito's downtown area.

Yesterday, for reasons of economics and efficiency, bridge district directors approved a single Sausalito terminal, between Locust and Litho streets. The board acted even though the conditional use permit which allows the ferry service to operate in the city specifically calls for a terminal in the Marinship area and a downtown whistle stop for residents.

And the city council, which — with considerable reservation — approved the permit in July, has indicated clearly it wants two stops, including a northern terminal.

Because of the disagreement, city Mgr. Albert St. Cyr yesterday revealed city staff has been giving serious thought to try to effect a trade with the district.

His plan is that Sausalito might allow the one central terminal if the bridge district would agree to assist the city in establishing a northern parking lot large enough to accomodate the thousands of visitors who pour into the community each year.

In addition, the city would ask the bridge directors to agree to work with Sausalito on a shuttle bus service which would bring visitors from the northern lot to the central commercial area.

Although St. Cyr admitted many problems must be worked out before any agreement is reached, he said the plan the city envisions could be the key to curbing the downtown traffic crush — if the district will agree to help, financially and otherwise.

St. Cyr said ample parking in the north and easy bus access into town could make it possible for the city to remove its four parking lots and all meters in the central business area, leaving only enough spaces for residents who would park by permit only.

Marin Will Seek Federal Security Aid

Marin County will seek federal funds to help pay increased security costs at the Civic Center since the Aug. 7 shoot-out and Oct. 8 courtroom explosion.

County Administrator Alan Bruce said yesterday, however, that the prospect of getting outside aid does not appear promising.

But Bruce said he will recommend to the board of supervisors that the county apply for funds through the federal Omnibus Crime and Safe Streets Act anyway.

Bruce said he has already written to the California Council on Criminal Justice, which makes recommendations for fund appropriations under the act, and pointed out that 24 additional deputies, added equipment for metal detection and communications and other building security measures will cost the county $380,000 a year.

But Paul R. Falzone, criminal justice specialist with the council, told Bruce that mutual aid from San Quentin and Marin cities should be sought instead of hiring permanent deputies.

The executive committee of the Association of Bay Area Governments also recommend-

Bonn, Warsaw Sign Historic Treaty

WARSAW (UPI)—West Germany and Communist Poland reached agreement after a marathon negotiating session today on an historic goodwill treaty designed to end 25 years of animosity.

The pact, like the nonaggression treaty signed by West Germany and the Soviet Union last August, would include West Germany's acceptance of Poland's western border at the Oder and Neisse Rivers.

Scott Urges GOP To Uphold Broadcast Veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott urged his Republican colleagues today to uphold President Nixon's veto — bitterly protested by Democrats—of legislation restricting candidate spending on campaign broadcasts.

"I believe campaign spending should be limited," Scott said in a letter to GOP senators. "I do not believe, however, that it should be limited only to one form of advertising as this bill does."

Democrats dismissed Nixon's argument that the legislation was not broad enough, charging that he merely wanted to protect Republican candidates backed by the much greater financial resources of his party. Even if signed, the bill would have had virtually no effect on broadcast spending in the recent election.

The bill Nixon vetoed Oct. 12 would have limited spending on radio and television in general elections to 7 cents for each vote cast in the last general election for the same office, or $20,000, whichever is higher. In primary elections, the candidates would be limited to half that amount.

The curb would cover presidential and vice presidential candidates in the general election, and candidates for Senate, House, Governor, and Lieutenant governor in primaries and general elections.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield has indicated he would call a vote on whether to override the veto soon after Congress begins its post-election session Monday. The outcome is considered close.

The Senate originally approved the spending limitation 58 to 27 and later approved the

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Strike Is Over

Government and labor spokesmen disagreed about the effectiveness of the strike, the third called by the 2.5 million member general confederation of a labor (CGT) in a little over a month to protest the government's economic policies.

The CGT issued a statement late Friday claiming worker absenteeism throughout the nation "had been higher than in two previous strikes, on Oct. 9 and 22."

Mamie's Birthday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower celebrated her 74th birthday a day early Friday as guest of honor at a League of Republican Women tea in Washington. She said she has a secret for staying young.

The widow of President Eisenhower said she lives "from day to day" and finds it all exciting. She planned to have another birthday celebration today with some of her old friends in Washington.

Parcel Post Hike

Post Office Department spokesmen said the increases vary according to the weight of packages and the distances they are being sent.

TV Floor Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A sharply divided panel of Democrats has voted to recommend that all television coverage be banned from the floor of the 1972 Democratic National Convention. The group charged unfair coverage of the 1968 Chicago convention.

The recommendation, if approved by the party's regular convention rules committee, would affect mainly small portable TV cameras that allow on-the-spot coverage of floor events.

The recommendation, approved 7 to 6 by the newly formed rules commission, would allow a large platform on the convention floor for TV cameras and would allow cameras on balconies above the floor.

U.S., MEXICO

Relationship Is Better Than Ever

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Mexican president-elect Luis Echeverria agree relations between the neighbor nations are the best in history.

Nixon and Echeverria, who will take office Dec. 1, met for nearly three hours Friday at the White House. Spokesmen for the White House described the session as a successful attempt to "get acquainted and build a personal relationship."

Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, said the two leaders agreed relations between Mexico and the United States are "the best they have been in the history of the two countries." He said they also agreed their efforts would be directed toward "enhancing and maintaining this relationship."

Nixon reviewed U.S. foreign policy for Echeverria, Ziegler said. The spokesman said they discussed "current hemisphere matters" but he declined to say whether Chile's diplomatic recognition of Cuba was brought up.

The leaders also agreed to implement recent agreements between the two countries, including one establishing the middle of the Rio Grande river as the border between Mexico and the United States, Ziegler said, He said they would exchange official visits later but set no dates.

Echeverria was accompanied to Washington by his wife and daughter. They lunched with the President and Mrs. Nixon and Nixon and Echeverria then met for an hour and 20 minutes.

Echeverria, at a news conference before he returned to Mexico, said he told Nixon that "the best defense against Communism in the Americas is the strengthening of Democratic institutions in those countries where democracy is still alive." He said he had found in Nixon a "good friend of Mexico and a good personal friend."

Angela Queen Despite Poll Results

A poll of the student body Friday showed 1,200 students opposed and 495 supported the Student Senate's naming of Miss Davis as the honorary queen. There are 7,800 daytime students at SCC.

Miss Davis, in custody in New York City, was indicted this week by the Marin County grand jury on charges that she was involved in the plot which led to the Aug. 7 Hall of Justice shoot-out in Marin County in which four persons including a judge were killed.

The senate Monday night voted 12-3 to designate Miss Davis honorary queen. But the senate decided 14-9 Thursday to conduct the student poll.

State Concludes Tate Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The state of California has finally wound up its case in the Tate murder trial after 83 witnesses, 17,659 pages of testimony and 297 pieces of evidence over a period of five months.

Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi was expected to pronounce formally the words, "the state rests," on Monday after arguments over introduction of photographs, documents, knives, rope, a gun, clothing and other exhibits for examination by the jury.

Bugliosi announced late Friday that the prosecution had no more witnesses to call against Charles Manson and his three female codefendants, Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten.

The defense was expected to begin its case by introducing motions for a directed verdict of acquittal. If that is denied, defense lawyers will start calling an estimated 20 witnesses, expected to include Manson himself but not the young women.

Bugliosi noted the tremendous length of the trial and estimated it would go beyond Christmas.

The district attorney said the blame for such an extended trial rested mainly on the defense. He noted that chief state witness Linda Kasabian had testified for three and one-half days on direct examination but had spent 15 and one-half days undergoing cross examination.

Another key state witness, Dianne Lake, spent 11 minutes on direct examination, he said, but the defense used two weeks of court time in cross examination.

The final prosecution witnesses were two psychiatrists who testified that the 17-year-old Miss Lake was mentally competent to appear for the state although at one time she was suffering from an LSD-induced psychosis.

Her testimony about the August, 1969, slayings had been among the most damaging against Manson and the three women.

At the end of Friday's court session, Judge Charles H. Older ordered Patricia Krenwinkel to produce printed samples of her handwriting to compare with words daubed in blood on a refrigerator and the walls of the Leno LaBianca home.

Older warned her that if she refused, the fact of refusal could be used as circumstantial evidence with regard to her guilt or innocence.

Syrian Military In Bloodless Take-Over

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Syrian military officers favoring a more flexible Middle East policy seized control of the government in Damascus in an apparently bloodless coup Friday and arrested many top civilian officials.

A spokesman for the Baathist party, ousted in the coup, said in Beirut that the rebels led by Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Hafez Assad occupied key public buildings in the Syrian capital.

President Noureddin Atassi, leader of the Baathist Party, was placed under house arrest and former Premier Yussef Zayyen also was detained.

The coup was made after Baathist leaders threatened to fire Assad and his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Mustafa Tlas, from their posts for offering "surrender solutions" in speeches at an emergency party congress, the spokesman said.

Arab diplomats said the military officers had been unhappy over Syria's intervention in the Jordanian civil war in September.

Rubin, Friends Agree To Leave; Papers Are Happy

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) —"Chicago Seven" defendant Jerry Rubin agreed to leave for the United States today rather than be deported by the British government. British newspapers bade him farewell with such headlines as "Out!" and "Good Riddance."

Rubin, 31, leader of the Youth International Party (Yippies), and fellow-Yippie Stewart Albert were arrested Friday and held overnight pending their departure. They had come to Northern Ireland from England after being told by the Home Office their seven-day visas to stay in Britain had expired.

When arrested Friday after holding a news conference in a two-story house on the outskirts of Belfast, Rubin shouted at police: "You have no authority to arrest me. This is Ireland, not England."

"The most important part of our trip was to come to Belfast," he said. "This is the important part. This is the battleground.

"Belfast is England's Vietnam," he said.

During the past two years the Northern Irish capital has seen frequent violence between the nation's protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority over civil rights.

Rubin said he and Albert "are being deported because (officials) are afraid of our ideas and our actions."

Home Secretary Reginald Maulding insisted this week they be expelled because their presence in Britain was "not conducive to the public good."

The Yippies are "silly, vulgar, noisy, obscene, insulting and, at their worst, violent," the normally restrained Daily Telegraph commented. It warned that their brand of rebellion by force "finds an ordered society and everywhere seeks to create chaos."

Rubin, Albert and about 15 of their friends disrupted the David Frost televion show in London a week ago with a barrage of flower petals, four-letter obsenities and water-pistol markmanship.

Deputy Admits Using Baton During Rioting

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

FAIRFIELD — A Marin County sheriff's deputy testified under cross-examination yesterday he was forced to strike Alvis Dean Bailey "three or four times" with the butt of his baton when Bailey resisted arrest.

Bailey, 43, of San Francisco, is one of seven persons on trial in Solano County Superior Court on 36 charges stemming from the riotous pro-labor demonstration outside the Independent-Journal on Valentine's Day.

Deputy Douglas J. Barrett, completing his first day on the stand, acknowledged prodding Bailey with his baton in order to get him to move along after his arrest. Barrett testified for the prosecution earlier in the day that Bailey struck two officers with a picket sign handle and resisted arrest violently.

Under questioning from defense attorney Robert Y. Bell, Barrett said Bailey suffered facial cuts when the defendant fell on the ground during his arrest and officers were forced to place their knees on his head in order to handcuff him.

Barrett conceded he told officers who led Bailey away for booking that Bailey should be booked for disturbing the peace and resisting arrest, not assaulting a police officer — a charge now lodged against him as a result of a grand jury indictment.

Bell read from Barrett's report of the Feb. 14 incident, in which he said only one deputy was struck while trying to confiscate Bailey's picket sign handle. Barrett testified he saw Sgt. Robert Gaddini struck on the side of his riot helmet after failing to grab the stick from Bailey and that another officer, whom Barrett was unable to identify, was similarly hit.

Barrett identified pictures of Bailey's arrest, including one showing Barrett's arm around the defendant's neck as he was pulled from a crowd of demonstrators, and was shown another photograph taken before the arrest depicting police officer weilding a baton against Bailey's neck to move him.

Barrett testified he heard the first police order to the crowd to disperse about 20 to 30 minutes after Bailey's arrest. Besides assaulting a police officer, Bailey also is charged with failing to disperse, participating in a riot and in an unlawful assembly, remaining at a place of a riot, delaying and obstructing an officer and with possession of a black jack.

The trial is to resume Monday.

Teacher Responds To Hitch's Blast

BERKELEY (UPI) —The effectiveness of undergraduate instruction at the University of California is on a downward slide and the regents, school administrators and Gov. Ronald Reagan are to blame, says the American Federation of Teachers.

Paul Goodman, campus chairman of the California College and University Council of the AFT, said Friday overcrowded classes and insufficient contact between students and teachers have resulted from inadquate budgetary support from the governor and legislature.

He said the problems can be traced to the governor, U.C. president Charles Hitch and the regents "who want to cover up by blaming the faculty."

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A $2.5 million suit against ABC newscaster Alex Dreier and others over a San Mateo building project has been settled out of court.

Attorney Conrad Donner, representing the plaintiff, Samuel N. Garrotto of San Francisco, said the settlement was "substantial" but would not disclose the amount.

Dreier, who maintains a home in San Rafael and another in Riverside, and his partners O.T. Hogan and Jack R. Hogan of Chicago, originally were sued in U.S. District Court over dealings with Garrotto over his $15 million Mills Square development in San Mateo. Garrotto claimed their action led to his becoming "physically and mentally unstable" and deprived him of his fair share of profits in the venture.

Garrotto was convicted in July 1969 of killing a San Mateo business partner, but later was ruled mentally incompetent at the time of the killing.

That partner was Robert J. Barocchini, 47, brother of Frank A. Barocchini of Kentfield.

The federal civil suit was dismissed in September when the judge ruled it was a matter only for California courts. Rather than refile in California, the parties submitted to arbitration and agreed on a settlement.

Threat To Surgery

BOSTON (UPI)—The fear of malpractice suits against surgeons is threatening the quality of surgical care and increasing the cost to patients, according to the top executive officer of the American College of Surgeons.

Case Transfer Is Ruled Out

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court has ruled that a taxpayers' suit against the Board of Regents of the University of California must be heard in Los Angeles County.

The citizens are seeking as taxpayers to restrain the regents from spending money to carry out the resolutions.

The Los Angeles Court of Appeal had ordered the case transferred to Alameda County as the legal residence of the regents.

Proposal On Agenda

A proposal by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors for a county-wide housing authority will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m.

The council will consider participating in the county plan to provide more housing for low income families through federally financed subsidy plans.

Switchboard Of Marin Quarters Hit By Fire

An early morning fire today destroyed a kitchen and bedroom and caused extensive damage to the headquarters of Switchboard of Marin, a telephone information and referral center at 1017 D Street, San Rafael.

The fire was caused by a reignition of a mattress fire at 1 a.m., which wasn't reported to the fire department, firemen said.

The unidentified occupants had believed they had extinguished the earlier fire, according to firemen.

Damage to the two-story building was estimated at $6,000. The building was among those damaged when a massive fire wiped out a block of downtown businesses in July 1957.

Switchboard of Marin's use permit to operate at the house had expired, but the San Rafael Planning Commission on Aug. 12 gave the organization a 90-day extension to allow time for directors to find a new location.

full moon, an auspicious occasion for Hindus.

Pakistani officials dispatched a motor launch to check on reports all or most of the pilgrim were drowned.

Reports from unofficial sources repeatedly spoke of islands either missing or still inundated 24 hours after the giant storm.

It was the ninth deadly cyclone to strike East Pakistan in 10 years and appeared to have caused damage in an area of 10,000 square miles with a population of 5 million.

Correspondent Kamaluddin Ahmed of the Eastern News Agency visited the coastal zone and said he counted 350 floating bodies. Others were stuck in tree branches or lying in paddy fields. He reported after a partial survey of the damaged coast that scoresk of other person were dying.

Ahmed reported 90 per cent of the houses were destroyed along the 300 mile coastal belt between Noakhali adn Chittagong. He said thousands of cattle perished and there was heavy damage to standing crops. Storm damage also extended inland the Khulna and Barisal districts, 100 miles southwest of Dacca.

A pilot, Abdur Rahman of the East Pakistan Flying Club, said "a big seagoing ship was torn apart northwest of Barissal offshore island and a cargo ship was grounded to the northeast."

same provision in a compromise bill negotiated by Senate-House conferees, 60 to 19.

If the original vote more accurately reflects Senate sentiment, at least two Republicans will have to change positions to deny Democrats the necessary two-thirds majority, to approve the bill again and make it law. Those two will have to come from the 13 GOP senators who voted for the curbs.

On the basis of the later 60 to 19 vote, eight of the 18 Republicans would have to change their votes against.

In his veto message, Nixon said the bill did not limit the overall cost of campaigning but merely the amount spent on broadcasts.

Salem had said under questioning when he first heard of the Calley case, he thought a man would have to be berserk to kill more than 100 persons and that his men would have prevented such an "insane act."

The judge denied Daniels' motion, saying it was evident Salem had presumed the charge was that Calley personally killed 102. The government has said it intends to prove the murders were committed either by Calley or subordinates under his direction.

Burglar's Work Is Non-Partisan

A non-partisan burglar who broke into a San Rafael business today smashed the pictures of three presidents in a collection of photographs of U.S. presidents.

Singled out for destruction at Carson Manufacturing Co., 446 Francisco Boulevard, were the photoes of John Adams, a federalist; Dwight D. Eisenhower, a Republican, and Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson, police said.

The burglar bashed the photographs after attempting to pry a safe full of business papers and rummaging through offices, police said.

ed that the county not apply for Safe Streets Act funds.

Egil Krogh Jr., deputy assistant to President Richard M. Nixon for domestic affairs, wrote the supervisors saying the county should first approach the state for help. "You can freely utilize state manpower and funds, and possibly even the National Guard," wrote Krogh.

Marin's appeal for help will go before the Judicial Process Task Force of the California Council on Criminal Justice on Dec. 10 at a 9:30 a.m. meeting at Sacramento Metropolitan Airport.

MILK PRICE HIKES FOR NORTH BAY

Marin and Sonoma counties are among six Northern California counties in which minimum milk prices will be increased Nov. 22, the state Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Marin consumers will suffer the greatest increase with the retail price of a quart rising one cent to 28 cents. Half gallons will sell for 54 cents, an increase of two pennies, the department said.

Prices in Sonoma, Lake, Napa, and parts of Solano and Mendocino counties will be increased a half-cent on quarts and one cent on half gallons, the department said.

Settlement In Lucky Stores Strike

A strike against Lucky Stores Inc., during which the supermarket chain once gave away $300,000 worth of food to keep it from being wasted, was reported settled today.

Officials of a Lucky Store in Fairfax said settlement was reached with the Office and Professional Workers Local 29 in negotiation Friday and early today.

No details were immediately announced.

Fairfax store manager Alden Hennings said picket lines there were pulled this morning. He said he was relieved the strike was over but that he was "hurried, trying to get back to a full operating schedule."

Sausalito's Plan On Solution To Traffic

told of the city staff's ideas, said the district "is anxious to work with Sausalito to see what may be possible," but indicated he could make absolutely no commitments at this time.

The city manager, too, said his proposal would take long and careful study before the city could even begin to think of acting and many critical questions must be answered. For example, would a northern parking lot operation and bus service bring in enough money to replace the approximately $300,000 the city would lose in parking revenues if downtown lots and meters were eliminated? And, could Sausalito insure that visitors and tourists would not ignore the northern lot and park in residential streets close to the downtown area, thereby crowding out local residents and their guests?

But is downtown parking could be removed and the paved areas turned into parks he feels such a change could benefit all Sausalitans.

"If this could be made to work ,it would be to everyone's advantage," St. Cyr said, adding he believes decentralization of parking — toward which the city council has been moving in recent years — is a necessity.

He admitted downtown merchants may at first be hostile and fearful their businesses will suffer. But he feels strongly if a northern lot and shuttle service provides easy, dependable and convenient access to central Sausalito, more people will come to visit and to shop.

The city manager emphasized no total parking ban will be undertaken unless the city can be certain downtown businesses will not suffer. "It is surely against our best interests to hurt our businesses, since they provide such a large share of city revenues," he explained.

Four city councilmen, Mayor Alexander R. Imlay, Robin Sweeny, Earl Dunphy and Stephen A. Fraser, reacted to St. Cyr's plan with cautious optimism, particulary since it has not been formally presented to them.

Of the four, Councilman Fraser was the most enthusiastic, but he toohad reservations. "It is generally conceded Sausalito's congested waterfront is really one of the ugliest places on the bay, and consequently attracts a low type of visitor and junky shops," he said. Removing downtown parking, according to Fraser, would not only improve the quality of the city's tourists, but also provide "an opportunity to enhance forever the downtown waterfront and make it an area people, especially local residents, can use."

Imlay said a joint venture between the city and bridge district might be advantageous, because "if either had to do it alone (provide northern parking and bus service), it might never happen." But he said he could pass no judgement on city staff's plan at this time.

Councilmen Dunphy and Mrs. Sweeney both said they would not be opposed to the plan as long as it is carried out in a proper fashion and caused no harm to Sausalito as a whole.

The only councilman who registered strong objections to any "agreement" which would allow the central terminal was Wyman Hicks, who termed the bridge board's planned location "ludicrous."

Hicks, who has been most vocal in demanding a Marinship terminal, said the proposed site would locate the ferry facilities right next to the city's future municipal buildings and waterfront park. "It is just insane to disgorge 4,000 tourists into Sausalito at that point," he said and noted the bridge district is going to have to build a northern parking lot, since the city is "certainly not going to permit" more large parking areas south of Marinship.

"The city doesn't have to make any bargains with the bridge district to stop downtown tourist parking, because Mr. Luehring has already said the district will work with the city in setting up a northern lot," Hicks said.

Predictably, the two representatives of businessmen's groups interviewed saw the entire concept of a downtown without parking as a disaster.

"Parking downtown is essential as it is in any well-planned shopping center," said William Remak, interim secretary of Sausalito Artists and Merchants.

Robert Bauerle, president of the Sausalito Businessmen's Association had stronger words. "If this plan is adopted, it is evident the city council is out to destroy the main source of its income — tourism," Bauerle said. "The resident is going to suffer with a bigger tax bite to offset the loss of parking, sales tax and business license revenues the merchants now provide."

He continued: "If the egomania of certain councilmen is allowed to continue to dictate city policy, Sausalito could well become another Vina del Mar Park, closed 24-hours a day, seven days a week, a city without tourists and traffic, but one in which only millionaires could afford to live."

MORE THAN IT LOOKS LIKE — This is the Varian Clinac 4 linear accelerator which a volunteer campaign organization seeks to buy to replace the cobalt machine for treatment of cancer at Marin General Hospital. The rather ordinary-looking device has a $140,000 price tag.

$4,150 Is Raised For Linear Accelerator

A campaign to buy a linear accelerator to treat cancer patients at Marin General Hospital has raised $4,150 toward its goal of $80,000, Mrs. Walter Strauss of Terra Linda, Marin Medical Society Auxiliary president, reported today.

The linear accelerator would replace the cobalt machine which has been in use at the hospital for nine years. That machine, according to Ray K. Bolinger, hospital administrator, must soon be replaced as it is wearing out. And the linear accelerator is considered a much more satisfactory device, since it can pinpoint its rays on the cancer-infected cells much more accurately.

It will cost $140,000, and re-shielding the room which now houses the cobalt machine will add another $20,000. The hospital district, however, has put up $60,000 from its depreciation fund and agreed to pay the $20,000 for re-shielding the room.

First contributions to what is planned as a countywide fund-raising campaign were reported by Mrs. Strauss as $2,000 from Bernard Saccone of San Rafael, $650 from Sally Stanford of Sausalito, and $1,500 from an anonymous doctor.

The project of buying a replacement for the cobalt machine was first undertaken by the medical society auxiliary. As it proved too big for that organization alone, an advisory board was organized under Mrs. Strauss as chairman.

The board plans to canvass the county for funds, with the slogan: "Invest in something we hope you'll never need."

Richmond's Board Bans KQED In School System

RICHMOND, Calif. (UPI) — The Richmond Board of Education has banned educational television station KQED from the district's schools after protests that the station's news programs were biased.

By a vote of 3-2 the board voted not to use the educational station's instruction programs, which had been used for several previous years.

Goy Fuller, board president, said he was opposed to KQED because of its "thoroughly biased news coverage."

Another trustee, Virgil Gay, said "My kids, frankly, watch too much TV at home." He also accused the KQED of "irresponsible programming."

In the past the district has paid up to $15,000 for instructional programs and materials supplied by the station.

Garbage Rate Hiked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The city garbage rate board has approved a 30 per cent increase in the collection rate, boosting most homeowners' bills to $2.40 a month.

The Picture Of Mrs. Thoresen

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Louise Thoresen, accused of pumping five fatal gunshots into her husband's back, is being portrayed by defense attorneys as the innocent victim of his volcanic and violent temper.

Three witnesses Friday corroborated earlier testimony that Mrs. Thoresen had been beaten several times by her husband, William E. Thoresen III, 32, an eccentric gun collector and heir to a Chicago steel fortune. William McDermott, a neighbor, said Mrs. Thoresen showed him bruises on her arm the night before the June 10 killing and said:

"The last three days have been a living hell." David Schutter, a Honolulu attorney who once did extensive legal work for the Thoresens, said Mrs. Thoresen's fear of death was so great that she was willing to give up her only child so that her husband would be fully satisfied by proposed divorce proceedings.

$500,000 Holdup

ATLANTA (UPI)—On the basis of an informant's rundown of the victims, Atlanta police say the haul from a mass holdup after the Muhammed Ali-Jerry Quarry fight is in the neighborhood of $500,000. Their earlier estimate was $200,000.

Puppies Left In Humane Society Were Put To Sleep Within Hours

A few days ago a friend took three two-months old puppies into the Humane Society because he couldn't find homes for them. He thought they'd be placed.

Less than four hours later, someone called him to tell him about a little girl who wanted a dog, so my friend telephoned the Society — and they said the puppies had already been put to sleep.

The tragic thing is that the woman in charge assured him they would try to find good homes for the animals — and then they were gassed just four hours later.

Helen, does this happen often? — NANCY

DEAR NANCY:

I'm assured by several animal shelters that it doesn't happen often, and shouldn't happen at all unless the dogs are incurably sick. Animals are kept for a specified period — not hours but usually days — and real effort is made to find them homes. Surely this was a mistake. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I'd like to add a few words to "Divided's" version of "What are Separated Parents?"

Separated parents are ones that used to love each other and had three children born out of that love, but now only see each other to discuss divorce plans.

It's when your Dad comes over to get his mail and leaves, still burning from the argument he and Mom just had.

It's Dad calling and asking you and your little brother if you have anything special to talk to him about and your answer, "No," knowing that your thoughts and feelings wouldn't change the decision he's already made.

It's having Mom go out and get a job, and coming home from school to an empty house.

It's having people say, "Hey, I saw your father the other day," and you answer, "Oh really?" knowing it's been days since you've seen him.

It's when Mom has appointments with the lawyer and she always comes back crying.

It's running out of excuses when people ask, "Where's your dad" because you just can't bear to say the words, "They're getting a divorce."

Its' thinking, "Who's going to carve the Thanksgiving turkey?" Or will there be one?

It's remembering that a little while ago it was "our furniture," and the dishes belonged to the family. Now it's "Your father's chair." "Your father will be coming over tomorrow to pick out his dishes," etc.

It's wondering what went wrong along the way and wondering if anything will ever be wholly right again. — DIANE

DEAR HELEN:

My mother doesn't make sense to me. She says I can wear pants on cold days, but I guess she means below freezing, because when the other girls are in pants I still have to wear dumb dresses — and it gets awfully cold in classes. Isn't 60 degrees okay for pants? — COLD

DEAR COLD:

It is for me, but I'm not your mother. Hope she "unthaws" soon. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Gaucho Pants Can Be Varied

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to know more about the gaucho pants that are being featured in the fashion magazines. Are they difficult to wear, are they for sportswear only, and what is the correct length for them?

NANCY R.

DEAR NANCY,

The gaucho pants are varied, both in fabrics and accompaniments. For that "south of the border" feeling, a swashbuckling cape would be perfect, for the "frontier look", add or top with a cropped belted jacket, or lastly, for that causal country or city look, top your gaucho with an easy jacket and vest. The gaucho look is a sporty look but the imagination of designers has turned this into a rich gaucho look by the varied types of fabrics used.

Since they look best when worn with boots, I would say the length should be well below the knees, covering the tops of the boots. Anyone who looks well in a rather full A-line skirt can usually wear the gaucho pants with success.

MRS. MORTON S. Kantor, Muskegon, Mich is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

"I have found one particular slack pattern I like and use it for all of my wool slacks. Instead of lining all my slacks separately, I make one pair of slacks out of a nice firm, soft lining material, preferably polyester using a flesh color. Make a shorter waist and use snaps for a smoother closing. I always put these on first and then my wool slacks. I find the slacks fit better, wear longer and do not stretch out. It also saves hours of time that it takes to line each pair separately."

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm only 16 years old and although I like the mini skirts and dresses, I wouldn't mind having a few midi outfits in my wardrobe, especially since I sew and can afford to experiment a little more with fashion. My problem is that I'm only 5 foot 2 and I want to know if there is any way I can wear the midi length without cutting my height?

MARLA L.

DEAR MARLA,

You can wear the new length if you are careful with your selection and if your body measurements compliment your height. I would suggest an empire length for the bodice which would give you a longer length than a garment cut off or emphasized in any way at the exact waistline.

Also, a one color look will help, either wear boots or hose and shoes in the same color as your garment. Another way to make the midi look well on a short person is to take advantage of the slits that we find in coats, skirts, and dresses. Often these slits are as high as the original mini. Naturally with more fabric than ever used before, you will have to be cautious about excessive fullness in your clothes and choose instead, patterns with a leaner look.

One of the nicest things about the new length is that if you make it and don't like it, you can always shorten it to the correct proportion for yourself (much different than the story that is facing most of us when we try to lengthen something that didn't have the required extra fabric for this operation).

The part of your letter I most enjoyed was when you said you liked the minis but wanted to add a few midis. If all of us would adapt this attitude instead of trying to make a complete changeover, I truly think we could learn to enjoy all lengths and wear whatever our mood dictated for any particular time or occasion.

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to make a fake fur poncho for several reasons. First, they look easy to make; secondly, they seem to be a part of the fashion picture, and last, they sort of bridge the gap for the new skirt lengths. I am wondering if these need to be lined and if so, what could I use to keep the poncho from becoming too bulky?

MRS. J.B.

DEAR MRS. J.B.:

I love all of your reasons for deciding to make the fake fur poncho, and you'll never get such a strong fashion message for so little money. Fake furs usually run about 54 inches wide, the same as most woolens.

You will also notice that some of them, especially the ones with a stenciled design on the right side, will have a geometric or Aztec design on the wrong side which almost resembles a tapestry. These types of fake furs could be made without a separate lining.

The edges of the poncho could be turned back about 2 inches to either the right or the wrong side, depending on your preference. The outer edges could also be bound in vinyl or wool braids.

If you decide to line your poncho, be sure to use a lightweight fabric. We have found that a lightweight wool jersey provides extra warmth as well as "holding power", to prevent the poncho from slipping off your shoulders. The lining is usually brought to the edges of the garment, machine stitched and turned right side out. These are fun and can be a great addition to everyone's wardrobe, including children.

In 1912 the Pi Beta Phi Settlement School was established in a remote Tennessee mountain area, Gatlinburg, where 200 families lacked educational facilities. In conjunction with the school the first cottage industry in the United States, Arrowcraft, was established to provide a livelihood for native craftsmen.

NINE 10-year-old members of Mill Valley's Tawatina Camp Fire Girl Group made a donation Thursday of $35 to the Forest Meadows Development Center in San Rafael for retarded children.

They earned the money through a bake sale held last week under the supervision of their leaders, Mrs. Pat Larson and Mrs. Jerry Young. Mrs. Marlys Kehm, supervising teacher at the school, said this is the first time a group of young girls has given a benefit for the center.

MUSIC REVIEW

'Faust' Production Overcomes Problems

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Gounod's "Faust," in a San Francisco Opera season which has had an unusual number of superb productions, may not be outstanding, but it has many virtues nevertheless.

The opera, in the third of five scheduled performances last night, apparently has benefited from practice, for on the whole it went smoothly, and certainly the audience loved it.

It is the kind of opera that critics often find fair game because it contains so much overly familiar melodious music and because it has some of the excesses of outmoded "grand" opera. But much of the music is truly beautiful when sung by beautiful voices, and there were several last night.

Interest centered in the American debuts of tenor Alain Vanzo of the Paris Opera as Faust and soprano Judith Beckman (winner of the 1961 San Francisco Opera auditions) as Marguerite, and in the local debuts of Roger Soyer of the Paris Opera as Mephistopheles and baritone Dominic Cossa of the New York City Opera as Valentin.

I was expecially impressed with Soyer's powerful, resonant bass that made him the focus of attention in many scenes, His Mephistopheles is sinister and evil, but he does not have the diabolical charm and verve which the great Bulgarian basso Ghiaurov showed the last time the opera was done here.

A very satisfying and attractive Marguerite, Miss Beckman has a lyrical soprano voice with an almost mezzo quality but also the ability to soar clearly into the stratosphere. I have heard better singing of the brilliant jewel song, but her appearance with Mephistopheles in the cathedral and her final prayer before her death in prison were peerless.

Vanzo was not a particularly ardent lover, but his clear, ringing tenor was exciting when it did not lose its beauty at full volume on his highest notes, especially in the famed "Salut Demeure" in the garden scene. The purity of his French diction was a delight.

Though Cossa was a very persuasive Valentin, his baritone was strong but not entirely smooth in tonal quality. Among the most effective bits of dramatic action were his duel with Faust and his death scene cursing Marguerite.

Whenever a role calls for comic touches, that versatile singing actress Sona Cervena is at her best, and the gossipy neighbor Marthe gave her that opportunity. I have never understood why so many composers assign young men's roles to women, but mezzo Sylvia Anderson as Siebel, another admirer of Marguerite, has the stature and full-bodied voice to carry it off well. The minor role of the student Wagner was well sung by baritone Richard Lombardi.

Stage direction by Allen Fletcher in his first work with the San Francisco Opera was lively, but big scenes looked too busy and crowded. Brief tableaux were colorful.

While the Skalicki-West sets were not distinguished, each was right in mood, with the most successful being the starkly simple cathedral scene, enhanced by organ music. The creaky parting of the prison gates was pure bathos that ruined what should be an inspiring finale.

Jean Perisson's smooth, sensitive conducting confirmed my opinion in "Carmen" that he has very special gifts.

Because of the excellence of the chorus, concerted numbers were high points — even the banal "Soldiers' Chorus."

HOMECOMING QUEEN — Jeanne Reiser was chosen homecoming queen today at Novato High School. She was one of eight candidates and was chosen to reign at this afternoon's football game and the coronation ball tonight in the new school gymnasium.

No Reason For Skyjack

MIAMI (UPI)—A sight-seeing hijacker with an old pistol and an Afro hair style forced an Eastern Air Lines jet with 82 persons aboard to fly to Cuba Friday shortly after takeoff from Raleigh, N.C.

"He was pretty free and easy with that gun—he held it on everybody," said Capt. Thomas W. Mayberry, pilot of the hijacked DC9.

The hijacker, identified by Eastern as a Gilbert Jones, boarded the first class section at Raleigh-Durham airport and commandeered the Atlanta-bound flight 21 minutes after it took off.

Princess Grace Agrees To Benefit Appearance

LONDON (UPI) —Princess Grace of Monaco, who foresook an acting career as Grace Kelly to wed Prince Rainier, will return to the stage for the first time in more than 14 years Monday.

Lord Mountbatten of Burma said today the princess has agreed to stand in for Noel Coward whose hospitalization this week after an attack of pleurisy prevented him from appearing at a concert at London's Royal Festival Hall for the benefit of the United World Colleges.

Sir Noel and Frank Sinatra headed the list of entertainment personaliteis who agreed to take part in the concert.

"I was naturally worried about who would replace Sir Noel, remembering that it had to be someone who would know the stars well and have the respect of the audience," Lord Mountbatten said.

"On Wednesday night, I rang Princess Grace and asked if she would honor us. With her characteristic generosity, she agreed."

Lord Mountbatten, who is president of hte International Council of United World Colleges, said Member of Parliament Jeffrey Archer, concert organizer, flew to Monaco Thursday morning to brief Princess Grace on details of the affair.

"Frank Sinatra was so moved by her immediate response that he offered his private jet to the princess. She will be traveling back to Nice on his plane on Tuesday."

Tuesday is Monaco's national day.

On Solution To London Traffic: Just 'Scare 'Em'

LONDON (UPI) — Michael Pearson's formula for coping with London rush hour traffic: If you can't beat 'em, scare 'em.

Pearson, a 26-year-old heir to Britain's Viscount Cowdrey, has augmented his $72,000 personal fleet of two Ferraris and a Rolls-Royce with a 1941 Daimler "Dingo" armored car.

"I can't think of a better vehicle for avoiding being externally cut out by taxis and London Transport buses," the bearded former Life Guards regiment officer said Friday.

Two Crashes In Marin Injure Four

Four persons, including three members of one family, were injured in two traffic accidents in Marin yesterday, the California Highway Patrol reported.

David Meehan, 14, of Tomales, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with a concussion and scalp cuts suffered in an accident at 7:50 a.m. on the Bolinas-Fairfax Road.

Meehan was a passenger in an automobile driven by Florence G. Meehan, 45, of Tomales.

The highway patrol said Mrs. Meehan was passing an oil truck on a section of the road being resurfaced when her car collided head on with a truck and trailer rig driven by Donald L. O'Hare, 39, of Richmond.

A Lucas Valley woman was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General with multiple bruises and muscle spasms. Sherry Harris, 20, of 4800 Lucas Valley Road, was admitted to the hospital at 8:10 p.m. following a traffic accident. Details of the crash were not available.

MUSIC REVIEW

By THERON A. NEWELL

"Burlesque Ain't Dead" was a crowd pleaser, but a big departure from past flings and bashes of the Novato Community Players.

The fast-paced show came off smoothly last night at the Novato Community House. It will be repeated again at 8:30 p.m. today and next Friday and Saturday.

The local talent in the Burke-Winston bash was trained to perfection, but lacked the spontaneity of previous shows in which members wrote and acted their own material.

The show was not lacking in comedy and off-color jokes, but it was done in too much of a Hollywood style and the jokes were too slow in coming across in many cases.

In "A Man Needs Someone to Love," Harvey Teague displayed a voice that has been hidden too long in Novato.

The dancing was probably the best the Novato Players have performed. Lighting and sound were also handled well.

There were these bizarre scenes: cannibals putting a missionary into a cooking pot with astronauts and Shakespearean actors doing a western square dance with spectators viewing "Mona Lisa" in an art gallery. One wondered where the burlesque title came from.

THE WEEK'S BUSINESS

Cut In Interest Rate—Big News

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The two key national interest rates, the Federal Reserve Banks' discount rate and the rate for prime business loans of big commercial banks, were cut a quarter point this week. And the General Motors strike was settled.

Even before announcement of the interest rate cuts, chief economist William Freund of the New York Stock Exchange said, on the basis of several surveys, the 1969-1970 recession appears to have hit bottom. But Freund warned that the economy faces the peril of more inflationary wage settlements.

Settlement of the eight-week-old G.M. strike calls for a 30 per cent wage boost to be spread over three years — between 13 and 14 per cent in the first year.

General reaction in the business community to the terms was "they're inflationary, but at least ending that huge strike will help the employment situation substantially."

Not all local issues at G.M. plants have yet been resolved and it was still unclear yesterday just when G.M.workers will return to their jobs. United Auto Workers officials now will take their proposals to Ford and Chrysler and they said they expected these talks to drag on into 1970.

The G.M. settlement followed recommendations by a presidential panel earlier in the week for wage boosts of 32.5 per cent over three years to four railway unions.

Stock traders evidently considered the G.M. settlement particularly inflationary and the interest rate cuts too small. At least the market reacted by going down.

Sales of domestic automobiles for the first 10 days were disappointing, down 38 per cent from a year ago. Chrysler sales were off 20.6 per cent although the big drop was caused by G.M. dealers' lack of cars. American Motors had a substantial gain.

The cut in the discount rate was from 6 to 5¾ per cent and the primate rate drop was from 7¾ to 7½ per cent. Short term interest rates generally continued to decline across the country and some long term rates declined. Government treasury bill yields fell to two year lows. A Bell system offering of $500 million in debentures was quickly snapped up at 8.66 per cent, indicating investors don't expect more offerings at such high rates.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said price cuts are becoming fairly common and the number of price boosts is diminishing sharply.

The Commerce Department said pre-tax corporate profits for the third quarter were up $3 billion from the second quarter but down $4.9 billion from a year ago, thus bearing out various earlier surveys.

The Commerce Department also said personal income was down $2.4 billion in October, mainly because of the G.M. strike, which caused so many layoffs in other industries.

And in a preliminary report, the department said the Gross National Product rose in real terms by 1.4 per cent in the third quarter, about the same as in the second quarter.

Meanwhile, unemployment was disclosed to have edged up to 5.6 per cent in October because of the auto strike and the Boston Herald-Traveler announced it will print free job wanted ads for the rest of the year.

Business inventories were revealed to have risen $620 million in September. Business sales fell about $570 million, again reflecting in part the impact of the G.M. strike.

Dun & Bradstreet said retail sales were up 1 to 5 per cent this week from a year ago across the country. The Commerce Department said total retail sales in October were down 1 per cent from September but were 3 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment in the airline industry continued high but the civil aeronautics board rejected for the present a joint proposal of American, Trans World Airlines and United Air Lines to effect $50 million in economies by pooling among 15 pairs of major cities.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court knocked out the rate reduction provisions of the state's recently enacted partial no-fault automobile insurance program. Several big companies said they will resume writing auto liability insurance in Massachusetts as a result.

Britain announced it will raise the export subsidy to $213 million from $113 million for troubled Rolls-Royce, Ltd., on the jet engines for the Lockheed airbus. The cost of the program has run way above expectations.

Finally, the biggest individual life insurance policy in history — $15 million — came up for settlement on the life of 32-year-old Oklahoma rancher E. C. Mullendore III, who was murdered, apparently by burglars. The policy was reinsured among many companies, no one having more than $500,000 of it to pay.

Gallinas Village CSD Sets Meeting

Gallinas Village Community Service District directors will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church to interview a volunteer to fill a vacant directorship.

Chairman Herbert C. Belben Jr. said Evans Burke of 701 Estancia Way has offered to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of David Banfield.

At last night's regular meeting, the directors agreed to ask the Gallinas Village Improvement Association whether it would jointly sponsor a Christmas outdoor lighting contest.

Camping Gear Stolen

Camping gear and clothing valued at $218 were stolen from the auto of Donald R. Markey of 777 Kearner Boulevard while the car was parked at his home between midnight Thursday and 9 a.m. yesterday, San Rafael police said yesterday.

Plea Of Innocent To Pot Possession

Kathleen Mary Adami, 24, of Gate 6, Sausalito, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana. A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 23.

Miss Adami was arrested when she attempted to bring suspected pot into the Civic Center last Thursday.

Russia, U.S. Reach Accord On Naval Base Construction In Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States and Russia apparently have concluded an informal agreement under which the Soviet Union has pledged not to build naval bases on Cuban soil while reserving the right for its submarines and other ships to call at Cuban ports.

Under the unwritten U.S.-Soviet agreement, as best as could be determined, there is no restriction against the anchoring of floating Soviet service facilities in Cuban ports with the permission of the Cuban government.

The agreement appears to have been worked out through at least one secret meeting between U.S. and Soviet representatives after Sept. 25, the day that Nixon administration officials warned about Soviet construction activity at Cinefuegos Bay which could be a submarine base.

The officials said the activity might violate the 1962 agreement between the late President John F. Kennedy and former Soviet Prime Minister Nikita S. Khrushchev under which the Soviet Union promised to withdraw its missiles from Cuba and not reintroduce offensive weapons on the Caribbean island, while the United States pledged not to invade Cuba.

Among some of the equipment which caused U.S. intelligence experts concern were the presence in Cienfuegos harbor of one submarine tender, one rescue salvage tug, and two repair barges.

On Sept. 28, three days after strong warnings issued by the Nixon administration, the sub tender and the tug left Cienfuegos for Mariel harbor. The repair barges, which are believed to be capable of servicing Polaris-type missiles carried by the modern Soviet Yankee class submarines, however, remained at Cienfuegos.

The submarine tender and the rescue salvage tug returned to Cienfuegos Nov. 9. The continued presence of this equipment — even if all shore construction has been halted — continues to concern the Nixon administration which is keeping it under a close eye through aerial reconaissance.

So far there is no available evidence that this equipment has been used to service Soviet submarines.

Apparently the Nixon administration, upon detecting suspicious activity at Cienfuegos, sought assurances from the Soviet Union that it was not building a base where Polaris-type missiles might be served and even stockpiled.

The Soviet Union responded on Oct. 13, 1970, by repeating a Tass statement that it was respecting the 1962 agreement, and specifically added that it was not constructing a base. The State Department on the same day characterized the Soviet Tass statement "positive."

The State Department asserted Friday that the Russians are not building an on-shore naval base.

State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey has issued a carefully worded statement saying, in view of President Kennedy's press conference statement Nov. 20, 1962, to which this administration has referred, and the Soviet government statement issued by the Tass news agency Oct. 13, 1970, "we are confident there is undertsanding by the two governments of the respective positions on the limits of their action with regard to Cuba."

Death Closes Chapter On 'Jack The Ripper'

SOUTHAMPTON, England (UPI) —Dr. Thomas Stowell, who said he knew the identity of "Jack the Ripper" and started speculation the multiple killer was a grandson of Queen Victoria, has died, his secret undisclosed.

His son, Dr. T. Eldon Stowell, said his father died last Sunday. Details of the death, he added, would be disclosed later.

Stowell said he destroyed the file left behind by his father which was labeled "Jack the Ripper" and which his father maintained until his death held evidence that convinced him the killer of at least five prostitutes in London's East End in the late 1880s "was a scion of a noble family."

An article on "The Ripper" by Dr. Stowell, Sr., in the journal Criminology led the newspaper Sunday Times to raise the name of the Duke of Clarence, Prince Albert Victor, grandson of Queen Victoria, brother to King George V and heir to the throne in connection with the 19th Century murders.

Dr. Thomas Stowell, in a letter which appeared in the London Times Monday, the day after his death, said, "I have at no time associated his royal highness, the late Duke of Clarence, with the Whitechapel murder or suggested that the murderer was of royal blood.

"It remains my opinion that he was a scion of a noble family," the letter said.

The article in Crimonology which touched off the Duke of Clarence speculation said, "the evidence suggests that the murderer was a man so senior in the hierarchy of the land, of so noble a family that the police, when they realized who was involved, were forced to conceal his identity."

A check of royal engagements at the time of "The Ripper" murders furnished evidence the Duke of Clarence would have been unable to have carried out the killings, researchers said.

Dr. Eldon Stowell said he destroyed the Ripper folder his father left.

He declined to discuss reasons for the decision.

"My father left no instructions or request on what we were to do with it," he said. "I know he has been interested in the subject for many years and that it arose again recently — for what reason I don't know.

The Ripper case, he said, held no particular interest for him. "It was before my time," he said.

Low Bidder On Fire Station

Swallow Construction Co. of Petaluma yesterday submitted an apparently low bid of $97,200 for construction of Petaluma Fire Station No. 3 on South McDowell Boulevard.

Second of the six bidders was James Construction Co., Inc. of Santa Rosa at $98,850. The project is estimated to cost $102,000 and will be financed by bonds approved by voters last June.

The city council will award a contract at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Interpol Is Called Into Jewelry Haul

MONTEVIDEO (UPI)—Uruguayan police asked Interpol, the international police organization, for help today in finding nine leftist Tupamaro Guerrillas who stole an estimated $6 million in jewels in what is believed to be the biggest bank robbery in history.

The guerrillas, four of them women, used three kidnapped bank officials as shields to get past guards and enter the Bank of the Republic late Thursday night, just 160 feet from the heavily guarded Ministry of the Interior which controls the national police.

They spent three and one-half hours searching the bank vaults and selecting the most valuable jewels before escaping in three stolen cars, leaving the bank officials and six employees tied up.

Jose Ramon Guidon, the bank's assistant manager, estimated $6 million in jewels and $48,000 in cash was taken.

The preliminary inventory showed $400,000 in jewels was missing but the contents of many safety deposit boxes were unaccounted for.

Authorities said the Tupamaros, armed with machine guns and pistols, kidnaped Guidon, Treasurer Ange Rodolfo Lopez and Administrative Assistant Julio Martin Picun from their homes and used them to gain entrance to the bank.

An employee in the bank helped the guerrillas load their loot in 10 large bags and left with them, authorities said.

The Tupamaros kidnapped two Americans and a Brazilian last summer. They killed one of the Americans, Dan A. Mitrione of Richmond, Ind., and are believed to still be holding soils specialist Claude L. Fly of Fort Collins, Colo., and Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide.

The Guiness Book of Records lists the biggest bank robbery as a $4.77 million haul made by the Algerian secret army (OAS) on March 23, 1962, during the Algerian civil war. The book says the biggest jewel robbery was the theft of $1.75 million Feb. 11, 1962, in Pompano Beach, Fla.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Doctors Can't Be Blamed For All Society's Health Problems

Van Dellen

The rules of health are simple. They include the use of common sense in nutrition, cleanliness, sanitation and immunization. Like other rules, they must be reemphasized from time to time — in the home and at school. Children particularly require this information because habits begun in childhood are carried into adulthood.

There is a growing tendency to unload an enormous number of social problems on the medical profession. Those associated with health are a good example. What can the average M.D. or medical society do about sanitation besides making recommendations to our politicians? To offer effective solutions, the medico must have the facts concerning the increased prevalence of diseases or deaths from inadequate sanitation. The same applies to air pollution.

UNDERNUTRITION in otherwise healthy children and adults is more common among the poor and ignorant. Is this a medical, social, political, agricultural or food industry problem? The need for a well-balanced diet cannot be overestimated. Everyone should know what to eat, but these items are unobtainable if grocery money is spent unwisely on snack foods, tobacco, alcohol, TV sets, or automobiles.

Nutrition goes beyond consuming the basic four – meats, dairy products, cereals, and fruits and vegetables. Overeating leads to obesity — a condition far more rampant than malnutrition. And what about cleanliness? It is a personal matter and a habit the physician stresses, but cannot control.

IMMUNIZATION prevents and controls many diseases. This is a medical and public health problem and by and large is available to rich and poor alike when our public officials cooperate.

There is said to be a shortage of physicians, but thousands of men and women with M.D. degrees are not assuming the responsibility for the medical care of our people. These individuals prefer to teach, do research, assume administrative duties or join the fight against poverty, war and civil unrest.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SHORTNESS OF BREATH

W. H. writes: I'm 52 and when I walk I get winded and have to stop. Do you think an attack of pneumonia 20 years ago could be responsible for my shortness of breath?

REPLY

This is unlikely, since complete healing usually occurs after an attack of pneumonia. On the other hand, the shortness of breath may stem from emphysema, caused by smoking, air pollution, or a previous infection. Heart trouble may do the same. Send stamped, addressed envelope for our leaflet on shortness of breath.

MILK AND FISH

K.D. writes: Is it safe to drink milk if fish is the main course?

REPLY

Yes. This old myth is shattered by the popularity of creamed tuna and similar meals.

PUNGENT ODORS

G.C. writes: Do garlic and onions make the perspiration smell like garlic and onions?

REPLY

They may, but the fumes from the breath may drown out the sweat odor.

BONE CANCER

REPLY

No.

'Hopeless' Candidacy Gives Example Of Commitment

BEFORE LAST WEEK'S elections fade further from memory, Anne Smart's candidacy for state Senate as American Independent Party nominee is worth a closer look than any of us gave it during the campaign.

Most of us see the American Independent party as the party of George Wallace, and we see George Wallace as the far-right spokesman for white supremacy and "keeping Negroes in their place."

This image leads most of us to detest George Wallace and what he stands for, along with whatever he touches directly or indirectly. This, consciously or subconsciously, was transferred to Mrs. Smart. Her candidacy thereby represented something we detested; we didn't listen to what she had to say because we were sure we were not going to like it.

Actually, if we read over her campaign literature carefully, we find it not at all extreme. What her platform contained is immaterial; she was licked before she started. She must have known it.

One of Mrs. Smart's attributes is that when she believes in something, she works for it, regardless of the chances of success.

IF YOU HAVE attended a graduation ceremony in the past few years, chances are you heard the speaker exhort the young graduates to "commitment."

The call of the times is not to accept the ills of the world but to join the fight to cure them.

Bully for commitment! The world would have fewer ills if there had been more commitment in earlier generations.

But commitment is not without its hazards.

FIFTEEN OR MORE years ago, Mrs. Smart was shocked by pornography and blasphemy contained in books used in Tamalpais High School District.

With near-total commitment, she attacked what she perceived as evil. She was of course roundly and soundly denounced by educators, school administrators, school trustees and a large segment of the citizenship. She was accused, excoriated and damned.

In the end, the Tamalpais district adopted a new orderly, more reasonable system for book selection. And the district adopted an orderly, more reasonable system for receiving citizen complaints.

Mrs. Smart's commitment to her cause contributed more than any other single factor to the adoption of these orderly processes.

Her commitment did in fact bring change and improvement.

So far as we know, she never received the slightest bit of credit for this from anyone. All she got was denunciation.

To repeat, commitment is not without its hazards.

AS NIGHT FELL on the chill evening before election last week, there was 57-year-old Anne Smart in a supermarket parking lot striding vigorously about handing out her campaign literature. She was cheerful and smiling, boasting that although her two campaign aides had given up earlier owing to total exhaustion, she herself was getting her "second wind" and would keep going as long as there were people about to whom she could hand her literature.

More than 75,000 people cast ballots for state senator in Marin County. Mrs. Smart received only 2,129 votes.

It is doubtful if she was surprised.

She deserves to be proud that she carried out her commitment to her beliefs.

IT IS ALWAYS PAINFUL when a long-active senior citizen finally is turned out to pasture.

That's what happened to Dr. Leo Stanley in last week's elections. He served on the board of the Marin Municipal Water District for 24 years and then was defeated for re-election.

It is likely that his calendar age, 84, had considerable to do with the voters' decision to retire "Doc" Stanley.

Those who voted against him on account of his age couldn't know him very well. He is still youthful, energetic, active and presumably will continue to be so for a long time yet.

When his term officially expires, he will have more time to pursue his other interests, including writing and preservation of local history.

It is likely that most people who voted in the Water District Division I contest last week were not even residents of Marin when Doc Stanley served as San Quentin surgeon and carried on an extensive private medical practice in Marin. He was widely and favorably known at a time when personal acquaintance and personal knowledge determined how most votes were cast.

Doc Stanley's personal integrity and his dedicated interest in the water district were widely known, first hand, by voters. He didn't have to campaign for re-election. He merely gave his legion of friends and acquaintances a chance to vote for him again every four years.

But time has marched onward. Marin has grown. All of our community problems, including those of the water district, have become more complex. A seemingly well-qualified "newcomer" (compared with Doc Stanley's residency in these parts) came along to campaign on the issues in the present-day fashion.

The result has been retirement for Doc Stanley.

But the retirement will be limited only to water district participation. Leo Stanley can be counted upon to be vigorously active in those community matters of his special interests for a good many years to come. Our sadness at seeing him turned out to pacture is assuaged considerably the expectation that he will go on rendering service to the community, as vigorously as ever.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to Steven Henry and Jan Sonander of Boy Scout Troop 1, Mill Valley, who produced a professional-grade guide book for helping to save the environment which is being distributed by the troop.

BOUQUET to San Francisco Supervisor Dianne Feinstein for starting an effort to get legislation allowing local control of filthy movies. We'd like to see Marin public officials do likewise. Centainly state control has proved no control at all.

BRICKBATS to those lamebrains who think it's funny to telephone schools and public buildings with warnings that "there's a bomb planted in your building."

A belated BOUQUET to Peter C. Meyer, Marin County elections officer, for the smooth handling of the general election. The count was completed at 11:25 p.m. — certainly a modern-day record for this county — and everything went amazingly smoothly. What a contrast to some past elections!

Weather Over The Hill

Marin's weather varies greatly within very short distances. A hill, a valley, proximity to water, as well as less obvious factors, combine to make this a place of great variation.

Kentfield is just over a small hill from San Rafael, but it almost always receives half again as much rain on any given rainy day.

Little Woodacre, in the San Geronimo Valley, seems to have the most of everything weatherwise — the coldest, the hottest, the wettest — depending on the season.

The direction of the winds on Marin's rolling topography help account for the different weather over the hill.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Rainbow Pleases; Complaints Annoy

Driving to Marin this evening from the City, it was a smile that arrived on my face when I again saw the glorious colors on our two tunnels!

Arriving home I read the paper and got disturbed over two of our obviously "ancient" residents.

Ruth A. Taylor and her blast about Pepperland. Couldn't quite understand this, for if it was so bad why hasn't it been in the I-J every night? And, why haven't the police closed it up?

And, then the article below it by Bertha Krug on the rainbows on the tunnels.

I'm a mid-fortyish longtime member of Marin's family, fully realizing now why the younger generation think that my age group and those older than myself are just not with it.

Have the people that have complained about the beautiful colors that were put on the tunnels done anything to improve our environment? Has the dear soul that complained about a dance hall away from anything that the sounds could annoy done anything in the way of helping the younger generation to understand he world they live in?. . .

Ferries 'Restored' By Private Firm

Your Nov. 6, edition in "What Our Readers Say" column carried an article by a Jerome Kay. For Mr. Kay's information, we, as a PUC regulated carrier, have provided a daily ferry service between Tiburon and San Francisco since 1962 and which has grown from a mere handful of commuters to over 700 per day. Obviously, Mr. (Stephan C.) Leonaudakis has had nothing to do with "restoring" the ferry boats.

Another Yes Vote For The Rainbow

We would like to compliment the highway department on the delightful rainbow which now enhances the cold, austere cement of Waldo Tunnel. We can't understand anyone objecting to this type of beautification. A yes vote in favor of keeping the rainbow.

How To Detect Undercover Agent: Cast Slur At J. Edgar Hoover

WASHINGTON — In the past month we have seen 15 FBI agents drop out of the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York because a professor made critical remarks about J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI's stalwart leader.

Following this, 11 FBI employees dropped out of the course on "Violence in America" at American University because the professor there cast aspersions on Mr. Hoover's leadership.

There will probably be more of this as time goes on, and it is conceivable that every university in the country could soon be on J. Edgar Hoover's black list.

What isn't generally known is that there is a conspiracy among university professors to criticize J. Edgar Hoover publicly.

THIS IS WHY they're doing it:

It is assumed that the FBI has planted undercover agents in all the major universities in the country. These undercover agents look exactly like radical students. They have long hair, wear beards, go shoeless, and use all the obscene words. In the past they have been impossible to spot on campus.

But not long ago a professor at a Midwestern college made some derogatory remarks about J. Edgar Hoover. Three of the radical students immediately walked out of the class in a huff. Everyone was very surprised when they announced they were leaving the school.

It turned out they were FBI undercover agents, whose job it had been to infiltrate the radical movement.

They had been ordered to put up with any indignity to win the confidence of the radicals, except to sit there and take criticism of Mr. Hoover.

A FEW WEEKS later in California, a professor in government statistics made the point that the higher the crime rate rose in the United Staes, the more kudos J. Edgar Hoover received from Congress and the administration. The professor was trying to show that bad news does not necessarily bring criticism from government. He said that as far as his statistics showed, there hasn't been a year when the FBI did not report a rise in crime in the United States, and each time it did, Mr. Hoover received congratulations from the President.

Two radical students in his class broke into tears and announced they could no longer stay in school. It was a blow to everyone, because one of the undercover agents had just been elected president of the SDS and had been in charge of an antiwar demonstration in Governor Reagan's office.

WELL, THESE TWO incidents suddenly made professors all over the country realize that the easiest way to spot an FBI undercover agent was to criticize J. Edgar Hoover.

And so professors are now waging a campaign to make remarks about the head of the FBI.

The FBI knows, of course, what is happening, but they're caught in a bind. If they keep their agents on campus to catch the people responsible for student violence, they will be exposing FBI employees to defamatory remarks about Mr. Hoover.

So far the FBI has left it up to the individual agents to decide whether to stay or leave. But they're proud that in every case so far when someone has sullied J. Edgar Hoover's name, the FBI undercover agent has indignantly dropped out of school.

DeGaulle's Life And His Advice Contain Lessons For America

WASHINGTON — The columns of newsprint marking Gen. Charles de Gaulle's departure from the world stage show that he had no false modesty when it came to instructing others on how to conduct themselves. During his incredible, crowded career he spoke no wiser words than when he warned President Kennedy against becoming involved in the Vietnam war.

The American president was in Paris in 1961 for a state visit. De Gaulle told the youthful President from across the sea that Vietnam could become a quagmire from which the United States would find it difficult, if not impossible, to find a way out.

From bitter experience De Gaulle knew the cost of colonial wars. French involvement in Indochina after 1945 had cost an untold treasure of blood and money. In the last years before the settlement of 1954 the United States had been pouring in help at the rate of $800 million a year, all in vain as De Gaulle was well aware.

IN LIGHT of the defeat in Vietnam, the French war in Algeria was even more lacerating. That war, waged by professional soldiers to hold a proud French possession, generated the kind of divisiveness that the Vietnam war has aroused in the United States.

De Gaulle knew he had to end a hopeless war and he must have known, too, that he alone could bring it off. The way he defused the military and the passionate colonialists was worthy of Machiavelli. Assuming new and concentrated authority under a constitution which he had put over with the electorate, he seemed to side with the generals while contriving to bring the war to an end.

But it was a close thing. Those of us in Paris at the time will not forget, at the climax of the revolt of the generals in Algeria, the rumor sweeping the city that a thousand paratroopers were preparing to take over. With the army drastically cut back and spread thin, they could have taken a more or less defenseless city.

De Gaulle brought the war to an end, but with a backlash that had its own perils. The secret army organization permeated the military and gave encouragement to extreme rightists. At least two attempts were made on De Gaulle's life.

As though to compensate for the losses abroad, the president of the Fifth Republic inflated the grandeur of his beloved France far beyond the capability of a nation of 50 million people. He was determined to make France a power on a par with the two nuclear giants. To this end he fostered a nuclear development, defying the limited test-ban treaty restricting tests in the atmosphere, that could be scarcely more than a perilous nuisance in the big-power game. Along with other foreign and military adventures, the cost of the nuclear development contributed to a serious inflation. The student-trade union revolt of the spring of 1968 and the currency crisis of the same year followed.

In the triumph and tragedies of this man who stood so tall against the horizon are profoundly important lessons for the United States. First of all is an understanding of the cost of concluding a war that has meant so much sacrifice. It cannot be painless. Steady nerves and a willingness to face grave risks are essential, as De Gaulle demonstrated in Algeria.

Far more important, however, is the lesson that grandeur and rhetoric are not enough. De Gaulle brought unity of a kind to France after the trauma of the Nazi occupation and the defeat in two colonial wars. He invoked the greatness of a great past. But he did not undertake the fundamental changes that must be made if France is to be a world power. It was perhaps too much to expect De Gaulle, who so passionately loved the past, to work these changes.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

By PHIL NEWSOM, UPI Foreign News Analyst

Oil riches from Libya, manpower and professional skills from Egypt, agricultural produce from Sudan. . .on paper the proposed federation of the three North African nations appears to be a natural.

The late President Gamal Abdel Nasser dreamed of a Pan-Arab "unity of purpose" almost from the moment of seizing power in 1952, and his would be the guiding spirit in the new federation which began taking shape last December after failure of the Arab summit to agree upon a common strategy against Israel.

That it is being approached with caution is the result of past disappointments.

EGYPT AND SYRIA entered a constitutional union in February, 1958, and became known as the United Arab Republic, a name which Nasser retained even though the partnership with Syria broke down in September, 1961.

A proposal which would have linked Syria, Egypt, Iraq and Yemen never got beyond the paper stage.

In the 1950s and even into the 1960s there was talk of political union among the Arab Magreb countries of northwestern Africa—Morocco, Tunisia, Algeria and Libya. They did achieve some economic cooperation but the idea of closer ties appears to have evaporated, particularly as Libya has turned to the East.

DESPITE PAST failures, the proposed new federation presents interesting possibilities. Union among the three would create an African nation of more than two million square miles and 48 million people.

It would be the seventh in size in the world and 14th in population.

Libya has more oil wealth than it can use properly, the Egyptians have a seemingly incurable unemployment problem and the Sudan has undeveloped lands.

The three countries abut each other.

Nasser, reluctantly, it was said at the time, took over the rule of Syria at the request of Syrian politicians and army officers concerned about increasing Communist and Soviet influence in their country..

There is another important point. The men discussing the new merger are virtual dictators over their people, who have not yet been offered a choice. In the Sudan there are serious political differences between the Moslem north and the black tribesmen of the south.

Nor, among the three nations, has it been decided where the veto power lies. History has shown there is no such thing as co-equal dictators.

THE LATEST PROPOSALS

The Paris Peace Talks — Assessment Of Proposals

Editor's Note: The Vietnam peace talks in Paris have been going on between the United States and North Vietnam since May 10, 1968, and the expanded talks that brought South Vietnam and the Viet Cong to the table have gone on since Jan. 19, 1969. There has been no evident progress over that long period. In this dispatch a veteran reporter who covered the war itself for more than three years, and has been reporting the peace talks for two years seeks to put into perspective the situation as it stands today on the basis of the latest proposals.

By RAY F. HERNDON

PARIS (UPI)—The Paris peace conference is a place where everybody involved thinks the other fellow is trying to get something for nothing.

As the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese see it President Nixon and the South Vietnamese government are trying to get them to surrender the only leverage they have — the prisoners they hold, the pressure they are maintaining on U.S. and South Vietnamese forces, and the unpopularity of the war among the American people — without giving any real value in return.

As the United States and South Vietnam see it, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong aren't offering any bargains either. In simplest terms it looks to Washington and Saigon as though the Communists want to move into a house (Saigon), evacuate the occupants and take over the keys before they will even discuss whether they'll pay anything for the house.

President Nixon did make certain concessions to the Communists in his last peace plan but to Hanoi and the Viet Cong the asking price still was too high.

President Nixon's five-point peace plan basically called for 1) a stand-still cease-fire, 2) an international peace conference to deal with all of Indochina, 3) the immediate and unconditional release by both sides of all war prisoners, 4) an unspecified political settlement, and 5) the offer to talk about the total withdrawal of U.S. troops "as part of an over-all settlement."

As gleaned from their statements and private comments, this is how the Communists view these proposals:

CEASE-FIRE

1) The Vietnam war is a "presidential war," not a popular war declared by Congress; 2) The U.S. president is popularly elected, so 3) One way to make the presidential war — and thus the president himself — more unpopular is to make American casualties go up from time to time.

Therefore, if the Communists agreed to the cease-fire, they would be surrendering their ability to influence U.S. public opinion, surrendering their ability to bring greater pressure on the White House because they would no longer be causing American casualties.

Moreover, if the Communists agreed to a stand-still cease-fire, they would be tacitly admitting that U.S. troops have the right to stay on Vietnamese soil — something they do not admit. So much for the cease-fire.

CONFERENCE

Ever since the Soviet Union and Red China pressured North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh into accepting half the cake, so to speak, in the 1954 Geneva conference, the Hanoi leadership has been wary of the idea of settling its problems in big international conferences.

Just as Red China openly expresses fears that Russia and the United States will come to some arrangement and then impose it on Peking, the Vietnamese Communists are fearful that the Russians and Americans might get together in some side room of a conference hall, and Hanoi would get sold out in the process.

For years after the 1954 Geneva Conference, where the Russians and the Chinese made just such a deal with the West, the attitude of Hanoi leaders could be summed up thusly: with friends like the Soviet Union and the Chinese, who needs enemies?

And if the record of Geneva-type conferences were not sufficiently tainted in Hanoi's eyes after 1954, the same formula was tried again in 1962 for neighboring Laos, and it failed to restore peace there as well.

POW RELEASES

The Communists attitude toward prisoner releases is basically this: Prisoners are one of Mr. Nixon's problems, not one of theirs. Hanoi does not even admit to having troops in the South, so how could there be any North Vietnamese prisoners? Even though it is fallacious reasoning (there is ample proof that Hanoi's troops fight and many have been captured in the South), the prisoners are not an emotional issue in North Vietnam.

The Communist dictatorship in Hanoi is not subject to the same pressures as is the popularly elected American president.

There are thousands of Viet Cong prisoners, but the Viet Cong know that the countryside in South Vietnam is so dangerous that their captured colleagues are probably better off and are certainly safer than the Viet Cong on the outside. Further, in the mystique of liberation politics, getting a prison record under a "warlike and fascist" government is the equivalent of earning a Boy Scout merit badge. So much for prisoners.

TROOP ISSUE

President Nixon's proposals on troop withdrawals and a political settlement are related, as are those of the Viet Cong.

In essence, Nixon is saying the United States is prepared to set a withdrawal deadline for all U.S. troops, but "as part of an over-all settlement." In other words, no promises on total withdrawal until agreement is reached on the political future of South Vietnam.

The argument is as basic as which comes first, the cart or the horse? Nixon says political settlement first and then withdrawal, and the Communists demand exactly the opposite. The Communist reasoning: There cannot be a fair political settlement or elections under American bayonets. The American rebuttal: If U.S. troops are withdrawn, there is nothing left to negotiate.

CONG PLAN

The Viet Cong "global peace solution" is a complex maze of 10 points, to which Viet Cong Foreign Minister Nguyen Thi Binh offered eight "clarifications" on Sept. 17. But the Communists have only two demands they say are "fundamental."

The fundamental demands, which Washington has always rejected, require the rapid, total, unilateral and unconditional pullout of U.S. troops, and the overthrow of the Saigon government as the troops withdraw.

The only new elements in the revamped Viet Cong package of Sept. 17 were the offers of a limited cease-fire, a suggested U.S. withdrawal deadline of June 30, 1971, and the promise to talk about prisoner releases after Washington gives up the fight.

The Viet Cong cease-fire offer is a masterpiece of vague diplomatic wordage. It says that if Washington first agrees to withdraw all troops by June 30, 1971, the Communist troops will "cease attacking those units in the process of effecting their withdrawal."

Given the best interpretation, the Viet Cong offer could mean that Communist troops would be ordered to stop attacking U.S. troops as soon as Nixon agreed to their withdrawal deadline.

At worst, it could mean that the Viet Cong are only promising not to shoot U.S. troops in the back as they board planes and ships to leave, and that any troops not actually withdrawing would be fair game.

Because the Viet Cong refuse to give their offer the best interpretation, or any interpretation at all, the United States can reasonably suspect the worst.

Once the United States has given up the fight, then the Viet Cong promise to talk about prisoner exchanges. But that is all they are promising —to talk.

The juxtaposition of the prisoner question and Vietnamese Communist demands for indemnification from the United States makes it appear that Hanoi and the Viet Cong want to blackmail the United States into paying millions of dollars in indemnifications (read ransom money) to get the prisoners back.

THE DEMANDS

The Viet Cong demands about a political settlement are basically this: The Saigon government must be overthrown, all organized resistance to the Viet Cong must cease to be organized, then the Viet Cong and their fellow travelers will form a "coalition government."

In the process, the two top men among the Saigon leadership are ruled out of any participation in the future of Vietnam because they are bad men. In other words, the republicans can run in the election, but none of their leading politicians.

All the while, the Viet Cong say South Vietnam's problems will be solved by the South Vietnamese. What about all those North Vietnamese making war in the South? There are none, of course, reply the Viet Cong.

The solutions advanced amount to each side asking the other to renounce what it has been fighting for all these years.

The United States has been fighting for the right of its South Vietnamese allies to determine their own future.

The Viet Cong peace plan would make sure that the South Vietnamese who are allied with the United States would not have this right.

On the other hand, the Communists have been fighting for a unified Communist Vietnam, and Washington says that if given a free choice under the U.S. peace plan, the South Vietnamese would hardly choose communism.

So if Hanoi accepted the Nixon plan, it believes it would have lost.

Some day, presumably, there will be some kind of settlement. But first, something, or one side or both, must give more than has been seen so far.

LAW, ORDER ATTITUDES

Deserters Fear FBI In England

By JOHN HAY
Toronto News Service

LONDON — Hundreds of United States Army desererts and draft-dodgers who are hiding out in Britain fear an imminent concerted drive by FBI agents and British police to flush them out.

Stiffening law-and-order attitudes on both sides of the Atlantic has increased the pressure to catch them and deport them back to America.

The president of the Union of American Exiles in Britain, Harry Pincus, told me recently he believed that a drive by the American authorities has already started.

He said: "The FBI seems to treat Britain as the 51st state."

As the pressure mounts, however, a group of British parliamentarians is moving to change British law so that U.S. deserters and draft-dodgers can be granted political asylum. The move is being spearheaded by labor peer Lord Brockway, who recently led a deputation to Lord Windlesham, minister of state at the Home Office.

Lord Brockway told me: "We were concerned that two American deserters had been extradited within a fortnight. "Lord Windlesham denied that there had been any 'activation'. "But a week later it was announced in America that there was to be increased pressure in Britain."

Lord Brockway and his colleagues believe that Britain is not living up to its long-standing tradition of political asylum in the case of U.S. deserters.

They want the law amended so that servicemen who desert the U.S. Army because they object to the Vietnam war can claim political asylum.

They point out that refugees from behind the Iron Curtain are granted political asylum almost immediately, without question. Often the reason for escaping is economic, and not political.

British law regarding U.S. deserters and draft-dodgers falls into two categories.

Draft-resisters — who have not yet been called up — are treated as ordinary aliens. They find it difficult to get suitable jobs, but they are free to remain.

Deserters have no protection. They can be extradited at the request of American authorities. If picked up by British police, they have no right to appeal for habeas corpus. British courts cannot free them. Under the Visiting Forces Act of 1952, the Americans have absolute power to operate in Britain in matters like this.

The Home Office recently claimed that since 1952 the total number of U.S. deserters sent back from Britain was 10.

However, Member of Parliament Frank Allaun says that Lord Windlesham has admitted that many American deserters might have been sent back without Home Office knowledge.

However, others believe this may be a vast understatement.

Said Pincus: "Tens of thousands of Americans have deserted from the Army around the world. Many of them are unaccounted for.

"Britain is the other big English-speaking country in the world. The language problem does not exist. Who knows how many there may be here, living below the surface?"

Ironically, there is no bar to draft-dodgers or deserters entering Britain. U.S. servicemen are allowed to travel freely. Most of the deserters in Britain come direct from the U.S., Canada or West Germany.

According to Pincus, many servicemen are posted from West Germany to Vietnam. When they receive their postings, they go "over the hill" to Britain.

Once in Britain, they lead the life of a fugitive. They have to go underground. No social security. No identity. Few friends. Many scrape a living at manual jobs, gardening, washing dishes in hotels.

They must be careful about how they contact their parents and friends back home in the U.S.

One deserter, U.S. Marine Richard Lee Haygood, was traced recently after he wrote a letter home. He was shipped back to the U.S. to face desertion charges, leaving his pregnant English wife in Britain.

Pincus, who is 27, can't return to the U.S. without facing charges of draft-dodging and a possible five-year jail sentence on each count.

He came to Britain about six years ago to study psychology. In October 1967, he went with a group to the American Embassy and handed in his draft card. He was declared a delinquent by U.S. authorities and drafted twice. Failing to join up, he was put under indictment and a warrant was issued.

'SOARING 70S SYMBOL'

An Airport For Today's Traveler

By ORVAL JACKSON

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI)—Travelers of the jet age, along with residents of the Tampa Bay area, can look ahead to the day they receive a present —an airport designed specifically for the traveler of the 1970's.

The new $88 million ultra-modern airport terminal now under construction here is expected to be ready not long after the first of the year. It oirginally had been set for a Christmas unveiling but because of work stoppages the completion date slipped into 1971.

A sprawling five-building complex, it is looked upon as the first airport facility in the nation designed specifically for today's air traveler.

Gone will be the long and wearying walks from the parking lot to the terminal and then to the boarding area. Gone will be the helter-skelter dash from one side of the terminal from an arriving plane to the other side to catch a connecting flight leaving within minutes.

Designers of the complex decided after a survey of other airports in the nation to cut down on the walking required of passengers, and came up with a high-speed transfer system that results in a passenger facing a maximum walking distance from the airport garage to planeside of 700 feet.

This compares to 1,735 feet at Chicago O'Hare, 1,730 feet at Atlanta, 1,650 feet at Dallas Love Field and 1,485 at New York La Guardia.

The walking distance for persons on connecting flights will be even less. Vehicles operating much like a sideways-moving elevator, each capable of holding 125 standing passengers, will move between the main terminal and the four satellite buildings where the planes do their loading and unloading. The moving operation takes only 40 seconds. For connecting passengers, it'll be a short walk across the lobby of the main terminal from one transportation car to another which whisks them out to their connecting flight in another 40 seconds.

The passenger transfer system is capable of moving 840 persons one way in 10 minutes, according to George J. Bean, director of the Hillsborough County Aviation Authority which operates the airport.

"This is equivalent to the 10-minute movement of passengers from four fully loaded DC-8s or two jumbo jets, plus greeters and well-wishers," Bean said.

"If the passenger can limit his total walk to hundreds, instead of thousands, of feet, the speed with which he can be processed in or out of a terminal complex is increased and the over-all convenience of air travel is restored to him."

To add to the convenience of travelers, the entire complex is color-coded from the highway signs leading in, all through the main six-story terminal, and on to the air-side buildings.

Signs at the entrance of the airport will tell arrivals which colors to follow to a given airline; tickets already purchased at downtown offices will be color-coded to the particular airline.

Thus, on arriving at the terminal, the passenger coming by car can drop off his baggage at the lower level, and while it is being processed on through to the plane, he can drive up the ramp to one of the three top parking decks where he leaves his auto. A few steps to an elevator and the passenger is at second floor operational center containing ticket slaes and airline offices. When he's ready for boarding, the passenger merely gets aboard the proper transfer car and heads for the air-side satellite.

The three parking decks atop the main terminal can handle about 2,000 cars and the building is designed for expansion by an additional three decks. In addition, there will be outside parking some distance away for between 2,000 and 3,000 cars for persons who wish to have long-term parking or who may desire the lower parking rate.

For persons driving or picking up passengers, ease is the by-word. The terminal features 2,000 feet of curb-side parking at the two lower levels to facilitate loading and unloading. Cabs, buses and limousines will be parked in special areas away from the curb-sides, leaving curbs open to public use.

The airport is being constructed with an eye to the future, and allowing for expansion as needed. "This is being built from the ground up to handle jumbo jets now in use or any that are now under consideration," Bean said.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

"France is a widow," French President Georges Pompidou told his people this week. Charles de Gaulle, the World War II leader of the Free French and the former president, had died at the age of 79.

De Gaulle was buried quietly, privately in the village of Colombey Les Deux Eglises. The general had directed that officials and foreign heads of state not attend the funeral service. His fellow villagers and tens of thousands of pilgrims laid him to rest in a humble ceremony without eulogy while visiting dignitaries, including President Nixon, attended a high requiem mass in the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris.

Nixon had said he would discuss no business with other leaders on his visit to Paris and, aside from an 11-minute informal talk with soviet President Nikolai Podgorny, he did not. He had a 90-minute discussion with David K. E. Bruce, the chief U.S. negotitaor at the Paris talks.

The U.N. General Assembly this week, as it does every year, took up debate on the admission of Communist China. For a change, the United States did not oppose the move outright, but argued that Nationalist China should not be kicked out. Both Nationalist and Red China reject the concept of two Chinas.

General Motors and the United Auto Workers reached agreement on a contract that would end the UAW's strike. The UAW Council approved it on a 9-1 vote and strikers are expected to approve it in the coming week. It provides wage increases and fringe benefits of 30 per cent over three years.

A presidential mediation board recommended a 37 per cent hike for railroad workers. But the leader of one union asked for 50 per cent and threatened a strike against freight shipments in December.

Two U.S. generals —Maj. Gen. Edward C. D. Scherrer and Brig. Gen. Claude M. McQuarrie Jr. —and a Turkish colonel were released by Russia and returned to Turkey. They had been detained after their plane landed on the Soviet side of the border. U.S. Maj. James P. Russell, the fourth man held, flew the plane back later.

Poland and West Germany made progress toward a treaty establishing normal relations. Premier osef Cyrankiewicz of Poland said he would welcome German Chancellor Willy Brandt to his nation when the pact is completed.

Raffaele Minichiello, the U.S. Marine corporal who last year hijacked a Trans World Airlines plane from California to Italy, was sentenced in Rome to seven and one-half years imprisonment. That would be reduced because of time he already has spent in custody and a recent amnesty.

The trial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr. — charged with murder in the alleged massacre at My Lai, South Vietnam — began at Fort Benning, Ga., with selection of a military jury.

POSSIBLE USES

Conflict Looming Over Tidelands

The Town of Corte Madera and Bay Area colleges may find themselves in conflict by 1972 over the future of Corte Madera's tidelands.

A survey published by a state advisory body lists 196 acres of the tidelands south of Corte Madera Creek as a desirable site for academic research. Town officials have urged the area as the site of a multimillion-dollar ferryboat and bus terminal for Marin commuters.

The Corte Madera tidelands known as the "Heerdt Marsh" and at least seven other Marin County shoreline areas are listed in "Marine Resources for Higher Education," the survey publised by the state's Coordinating Council for Higher Education.

The council submitted the report yesterday to the state's Interagency Council on Ocean Resources, which has the task of preparing by 1972 a 10-year master plan for coordinated use or preservation of all California ocean resources.

The Coordinating Council for Higher Education surveyed College of Marin, Sonoma State College, San Francisco State College and every other California college or university interested in research along the state's shoreline. It received recommendations that 47 sites throughout the state be preserved for higher education use, under "highest priority."

Andreas B. Rechnitzer, who directed the survey, pointed out that the report does not ask public ownership of all the priority tidelands. Rather, it urges that higher education institutions continue to have access to the tidelands listed, and that the Shoreline areas be preserved against destruction.

ONE OF 12

The Marin resources servey was only one 12 "inputs" delivered to drafters of the Comprehensive Ocean Area Plan. Other reports came from state health, highways, air pollution, water quality, recreation, fish and game, and environmental quality agencies.

Jon S. Golehouse, associate professor of geology at San Francisco State, inspected the Corte Madera tidelands for the survey. He said the land, listed as owned by Frank M. Burke has also been discussed as the site for a municipal dump and golf course. The proposal is now quiescent, but Corte Madera and Larkspur are debating over which city should be the site of a Golden Gate Bridge District ferry terminal.

LAND VALUES

Golehouse pinpointed 96 acres of marsh — which he said was valued at $2,000 per acre — and 100 acres of mudflat — valued at $1,000 per acre — as being of scientific interest. But the site was given no specific priority in the state survey.

The San Francisco State teacher urged that the waterfront be kept as a marin reserve either under state ownership or "academic institution custodianship."

Net Depot Land Put On Market

A parcel of land which Marin County turned down for an addition to Tiburon Uplands Natural Preserve has been offered for sale on the open market.

Sealed bids will be received at 49 Fourth Street, San Francisco, by the General Services Administration, a federal agency, until 11 a.m. on Dec. 17, when the parcel will be sold to the highest bidder.

The plot, a 5.3-acre chunk of the Old Tiburon Net Depot, lies on the south or inland side of Paradise Drive above the liburon Oceanographic Center.

The land was declared surplus in 1967 and turned over to the GSA for disposal. It was offered to the state first but turned down, a GSA spokesman said.

It then was offered to Marin County; and $15,000 was budgeted for its acquisition in fiscal 1969-70. But the fiscal year ended before appraisals were completed, and on July 7 the board of supervisors refused to reappropriate the sum, saying the item was of "low priority."

Youth Is Bound Over On Airport Arson, Burglary

William Phillip Nance, 20, of Santa Rosa, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on charges of burglary and arson stemming from the $250,000 fire Oct. 12 at Gnoss Field. He is to be arraigned Tuesday.

Officers said that Nance and three other youths apparently went to the airport to steal gasoline. Upon discovering they had to go inside a building to release a lock on a gas pump, they reportedly stole a tape recorder and a radio and then allegedly set fire to the building to cover fingerprints.

The other youths are still being held in Sonoma County on other charges.

Fried Chicken Facility Permit Will Be Asked

Keith Holmes of Los Altos, representing Kentucky Fried Chicken, will ask for a use permit from the Marin County zoning administrator Monday at 2 p.m. in the Civic Center.

Holmes plans to expand the existing drive-in and convert it into a fried chicken take-out facility.

That afternoon, a use permit will be requested for a pet clinic for the next door property at 524 Miller Avenue. The building is now used as a dog grooming salon. Veterinarian O. B. McRory of Mill Valley plans to convert the building into a pet clinic.

Proposed Zoning, Sign Laws On Agenda

The Fairfax Planning Commission will report on its progress on proposed zoning and sign ordinances at a meeting of the Fairfax City Council at 8 p.m. Monday.

The council will also consider a request from the Fairfax Lion's Club to erect a bus passenger shelter at Manor Road and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. The council put over consideration of the request from last Monday until it could determine whether the proposed site of the shelter was on city or privately owned property.

Contract For Dorm Could Be Delayed

Awarding of contract for a new 20-bed girls dormitory at Marin Juvenile Hall may have to wait, unless the county can come up with funds by freezing other spending, County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell declared yesterday.

Fostmeier Construction Co. of Rohnert Park, lowest of nine bidders, offered to build the new dormitory for $316,688. The nine bids will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday for awarding of contract.

"Unfortunately, there are insufficient funds in the capital improvement fund," said Mitchell.

He explained that money allocated for the dormitory was used to buy McNears Beach near Peacock Gap. About $240,000 in federal aid will be coming for the McNear purchase, but this reimbursement is not expected until next year.

Until this reimbursement arrives, Mitchell said he cannot certify that funds are available to pay for the dormitory. "This certification must be backed up in order to avoid a personal liability on my part," said Mitchell.

He will recommend to the supervisors that they either (1) delay awarding the dormitory project or (2) make a temporary transfer from other capital improvement spending such as for construction and improvement at McNears Beach and Stafford Lake, landscaping and utilities at Juvenile Hall, medical care payments and other expenditures.

The Hippie Shakes Up Marriages

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI)—When a hippie was elected justice of the peace in Lawrence, Kan., the state attorney general promptly ruled that the office of justice of the peace had been abolished by an act of the legislature in 1968. Therefore the hippie's election is void.

But so, it would seem, are the hundreds of marriages performed by Kansas justices of the peace in the last two years.

To clarify that situation Attorney General Ken Frizzell came forth with another ruling Friday.

"Couples involved in marriages performed by defrocked justices of the peace are married under Kansas common law at the very least," Frizzell's office said. "They are the same as if a minister married them. In the eyes of the law, they are married.

"If they want to separate, they're going to have to get a divorce just like anybody else."

All the trouble started Nov. 3 when voters elected Phillip C. Hill, a bearded, long-haired Yippie leader who professes to make his living as a dope dealer. Although he was on the ballot as a Democrat, neither Democratic party officials most of the 6,000 persons voted for Hill knew who was.

Once the news was Frizzell vowed to "pull plug" on him, and the st Democratic chairman perdic he would spend the short term of office in Kan history.

When Frizzell nullified Hi post, he also nullified those other J.P.s around the state.

WARRIORS WIN

Mullins Key To Victory

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors are trying not to let the Los Angeles Lakers run off and hide in the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division.

On a Friday night in which the Lakers ran their record to 9-4, the Warriors used Jeff Mullins' three-point play with 1:36 remaining to move in front for good in a 107-102 win over the San Diego Rockets.

Mullins, whose three-point play put his team in front 101-99, led the Warriors' attack with 24 points while Joe Ellis had 23 and Nate Thurmond 22.

Stu Lantz tallied 23 points and Elvin Hayes 20 for the Rockets.

San Rafael Romps To 42-8 Victory

By DAVID EINSTEIN

The San Rafael High School Bulldogs ended the 1970 season last night in the same rampaging fashion with which they began it two months ago. They loosed a savage ground attack on the Drake Pirates and rolled to a 42-8 victory before 2,500 fans at San Rafael High School.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser and halfback Scott Duncan han for a pair of touchdowns apiece as coach Bob Muster's crew claimed sole possession of second place in the final Marin County Athletic League standings. The victory was their fifth against a single loss in league play, their seventh overall.

MOST POINTS

In dropping the Pirates to fourth place with a 2-4 record, San Rafael rolled up the most points for any MCAL team this year, eclipsing the mark they set in a 40-0 win over Washington on the opening day of the season.

Moving undeniably on the ground, the Bulldogs racked up a 21-0 halftime lead. They poured it on in the third period, capitalized on two fumble recoveries and an interception to score their final three touchdowns.

271 YARDS

With Gansloser and senior Ray Griffin directing the attack in alternate quarters, San Rafael rolled up 271 yards on the ground, using nine different ball carriers. Duncan and fullback Mark Farrar led the way with 78 and 69 yards respectively, and each punched across for a touchdown in the first quarter.

Gansloser scored the Bulldogs' fourth and sixth touchdowns on runs of eight and 34 yards as the Pirates fell apart in the third period. Sandwiched in between the junior signal caller's romps was Duncan's second touchdown, a six yard burst that gave him 78 points for the season — by far the league title.

Griffin hit Duke Besse with a six yard pass in the second quarter for San Rafael's other touchdown. And John Morehouse, who has missed only one extra point all year, was perfect six times.

Drake, which could collect only 37 yards on the ground, avoided becoming the Bulldogs' fifth shutout victim of 1970 in the final minute of play, when reserve quarterback Tom MacAusland flipped a screen pass to Steve Hale, who rambled 58 yards to score.

Selke Says Finley Forced Him Out

OAKLAND (UPI) — Frank Selke claimed Friday he was eased out of the position of general manager of the California Golden Seals by new owner Charles O. Finley.

Selke said Finley refused to honor the final year of a four-year contract he (Selke) signed in 1967 with the hockey team's original owners. Instead, Selke said the Chicago insurance magnate handed him a new, one-year contract for 1970-71.

"He has tendered me a one-year contract at substantially fewer dollars than my present contract calls for," said Selke.

"The document which he has tendered to me is not acceptable. I have neither resigned nor quit. I am simply refusing to accept less than that to which I am entitled."

Selke said Finley had placed him in a position "which makes it impossible to continue with the Seals."

However, Selke wished the Seals good fortune in the months ahead, stating he was "proud . . . and gratified" to have been part of the organization which put together the present team.

"With very little to work with, except our wits and dedicated hockey people, we have given the Seals an exciting team that is capable of really going places this season," said Selke, "plus a reserve of excellent young players that should make the Seals a contending team for years to come.

"It isn't easy to turn my back on a situation which has all the ear marks of success in the days and years ahead."

Sabres Put An End To Seal Win Streak

Waived a couple of weeks ago and claimed by the expansion Buffalo Sabres, Andrea stung his former mates with his first goal of the season Friday night to snap a 2-2 deadlock and instigate a 4-2 whipping of the Seals.

The Sabres' win, only their third this year, ended a seven-game losing skid and abruptly halted a four-game California win string at a critical time for the Oaklanders.

Faced with three successive games in three separate cities, the Seals skate against Pittsburgh tonight after already having blown what would have appeared to be the easiest test of their seven-game trip.

In an ice hockey oddity, the Golden Seals outshot Buffalo by 14 shots but still managed to lose.

Wingers Gary Jarett and Gary Croteau each gained his fifth goal of the season in the second period as the Seals erased a 1-0 Bufaflo advantage. But Skip Krake's tally later in the middle period created the 2-2 tie which was broken by Andrea.

The Seals, displaying the strong forechecking which gave them homestead victories over Buffalo New York, Toronto and Montreal, kept the puck in their offensive zone for 36 shots on Buffalo goaltender Roger Crozier. Smith had to handle only 22 shots but 10 came in the Sabres' strong third period.

The heat will be on the Seals following tonight's contest, as the Oakland skaters must contend Sunday with the rough Boston Bruins, top steam in the NHL East.

Tar Runners Wind Up In Second

Collge of Marin's cross country team completed its dual meet season yesterday with a 25-30 victory over DeAnza J.C. of Cupertino yesterday in Kentfield.

Don Makela won the meet with a time of 23:17 over Marin's 3.8-mile course. Marin finished the Camino Norte Conference with a 5-1 mark, second to undefeated West Valley J.C. of Campbell.

Other Marin point winners, all with their best performances of the year, were Seamus O'Reilly, fourth; Jay Neuhaus, fifth; Steve Silvey, seventh, and Tom Weindel, eighth.

Next meet for the Tars will be the Northern California championships next Friday in Santa Maria.

North Is Favored In Warner Battle

Marin County's annual Pop Warner football League North-South all-star game will be played tomorrow at Novato High School, beginning at 1 p.m.

The North, including players from co-champions Novato and Terra Linda, and runnerup San Rafael, will be overwhelming favorites. Players from Tamalpais, Redwood and Drake comprise the South.

Bronc Ace Waits For The Raiders

DENVER (UPI) — Floyd Little loves to run against those pro football teams from the San Francisco Bay area.

The speedy running back of the Denver Broncos gets his final 1970 crack at a Bay Area team Sunday when the Oakland Raiders visit Mile High Stadium.

Little, who leads the American Football Conference with 632 yards rushing, got off an 80-yard touchdown burst against the 49ers in a losing cause Oct. 25. On Oct. 11, he dashed 54 yards off tackle for a TD against the Raiders in a 35-23 Denver loss.

Floyd needs only 97 yards to equal his previous high of 729 yards, set last year. The four-year veteran also needs just over 150 yards to hit the 2,500 mark for his career.

"This is certainly the biggest challenge of the season for us," said Broncos coach Lou Saban. "Oakland has the most explosive offense in football right now and they're really rolling."

The game will feature three of the top four running backs in the AFC. In addition to Little, Oakland's Hewritt Dixon and Charlie Smith rank second and fourth, respectively, and need only two yards to top the combined total of 1,000 yards this season.

Daryle Lamonica has been plagued all week with a bruised left shoulder, suffered last Sunday in a 23-20 win over Cleveland. But Raiders coach John Madden left no doubt in anyone's mind when he said: "Lamonica will start at quarterback."

Lamomnica will be facing one of the fiercest rushes in pro football in Rich Jackson, Dave Costa, Pete Duranko and Paul Smith. The Bronco front four has dumped opposing quarterbacks 32 times for a loss of 290 yards.

This is a crucial game in the Western Division of the AFC, with Oakland 4-2-2 holding a half-game edge over Kansas City 4-3-1 and one game over Denver 4-4 and San Diego 3-2-2.

Ex-Player To Appear In NFL Investigation

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Former Cleveland Browns defensive back Bernie Parrish said Saturday he had been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury here which will investigate the National Football League, beginning Monday.

Parrish was waived out of the NFL several years ago and ended his career with the Houston Oilers of the American Football League.

Only three of the 26 teams in the NFL had not yet received subpoenas to appear before the grand jury which reportedly will investigate possible anti-trust violations.

The teams that say they have not yet been subpoenaed are the Houston Oilers and Miami Dolphins and the Oakland Raiders.

There have been published reports that the Raiders would appear before the panel but the Oakland team has refused to confirm or deny them.

A Justice Department Spokesman said, however, all 26 teams will be subpoenaed.

Parrish, now employed by the Teamsters Union in St. Louis, said he did not know what the investigation was all about.

"I have been served with a sbupoena," said Parrish. "I will appear before the federal grand jury Wednesday and will have a statement after I testify, if it is permitted."

No Illusions About Tour For Baxter

SUNOL, Calif. (UPI)—Rex Baxter, the good looking Texan who found a home in Cleveland, has no illusions about tournament golf.

When he quit the pro tour two years ago after eight futile years of trying to make a living, he meant it.

Today, with two rounds left in the $50,000 PGA Club Professionals championship, he is the leader by three strokes over another hard-working pro, Francisco Lopez, who went the same route and came up with a handful of dust.

"No, even if I win here I won't go back on tour," Baxter said Friday after shooting a sparkling four-under-par 68 at the Sunol Valley's Cypress course for a two-round total of five under 139.

"All that's behind me now," Baxter continued. "I have a good job in Cleveland (Beechmont Country Club). I think the people there like me and most of all for my family's sake, I like the regular hours, although it's been quite an adjustment."

In the PGA club championship, the 34-year-old Baxter has a chance to win $8,000.

Lopez, five years older than Baxter and not half as secure jobwise, shot an opening round 68 but skied to a two over 74 Friday, mostly because he had to play in the wind and the final two holes under the lights on the tougher Palm course.

While Lopez was having only minimal trouble, Dick Whetzel, head pro at the posh Prince Georges Country Club in Landover, Md., nearly shot himself out of the tourney with a second-round 79. He and Lopez had opening-round 68s.

49ers' Nolan Hopes For Early Offense

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers hopes to come up with a first-half offense against Houston on Sunday to complement his second-half defense.

In the past three games, San Francisco has trailed Denver, 14-6, and Chicago, 13-10, at intermission, while deadlocking Green Bay, 10-10, before pulling them all out in the second half. Meanwhile, the Prospectors' defense has not yielded a second-half touchdown in those three gamaes.

"We've had slow starts for the past three games in the first half and that is a situation we must take care of as quickly as possible" said Nolan.

The 49ers (6-1-1) have been installed as 10 1-2 point favorites to hand the Oilers their sixth loss against two wins and a tie. San Francisco is already off to its fastest start in its 25-year history and Nolan doesn't want to lose any momentum against the Oilers, whose top two backs-Hoyle Granger and Woody Campbell-are sidelined with injuries.

For the first time in weeks, the 49ers are healthy with the exception of defensive end Stan Hindman. But he is nearly fully recovered from a leg injury and could take a turn on the defensive line shuttles.

When quarterback John Brodie, having his best season of 14 in the pros, completes his first pass against Houston, it will be No. 2,001. He tops the National Conference passers with nearly a 60 per cent completion percentage.

The amazing thing about Brodie, 34, is that he has gone without an interception in seven games this season.

Houston's offense is built around quarterback Charley Johnson, who has a trio of nifty receivers in Jerry Levias, Charley Joiner and Alvin Reed. Levias also is a top return man.

Redwood Frosh Win Grid Title

Redwood High School's freshman football team blanked Marin Catholic High School's frosh 26-0 yesterday to finish the Marin County Athletic League season with an undefeated record and a championship.

Scoring touchdowns in yesterday's game at Redwood High in Larkspur were Bill Edralin twice and Jeff Vogel and Mark Paige. Redwood's championship record was 5-0.

Instant Replay Needed For Fans In Stands

Television and instant replay give armchair sports enthusiasts an advantage over fans in the grandstands. It isn't just the advantage of a comfortable home seat. The armchair fan has the advantage of the second look at close calls on the instant replay.

So why shouldn't fans who pay their way into the grandstands also be given the advantage of the instant replay? If they screamed loud enough for equal time, as the politicians do, they might get instant replays right at the scene of action.

To be sure, instant replay screens in the grandstands or a big multi-sided scree that could be seen by all the customers would present lighting and installation problems. But such problems are not insurmountable. Certainly, they are not impossible to solve in a practical manner.

Instant replay at the scene of action isn't a novel idea. Paul Haney first suggested it. Haney now is vice president in charge of public relations for the Astrodome. He used to be the "Voice of Apollo" for the manned spacecraft center in Houston.

"You have to be superman with a pair of binoculars to see a face in a ootball game or one in a baseball ceremony at home plate," said Haney. "And what about that catch of a pass along the sidelines? Wsa the receiver in bounds with both feet? Or what about that close play at first base? Did the throw really beat the runner?

"Instant replay would immediately give fans in the stands a second look. It wouldn't be in competition with baseball umpires or football officials. Theirs are judgment calls and all fans understand that. But the yearning of fans at the scene of action for an occasional second look is quite understandable."

Good officials and umpires would probably welcome instant replay at the scene of action. They are not infallible but only in isolated instances are their judgment calls seemingly in conflict with instant replays. And in those cases it could be the camera angle that creates the confusion.

As for the practical problems of installing workable instant replay screens on the scene of action, Haney has this to say:

"The major obstacle is the amount of light required. But I remember the obstacle of putting a six-pound television camera on the moon."

Compared with putting a camera on the moon, putting instant replay in parks should be child's play for the commissioners of baseball and football. Surely, Bowie Kuhn and Pete Rozelle realize that.

Australians Running Away In World Golf

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—Australians David Graham and Bruce Devlin held a commanding 10-stroke lead today going into the third round of the World Cup Golf Tournament. But Devlin wasn't satisfied.

"It's not good enough," he said Friday after he added a 69 to an opening 66 to go with Graham's 65-67 giving the pair from down under a record 21-under par for the halfway mark.

10 STROKES

The Australians led the Argentine team of Roberto De Vicenzo-Vicente Fernandez by 10 strokes, Denmark's Henrik Lund-Herluf Hansen by 15 strokes and Dave Stockton-Lee Trevino of the U.S. by 16 strokes.

And Graham was only one stroke behind De Vicenzo's 64-67—131 lead in the individual standings as the two Aussies and the 47-year-old Argentine continued to master the 6,800-yard, par-72 jockey club course.

A total of more than 15,000 Argentines swarmed over the course on Friday to cheer hometown hero De Vincenzo on. And he responded with a birdie three on the short, 354-yard 18th hole to their delight. It allowed him to keep the lead going into the third round.

CROWD

"It's the biggest crowd I've ever seen at a South American tournament," said De Vicenzo, who lose the Masters Tournament in a playoff with Bob Goalby in 1968 after signing an incorrect scorecard at the end of regulation play.

The 21-under-par total by the Australians broke the 36-hole record of 14-underpar set by Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus when they won the World Cup in Hawaii in 1964. The U.S. has won the cup in eight of the last 10 years but appeared to have little chance for a repeat after a pair of 73s by Trevino and Stockton on Friday.

"If I told you what I thought, I don't think you would be able to print it," Trevino said at the end of the second round.

Graham and Devlin huddle over every shot and talk it over, giving and taking advice freely.

HUDDLE

Graham, who failed to make the U.S. professional tour in a recent test tournament in the United States, also joked: "on one of the last holes, I told Bruce: 'if you don't make a four on this one, I'll chop you in the throat'.

"He made his four."

The two Australians played superb golf and had only four bogeys in 72 holes between then in the first two rounds.

NFL ROUNDUP

Browns-Bengals Natural Rivalry

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It certainly didn't take the Cleveland Browns and the Cincinnati Bengals very long to become "natural rivals."

When owner Art Modell shifted his team into the AFC, he insisted that the Browns be in the same division with the Bengals and the Pittsburgh Steelers.

That was a maneuver that has saved the Browns' whole season. It means that the Browns are in a division where they are able to be tied for first place with only a 4-4 record and the Bengals-Browns rivalry has quickly become one of the keenest in football.

Since the Browns and Bengals are both in Ohio, it would be a "natural" rivalry under any circumstances. But since the man who now runs the Bengals — Paul Brown — is the same man who gave the Browns their name, the rivalry has an added dimension.

Brown has left little doubt that beating the Browns is one of his top goals. The Bengals did it in an exhibition game this year by a 31-24 margin but Cleveland came back to win the first regular game by a 30-27 score. The game was played in Cleveland and the Browns' fans couldn't help noticing that Paul Brown avoided the customary postgame congratulatory handshake with Cleveland coach Blanton Collier.

This was especially unusual since Collier was a member of Brown's first staff back in 1946.

But Brown, who feels he was treated unfairly by Cleveland when the Browns fired him and gave Collier the coaching job, still has strong feelings about the Browns.

Cincinnati only has a 2-6 record this year and isn't in the race but the Bengals could make their season by upsetting the Browns. Cleveland, which is now tied with Pittsburgh—which meets Kansas City—for first place, needs a victory after being beaten by George Blanda's heroics last week.

Cleveland has lost two straight games and Collier is switching to rookie Mike Phipps in place of Bill Nelsen at quarterback. The Browns got Phipps when they traded Paul Warfield to Miami for the Dolphins' No. 1 draft choice, which was Phipps. They figured Phipps was insurance against Nelsen's bad knees but he's getting a starting assignment sooner than he expected.

St. Louis is at Dallas in the Monday night TV game in a battle for first place in the NFC Eastern Division.

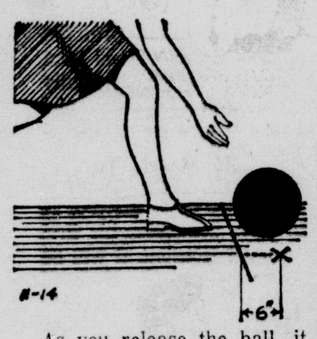
Baltimore, which has a three-game lead in the AFC East, is a heavy favorite over Buffalo this week and is about the only team which is assured of one of the eight playoff spots.

But Minnesota can just about wrap up a spot this week when it meets Detroit for the second time in three weeks. The Vikings hold a two-game lead over the Lions in the NFC Central and a victory in this game would give them a three-game lead over the Lions.

Detroit was shocked last week by Tom Dempsey's record 63-yard field goal as the gun sounded and is now in a position of having to win this one to stay in the race.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



As you release the ball, it should land about six inches beyond the line. Years of bowling have convinced me that this is just about the right distance. Pitch it farther and you take spin off the ball. Not pitching it out at all or "dropping" the ball, leads to poor control.

Dan Burke rolled games of 225, 267 and 211 in the North Bay Classic 940 League at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael which totaled out to a 703 series, high mark of the week's Marin County bowling.

Bonavena Suspended—Long Hair

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentine heavyweight Oscar "Ringo" Bonavena, who is slated to meet Cassius Clay next Dec. 7 in New York, was suspended for 90 days by the local municipal boxing commission Friday for "refusing to get a haircut."

The suspension, which applies locally for the time being, will be sent to the Argentine Boxing Commission which has ties with International Boxing Commissions.

It was not immediately known if the suspension would possibly affect the fight with Clay.

The brief statement said the 28-year-old Bonavena had been suspended for his repeated refusal to have his hair cut and for presenting himself in professional bouts counter to regulations."

NBA HIGHLIGHTS

Cavaliers Back To Hard Times

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Cleveland Cavaliers are back in stride again.

The Cavaliers, who tied a National Basketball Association record by losing their first 15 games, broke out of it Thursday night with their first victory over Portland. But it was back to hard times Friday night when the Seattle Super Sonics beat Cleveland 111-91, the Cavaliers' 16th loss in 17 games.

Cleveland is on course to break the NBA mark for fewest victories in an 82-game schedule. That was set in 1967-68 when the San Diego Rockets won only 15 games while dropping 67.

Dick Snyder had 26 points and player-coach Denny Wilkens had 24 as the Sonics raced off to an easy victory. McCoy McLemore led the Cavaliers with 18 points.

In other NBA action Friday night, Los Angeles downed Detroit, 122-109, Atlanta edged Boston, 116-114, San Francisco beat San Diego, 107-102, Phoenix defeated Cincinnati, 115-109, Philadelphia overcame Buffalo, 119-111 and New York stopped Chicago, 106-98.

Jerry West and Gail Goodrich scored 28 points each to lead the Lakers over Detroit. The two guards combined for 25 of the Lakers' first 26 points in the third period as Los Angeles overcame a nine-point Piston lead. Dave Bing led Detroit scorers with 20 points.

Walt Bellamy scored on a halfcourt pass from Bill Bridges with one second remaining in the game to give the Hawks their victory over Boston. Bellamy sank a free throw to tie the game and Jim Davis stole the ball from the Celtics to set the stage for the winning basket. Lou Hudson led the Hawks with 35 points while rookie Dave Cowens' 29 paced the Celtics.

Neal Walk sparked a third-quarter rally that lifted Phoenix oevr the Royals. Walk scored nine of his 19 points and hauled in seven of his 15 rebounds during that period to rally the Suns from a 15-point deficit. Clem Haskins and Connie Hawkins each had 26 points for the Suns while rookie Sam Lacey led Cincinnati with 20.

Jim Washington scored 12 of his 18 points in the last period to rally Philadelphia past Buffalo. Billy Cunningham, Hal Greer and Bailey Howell each had 20 points for the 76ers while Bob Kauffman led the Braves with 28.

Dave DeBusschere scored 24 points and Walt Frazier and Dick Barnett had 18 each as New York downed Chicago. Bob Love paced the Bulls' attack with 20 points.

Wiebe Leading Grand American Drag Racing

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — John Wiebe blasted down the quarter mile in his double A fuel dragster in 6.98 seconds Friday to lead the qualifying for the Grand American Series of Professional Drag Racing finale.

The Newton, Kan., driver, holder of a slim lead for the $20,000 top prize in fuel dragster ranks, had a speed of 204.83 miles per hour.

In fuel funny cars, Don Prudhomme, Granada Hills, Calif., set a low qualifying time of 7.21 seconds in a plymouth barracuda. The top speed in the same division, 200.01 miles per hour, was established by Dick Harrel, Kansas City, Mo., in a Camaro.

KARL STEIN AT MONTANA

A Record Setting Season

Stein is an art major who also makes pass intercepting and punt returning an art in itself.

Stein is the senior free safety on the University of Montana football team and in his two-year career has pilfered 19 passes and returned the interceptions for 398 yards.

The senior from San Anselmo set a Big Sky pass interception record in 1969 with 11, and this season he set a conference interception return record with 207 yards. Both are school records.

Stein also has tied a single game school conference mark for a number of interceptions. He and four others have picked off three passes apiece. Stein did it against Northern Arizona in 1969 and Northern Illinois in 1970.

Not only is the 6-foot and 195-pound senior a threat in the defensive secondary, but as a kickoff and punt return artist also.

Stein has tied a conference and school record for the most punts returned in a single game with seven and has set a season punt return mark with 38. The old record was 27 set by Montana's Ron Bain in 1968.

Stein also holds the most yards returns from punts with 398 yards. The old conference mark was 388 yards set by Montana State's Gary Popiel in 1967.

The free safety also holds another mark for the most "one tackle away from a touchdown" runs. In his two years and 19 pass interceptions, 66 punt returns and 28 kickoff returns, Stein on several occasions has been one tackle away from a return for a touchdown.

"One of these days Karl is going to break one," Grizzly coach Jack Swarthout said. "He's been so close on so many occasions that I think he'll pop one pretty quick."

Swarthout said Stein has the natural instinct to go to the bail and is the Grizzlies most sure-handed receiver. "He could play split end for us," Swarthout said.

University of Montana's Karl Stein was honorable mention All-American on the Kodak and Associated Press teams. He was also first team All-Big Sky and All-District Six (NCAA).

Swarthout believes Stein will top those honors this season as a senior. "He is a tremendous individual that works for the team." Stein and the other players on the undefeated Grizzly team play as a team, and Swarthout said he is proud of them.

"You know guys like Stein could go out for themselves, but they don't. They work as a unit and win as a team," Swarthout said.

Stein was one of eight ineligible players (because of transfers) on the 1969 Camellia Bowl team. This season when the Grizzlies go to the camellia bowl Stein will be in action. Tht game, Dec. 12 in Sacramento, will be against North Dakota State.

Stein is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward V. Stein of 7 Raven Road, San Anselmo.

If you had to play today's hand without any sutdy, you would probably go down. But maybe if you get this kind of hand next week, or even a year from now, you will think along the right lines and come up with the right play.

JUST LUCKY

West opened the king of hearts and then shifted to the nine of clubs. South won with the king of clubs, led a diamond to dummy's queen, and returned a spade to try a finesse with the jack of spades.

West won with the ace of spades, of course, but South eventually had to give up two more trump tricks to East. Down one.

South could have made the contract if he had played a low spade from his hand instead of the jack. Is this the right play, or is it just lucky?

ACE IS LOCATED

The ace of spades is surely located in the West hand for West's vulnerable opening bid. If the ace is a singleton, South surely gains by leading a low spade from his hand instead of getting to dumy to try a finesse with the jack.

What if West started with two spades? If West started with A-Q of spades, he is sure to get two tricks. If West started with A-10, A-9, or A-8, West will get his ace, and East will get the queen even if declarer begins by finessing with the jack. They will get two trump tricks likewise if South leads a low spade first and later tries a finesse with the jack.

TRUMP TRICKS

What if West started with three spades? West is sure to get three tricks if he has A-Q and one other spade. If West has three spades to the A-10 or A-9, the defenders will get two trump tricks whether South takes an immediate finesse with the jack of spades or whether he first leads a low spade and next finesses with the jack.

In short, South never loses by leading a low spade. He gains when West has the singleton ace: and South avoids a guess when West has the doubleton A-Q.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ K 7 6 5 3
♥ 7
♦ K 9 8 4
♣ K 5.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not quite worth an opening bid. If the spades were headed by A-J instead of by K-J, the hand would be worth an opening bid of one spade.

Lutheran Branch Elects President

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (LC) — A top-ranking young theologian has been chosen as president of the American Lutheran Church.

At the ALC's fifth biennial convention, Dr. Kent S. Knutson, 46-year-old president of Wartburg Theological Seminary at Dubuque, Iowa, was named on the fourth and final ballot of an election marked by open political campaigning unprecedented in the annals of American Protestantism.

Only a simple majority was required as he defeated Dr. David W. Preus, the last survivor of nine other candidates for the office, by a decisive vote of 566-to-411.

Dr. Knutson was the youngest of the 10 candidates nominated by the 18 districts of the ALC, his rivals ranging up to 64 years of age.

Elected to a six-year term, he will lead a church that, with 2.5 million members is the third largest Lutheran body and ninth largest Protestant denomination in the United States.

Established in 1960 by a merger of three bodies, the ALC was joined in 1963 by a fourth church. The union brought together the old American Lutheran Church (German), the Evangelical Lutheran Church (Norwegian), the United Evangelical Lutheran Church (Danish) and, later, the Lutheran Free Church (Norwegian).

Dr. Knutson was born in Goldfield, Iowa, on Aug. 7, 1924. After graduating from Iowa State University at Ames with a bachelor of science degree in 1947, he worked for a brief period as a chemical engineer.

In 1949 he went to Norway for a year's study at the University of Oslo, then entered Luther Seminary at St. Paul, Minn., and received his divinity degree in 1951. He has also attended the University of Minnesota, the University of Heidelberg in Germany, and Columbia University in New York City. He received a doctorate in philosophy from Union Theological Seminary in New York City in 1961.

Dr. Knutson served as pastor of Our Saviour Lutheran church in Staten Island, N.Y., from 1954 to 1958, then joined the faculty of Luther Seminary in St. Paul as assistant and later associate professor of systematic theology. He was also director of graduate studies from 1960 to 1969. He came to his present post as president of Wartburg Seminary in 1969.

Dr. Knutson is chairman of the standing committee of the Division of Theological Studies of the Lutheran Council in the USA and a participant in the current theological conversations between Lutherans and Roman Catholics in this country and between Lutherans and Anglicans abroad.

Lack Of Interest In Religion – Big Crisis

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

"Wer'e having the worst recession in 25 years, and I don't see any recovery in sight," said a prominent church leader.

He happened to be an Episcopalian, but the same statement could be made about many other major denominations.

The religious recession has been developing for several years. It is reflected in virtually every available index of public interest in religion. Bible sales, for example, have dropped about 25 per cent over the past decade. Church-related newspapers and magazines are losing subscribers at a painful rate. Sunday School enrollment has declined every year for the past six years.

In retrospect, it now appears that the postwar boom in religious interest crested in the late fifties, and has been subsiding slowly ever since. The Gallup organizations' annual survey of church attendance peaked in 1958, when49 per cent of America's adult population attended worship services on a typical Sunday. In 1969, only 42 per cent turned out, and the 1970 figure probably will be even lower.

The impact of the recession is most conspicuous in that ever-sensitive gauge of human concern —money.

The Episcopal Church, because it has just published a fresh batch of financial statistics, provides a convenient example of what's happening in many mainline denominations.

In 1967, the Episcopal Church (meaning the parent national organization) went $1 million into the red. In 1969, despite budget cuts, it failed by $1.7 million to raise enough funds to balance its expenditures. In 1970, officials estimate the church's receipts will fall nearly $4 million short of its pared-down $14.7 million budget.

The immediate cause is easy to identify. Only half of the church's 90 dioceses were able or willing last year to meet their annual quotas for contributions to the parent body.

A few withheld funds out of pique over the church's efforts to help black people, Indians, Spanish-Americans, young people and other "voiceless" groups to organize themselves for more effective representation in the nation's decision-making processes.

But many Episcopal dioceses defaulted on their quotas solely because they, too, are hurting for money. For example, the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D.C,. —one of the healthier dioceses of the church —asked its parishes last year for $652,000 as a rock bottom minimum to carry on diocesan programs. The parishes responded with pledges totalling $568,000, but only $545,000 was actually paid in.

The financial pinch really begins at the parish or local church level, and is simply passed along to higher echelons. Consider these figures, from a once-thriving parish in the wealthy Maryland suburbs of Washington:

In 1963, income from individual pledges and plate offerings totalled nearly $140,000. In 1970, with luck, it will be about $125,000. And there has been a lot of inflation in those years, so that the actual drop in constant dollars is even greater than it appears.

THANKSGIVING SPECIAL RITES ARE NEEDED

Hub Church Concert Is Tomorrow

Rodef Sholom To Seat New Rabbi

Congregation Rodef Sholom of San Rafael will install its new rabbi, David Davis, at services Friday at 8:15 p.m.

Some Kinds Of Religious Training Can Be Harmful

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The view is widely held among parents that any religious training a child receives is bound to do him some good.

But it doesn't necessarily work that way. Some kinds of religious training, although well intended, may be very harmful to a child's spiritual development.

Take, for example, the matter of prayer. Parents with any degree of personal faith usually make an effort to teach their children to "say their prayers."

No one would deny the value of helping a child form the habit of daily prayer from his earliest years. But it matters enormously how a child is taught to think of prayer.

MISTAKEN VIEW

A mistaken view of prayer, implanted or encouraged by parents, may cause a youngster to become an atheist in his teens.

In a recent issue of the Christian Herald, religious educator Better Garton Ulrich recounted the story of a mother who couldn't comprehend why her college-age son had rejected belief in God.

The mother "recalled fondly how, as a small child, her son had prayed with unquestioning faith that God would grant him a bicycle. It was obvious from the tone of her reminiscences that the parents, in buying him the bicycle, had deliberately encouraged the child to believe that if he only prayed believingly enough, his prayers would be granted."

RELIGIOUS TRAINING

This kind of "religious training" is disastrous because it teaches a child to think of prayer as a letter to a heavenly Santa Claus. It may work for a while, but sooner or later the child will pray for things the parents don't know about, or cannot provide. He will then conclude either that there is no God, or, worse, that God exists but doesn't love him any more.

Even if a child should somehow escape this kind of disenchantment, he will never be able to grow into a mature religious faith so long as he thinks of God as a wish-granter. For any such concept gets the man-God relationship exactly backwards. Instead of seeing himself as the creature and servant of God, a child sees himself as the center of the universe, and sees God as a genie whose role is to protect and please him.

This doesn't mean that a child should be discouraged from asking God for things — including bicycles. It does mean that children should be taught from the very start to pray in the spirit of Jesus.

Jesus habitually addressed God as "Father in Heaven." The term can be a pitfall for children if they're allowed to form anthropomorphic images of God. But it is not difficult for parents to make clear that even though God does not look like a man, He does deal with His human children in the manner of a loving father.

This concept of God as Father teaches a child to acknowledge his dependence on God and at the same time prepares him for the possibility of getting No for an answer occasionally.

"A child does not cease to love and trust his parents merely because they sometimes refuse to give him what he wants," observes Miss Ulrich. "In fact, as he matures in understanding, he learns, either by the teaching of his parents or through experience, that often it is BECAUSE his parents love him that they refuse some of his requests. Just so he can be taught that a loving God denies some of our requests."

The lesson can be made clearer by teaching a child to conclude his prayers as Jesus did by saying: "Not my will but thine be done." This short sentence, whenever it is said sincerely, encompasses the deepest truths that a human being can learn, at any age, about his relationship to God.

Implicit in it is the faith that God can always be trusted to watch over us with a loving concern for our ultimate best interests. And it also constitutes a humble acknowledgment that it is God's will, not ours, that really matters, for this is His universe and we exist solely because we are part of His creative purpose.

Still Carries On

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles, the first church in Los Angeles, is still the center of an active parish. The restored church building is ornamented with fine old statuary and stained glass windows.

Marinite Elected To Head GTU Directors

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Mrs. A. Crawford Greene Jr. of Ross has become the first woman to head a board of directors of a major theological institution in the United States.

Her elevation to the chairmanship of Berkeley's ecumenical Graduate Theological Union came recently at a meeting of directors. Mrs. Greene, a Catholic, succeeds Rev. Paul Hinkger of Piedmont, who will remain on the board.

GTU President John Dillenberger said of her election: "The dedication to the ecumenical goals of the FTU and the energetic leadership Mrs. Greene has shown as a trustee has been an inspiration to our board and the heads of the nine-member institutions . . ."

Mrs. Greene, wife of a San Francisco attorney and the mother of four children, was originally nominated to the board of Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Episcopal Bishop of California.

New officers besides Mrs. Greene are Henry Bowles, first vice chairman; Richard Dinner, second vice chairman, Jane Newhall, secretary, all of San Francisco, and William P. Jaeger Jr., treasurer, St. Helena.

DURING SEPTEMBER

9,300 Free Ferry Riders

A report that 9,300 persons rode free on the Sausalito ferry in September yesterday brought a collective gasp from Golden Gate Bridge District directors.

The report, by district auditor Gordon E. Dahlgren, strongly criticized the fare collection system on the ferry, noting that 92,579 rode during the month, but only 83,279 fares were collected.

Transit Mgr. Donald White explained that the 9,300 difference between passengers and fares collected was accounted for by infants, concessionaires and district personnel riding close herd on the operation during its first full month of service.

Dahlgren's report, however, said that such exceptions to fare-paying passengers could make a small difference, "but certainly not to the amount of 9,300."

His report came before the finance-auditing committee, and many directors clearly were not convinced by White's explanation. He and Dahlgren were asked to work out a better system of fare collection and to report back to the committee within one month.

Especially disturbing to the directors was the practice of sometimes using the same ferry crewman to both sell tickets and then collect them at the end of the voyage.

No suggestion was made that there had been any dishonesty, but several directors criticized the system for leaving too much room for crewmen to pocket receipts.

Dahlgren's report, based on a trip he took aboard the vessel early last month, said that the ticket window aboard was unattended at times. "It seems highly possible that the cash box could be picked up by anyone who waited for the right opportunity," Dahlgren said, since "the box was locked but not fastened down or concealed from passengers."

He noted that White had made several changes in fare collection procedures since September, among them improvements to the public address system so passengers can understand directors for ticket handling.

Dahlgren's suggestions for improvements included a consideration of one-way fare collection.

Luehring commented that some of Dahlgren's suggestions, because of their cost, could mean "you spend $2,000 to collect $600."

The Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

BICYCLES — Received an opinion from the district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, that no legal bar stood in the way of proposed use of the seat sidewalk for bicycles. Luehring was asked to devise a test of such use.

ATTORNEY — Voted, after a 10-minute closed meeting, to pay Jenkins $50 an hour for his services. Jenkins previously reported that, because of an unexpectedly heavy workload of bridge district business, he had "used up" his annual $17,000 retainer within two months after he was hired on July 1. The amount of the retainer dated from the days before the district got into the transit business.

TRAFFIC Received a report from Luehring that the rate of increase in traffic had fallen to 1.6 per cent in October compared with the same month last year. If the previous rate had continued, the month would have had 17,337 vehicles during the average three-hour morning commute period. Instead, it had 16,194. Luehring atrributed the decline to increased parking rates in San Francisco, the general slow-down in the economy, and increased ferry patronage.

TOLLS — Received report from Luehring that 62,125,314 vehicles had crossed the bridge in the two years since the one-way toll system started Oct. 19, 1968.

PLAN — Received report that the long-range transit plan being drafted by Kaiser Engineers will be presented to the board on Nov. 24.

TEST — Received report that a device capable of counting dual-wheeled vehicles has been installed in a toll lane for testing for possible use in plans to modernize the toll plaza.

FERRY Ratified expenditure of $5,517 for the annual inspection and other maintenance work on the Sausalito ferry.

PAINT — Accepted a low bid of $26,500 from Superior Coating & Chemical of Orange County to provide 10,000 gallons of international orange topcoat vinyl paint, and a low bid of $9,500 from the same company to provide 4,000 gallons of vinyl white wash primer paint.

COMMITTEE — Set a meeting of the transportation committee at 9:30 a.m. next Friday in toll plaza offices to screen naval architects to design ferries for the district, and to review staff progress on the joint bus and ferry system approved by the board.

Subdivision Maps On Agenda

Final maps for two additional East Petaluma subdivisions and a request for prezoning for another development will be considered at the Petaluma Planning Commission meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Final maps will be submitted for Monarch Pacific Unit No. 8 between St. Francis Drive and Perry Lane as well as for Casa Grande Unit No. 4 on Ely Boulevard South.

The M-T Development Corp. will request prezoning for single and multiple residences for property on Old Lakeville Highway between Casa Grande and Frates roads.

Land Use Session

The Novato City Council will discuss the land use of the triangle between South Novato Boulevard, Diablo Avenue and the Nave Shopping Center at an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the community house.

San Rafael Accidents Injure Four Persons

San Rafael police reported yesterday that four persons were injured in auto accidents in the city. Three were treated for injuries at Marin General Hopsital and the fourth declined medical assistance.

Bruce G. Wallace, 24, of 360 Tennessee Avenue, Mill Valley, was treated at the hospital Thursday for cuts and bruises on the upper lip after his car crashed into a parked car on Fourth Street near Alexander Avenue at an undetermined time.

Anthony Lee Santos, 18, of 412 Hickory Lane, San Rafael, was treated Thursday for bruises and his passenger, Robert Hanas, 17, of 30 Novato Street, was released from the hospital without treatment after Santos' pickup hit two parked cars on Third near Mary Street at 10:50 p.m.

Elaine Bundy, 48, of Berkeley said she would see her own physician following an accident Thursday involving her car and that of Rita M.C. Elliott, 21, of 19 Allyn Avenue, San Anselmo, at 4:04 p.m. on Second Street near Brooks Street, police said.

San Rafael Gives Fire Test To 88

Eighty-eight men, believed to be the largest turnout in recent years, have taken the written examination for the job of firemen in San Rafael.

Six jobs will be filled in the department in January, but there are four men on the eligibility list, meaning there are only two definite openings for the applicants, reported Virginia H. Congdon, administrative assistant.

There was a record number of applicants for the job, 142, with 135 qualifying and 88 taking the written test Thursday night, she said.

Those who aren't hired will be placed on the department's eligibility list for one year, Mrs. Congdon reported.

Petaluma Council Will Consider Developments

Two plans for residential developments and an annexation application — all sure to be opposed by East Petaluma Homeowner organizations — will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Included will be a request to approve the Briarwood annexation on Casa Grande Road for residential development as well as an application to prezone adjacent land for a mobile home park and single family residences.

Attorney Arthur L. Lafranchi will appeal the decision of the planning commission to deny rezoning for a mobile home park on 28 acres adjacent to the Candlewood Mobile Home Park on North McDowell Boulevard.

Plea For Mobile Home For Nursing Classes Is Slated

College of Marin nursing students, who have been attending classes at Marin General Hospital, may be forced out into the parking lot because of space shortage in the hospital.

Lyla S. Cromer, nursing instructor, has applied for a variance to allow the temporary use of a mobile classroom in the parking area in front of the hospital at 250 Bon Air Road.

The request for the mobile classroom will be considered at a special hearing before the Marin County zoning administrator at 10:30 a.m. on Nov. 20. The hearing will be held in Room 308-A on the third floor of the Marin County Civic Center.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST LEADER

Poverty Program Is Hit

The head of America's largest non-Catholic denomination said yesterday government-administered poverty programs only make "the rich richer and the poor poorer."

Dr. Carl E. Bates, president of the 11.5-million member Southern Baptist Convention, told an audience at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry that the exception to this rule is church-sponsored programs.

"The church was concerned with poor people long before anyone else was," said the 56-year-old minister. "As soon as poverty became big business, the government jumped in." Church programs actually help poor people, while federal ones usually don't he said.

On the subject of war dissent, Bates said that people have a right to protest war, "but not in the streets. I'm surprised the government has let this (protest) go on as long as it has."

Because of the unique composition of the Southern Baptist Convention, to which he was elected head in June, it cannot speak for its 35,000 member churches on such issues as joining the National Council of Churches or taking part in an ecumenical movement among churches.

"The churches don't belong to the convention, they only cooperate with the convention," said Bates, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Charlotte, N.C., since 1959.

The power flows from the churches to the convention, rather than the other way around, he said, adding that "this is an enigma to many people."

Dr. Bates said he personally has some great reservations about the National and World Council of Churches, which have been accused of being too liberal by some conservative churchmen.

"I would like to catch hands with every Christian brother in the world," he said, "but the positions that the National Council and World Council have taken would leave me without a place to go."

Bates declared that the current generation "is far more sincere than mine was in their search for truth," but said theres' always been a youth revolution.

Our generation had rebels looking for a cause," he said. "I found the only cause worth dying for is Christ."

Earlier, in a talk before some 150 faculty and students of the seminary, Bates warned his audience, never to stop learning. "You must be a student," he said, "and maintain a growing edge in your mind and soul."

If he were a teacher at the seminary, he said, he would not sign the diploma of a student who had not mastered the Bible and the grammar book.

He cited himself as an example, saying he spends a portion of each morning reading and studying. "I dare you to catch me unprepared to preach," he said.

Only through Bible study, he said, can one learn the word of God. "If you can handle the word," he said, "I will handle your problems. If you can't, you're in trouble."

Tire, Rim Stolen

A truck tire with rim valued at $129 was taken from the truck of Graham C. Campbell of 5 Lodge Lane either Wednesday or Nov. 4, San Rafael police said yesterday.

Students To Hold Park Fund Walk

The San Marin High School Ecology Action Club will sponsor an eight-mile walk next Saturday to raise money for promotion and acquisition of park land.

The walk starting at 9 a.m. at Lee's Brothers parking lot off Seventh Street, will proceed past San Marin High School, Novato High School, and along Reichert and De Long Avenues.

Walkers will have sponsors who will pledge to pay a certain amount for each mile they cover, and do not necessarily have to complete the eight miles.

Club members are visiting all Novato schools to invite students to participate, and "walk cards" are available at San Marin High business office. The card will be stamped at checkpoints along the march route, according to Carold Childs, club president.

Club members will supervise children under 10 who aren't accompanied by an adult or don't have permission from their parents to walk by themselves.

Walkers will go to their sponsors after the walk to get paid for the number of miles they completed and the money will be sent to Walk for Parks, 15 San Marin Drive.

The money will be used for promotion and acquisition of parks in Novato, Norma Tood, club sponsor, said. She did not know whether it would be given to the city parks and recreation department or the Novato Civic Foundation.

The club expects to have about 1,000 in the march.

Tiburon Ferry Commute Book Hike On Monday

The year-old commute book rate of 50 cents a ride on the Tiburon ferry will become 67.5 cents Monday.

Albert Ellidge, president of Harbor Tours which runs the ferry to San Francisco, said the increase has been forced by rising operating costs.

Ellidge said the Golden Gate Bridge District set the rate at 50 cents after it took over the strike-bound operation in November and it was retained by the company when the strike was settled in April.

The rate had been 67.5 cents from 1962 until the bridge set its price, Ellidge said.

To Caricature, You Must Exaggerate

See Page M2

Pencil, Paper, Eraser And Imagination

That statement coming from a revolutionary might well be expected, but from a 15-year-old Tamalpais High School student who thinks Richard M. Nixon and Spiro Agnew are great, it sounds puzzling.

The answer to the riddle, however, is that young Robby Miller draws cartoons and caricatures that rank with the best. He loves to sketch the Cuban dictator whom he says is a "cinch to draw," but has drawn more praise with his caricatures of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew.

Robby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Miller who are both students at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Mill Valley. The talented Miller family resides at 1B Lockett Lane, on the seminary campus.

YOUNG ROBBY has been "doodling" as long as his mother can remember, but it has been the past three years while at the seminary that his work has been readily seen by the public. Several of his caricatures, including a couple of seminary professors, were put on display in the seminary library this summer and were an immediate hit.

"I don't know why I do so many political figures," Robby said, "but I guess it is because they appear in newspapers and magazines so much I have something from which to sketch."

ROBBY ASSURES his friends that the humorous caricatures of Nixon and Agnew have no political implications — "I'm in favor of them!"

Although Robby's actual training has been mostly self-taught with some help from school art classes, his career — if it can be called that at this early stage — has really just begun. Last year he drew caricatures of students who submitted articles for the campus student newspaper, The Current, for the publication's use.

Asked if her son ever won any awards or honors with his art work, Robby's mother laughed and answered: "He won a camera once for coloring the back of a cereal box. He was about 10 then. . .and it took about a year for the camera to come!"

LOOKING AT a drawing one might think it would take several hours, if not days, to complete. However, Robby says some may only take five minutes, while others could take a couple of days.

A soft lead pencil, paper and a good eraser are the necessary tools, he added.

Drawing isn't the only activity that absorbs Robby's free time, as he is also skilled in leatherwork. He has tooled a family Bible, fashioned a hairpiece for his mother and created several other items.

He points to his father, who was an engineer for several years before coming to Golden Gate for work on a theology degree, as his teacher. The senior Miller had a set of tools easily available.

THE TALENTED Miller family includes two other boys, Les, 12, and Mark, 10. Les is expressing a strong interest in origami — the Japanese art of folding paper into various shapes and forms.

Mrs. (Nancy) Miller is a special student at the seminary while Bill is finishing work on a Master of Divinity Degree in anticipation of enrolling for a Master of Religious Education Degree. These are the two primary degrees given by the seminary.

Miller left a financially rewarding position as senior engineer with Litton Industries in Southern California to come to the seminary. He had been involved in the aerospace program and worked in the three Titan missile programs as well as the Apollo and airborne computer programs. He had previously worked from Northrup Institute of Technology, Inglewood, Calif.

CONCENTRATION is one of the keys to successful caricaturing and cartooning, says 15-year-old Robby Miller of Strawberry. Also important is a creative imagination. Young Robby's subjects range from the nation's top political leaders to figures on the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary campus where he resides with his parents who are students there.

(Photos by Preston North)

ROBBY SAYS drawing a caricature of someone is an "exaggeration," to use the proper lingo.

You hit upon the person's most striking features, he explains, and then exaggerate their visual impact.

So while pencil, paper and eraser suffice as tools, a keen perception, steadfast concentration and a creative imagination are other requisites. Young Robby's admirers say he has these in abundance. And that there is no need for exaggerating his talents for visual exaggeration.

"I LIKE THE ONE of Agnew best," decides Bill Miller, Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary student, as he checks caricatures drawn by his son, Robby, of the vice president and President Richard M. Nixon. The teen-ager hastens to explain that while his drawings exaggerate the features of the President and vice president, no disrespect is intended: "In fact, I'm for them."

Eight Enlist In Mental Health Cause

Eight young men and women of college and young adult age are rediscovering the old truth that by extending help to others, they develop and benefit themselves.

They are the current participants in a work-study program initiated by the Community Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital to assist community groups in their efforts to prevent mental illness and foster mental health.

They represent the second group at the center to be so organized by Connie Lashbrook, community mental health educator. Both have met with striking success. And as a result, plans call for an expansion of the program.

PRESENTLY THE eight young men and women are working in such facilities and programs as the Sausalito Street Ministry, the Marin Drop-In Center and the Creative Living Center in San Rafael, and the Mill Valley Drop-In House.

As they assist in those programs, the volunteers find their own capabilities, sensitivities and knowledge expanding.

The long-range objective, says Mrs. Lashbrook, "is to develop a core of para-professionals in the area of mental health care."

AND THE HOPE is that a program ultimately will be organized with an affiliation with colleges and universities on a credit basis.

"The response from both the organizations where the participants in the work-study program are involved, and from the men and women themselves, has been amazing," Mrs. Lashbrook says. "They find great joy in working with other people, and they thereby find they are growing themselves."

Some of the young people are finding that they especially enjoy the community aspect of their participation.

Judy Donaldson, who grew up in Sausalito and attended Tamalpais High School, is working in the Street Ministry in Sausalito by editing and publishing a weekly newspaper and helping the concept of the Street Ministry grow.

JUDY SEES the Street Ministry as an expression of Christ's love for young transients, and is enthusiastic about the goal of making the church relevant to young people.

"It is a communication between people with different life styles," she said.

Marcia Canning, another member of the current work-study program, was born in Marin but has lived throughout the world while her Air Force father was stationed at different bases. Marcia helps at the Creative Living Center at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Rafael, assisting in psycho-dramas and in art therapy.

"WHEN I AM able to put something out, it's helping me as much as the people I work with," Marcia says.

"Why Aren't Raincoats Waterproof?"

Most rainwear is not waterproof. Drycleanable rainwear has a water repellent finish which may make it proof against a shower, but it is not waterproof. Further, it is generally true that when this rainwear or similarly treated sportswear is drycleaned, even the water repellency is lost. A water repellent finish should be renewed with each drycleaning.

The only waterproof rainwear is a completely plastic garment. Such rainwear is often uncomfortably hot in summer and stiffens in the cold. Fabric garments with vinyl resin finishes which may make them waterproof should not be drycleaned. They will stiffen permanently in drycleaning and become unwearable

Another participant, Gino Fon, is older than most of the other members, but he has an abiding interest in helping at the Marin Drop-In Center to assist men and women involved in drugs.

But whether it is their own special efforts, or in the field trips to such facilities as the Community Mental Health Clinic mental retardation unit in Kentfield, or in the weekly seminars attended by the entire group, the participants in the work-study program are enthusiastic about their efforts.

"This is one of the programs where everyone gains, including the residents of Marin who are benefitting from a really excellent preventative program," the two leaders say.

"We at the Community Mental Health Center are aware that our focus must be on prevention and mobilizing human potential, as well as on care for mental illness. And programs such as this work-study group are vital setups in that direction."

LARKSPUR LOOKS TO THE FUTURE

Two lumber mills followed, and a cluster of homes developed around them.

The 1906 earthquake caused a population jump as San Francisco residents left that devastated city for more tranquil Marin. By 1910 the year-round population was 514 and the summer population 1,200.

The town, incorporated in 1908, experienced its sharpest growth with the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge. In 1960 the population figure stood at 5,700, and in 1969 at 7,986.

With the growth has come dramatic change. In downtown Larkspur along side historic old buildings are new edifices. The once dirt road through town has long been paved. But still, 50 per cent of the city's land area remains undeveloped, and a projected saturation figure for 1985, including areas the city might incorporate, anticipates a population of 20,000.

A new roadway through the town is planned. A 40-acre park project along Corte Madera Creek is to be started soon. Signs point to more and more new commercial developments.

These, and other projects, farsighted Larkspur citizens realize, are certain to bring about changes even more dramatic than those in the city's past history.

To discuss how these changes can be directed toward the healthiest type of growth is the objective of a town meeting to be held next Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Redwood High School.

Pictures on this and the following two pages show how the village that sprang up around two lumber mills has blossomed into a progressive suburban city. Now, its citizens are asking: "Where is Larkspur going in the critical years ahead?"

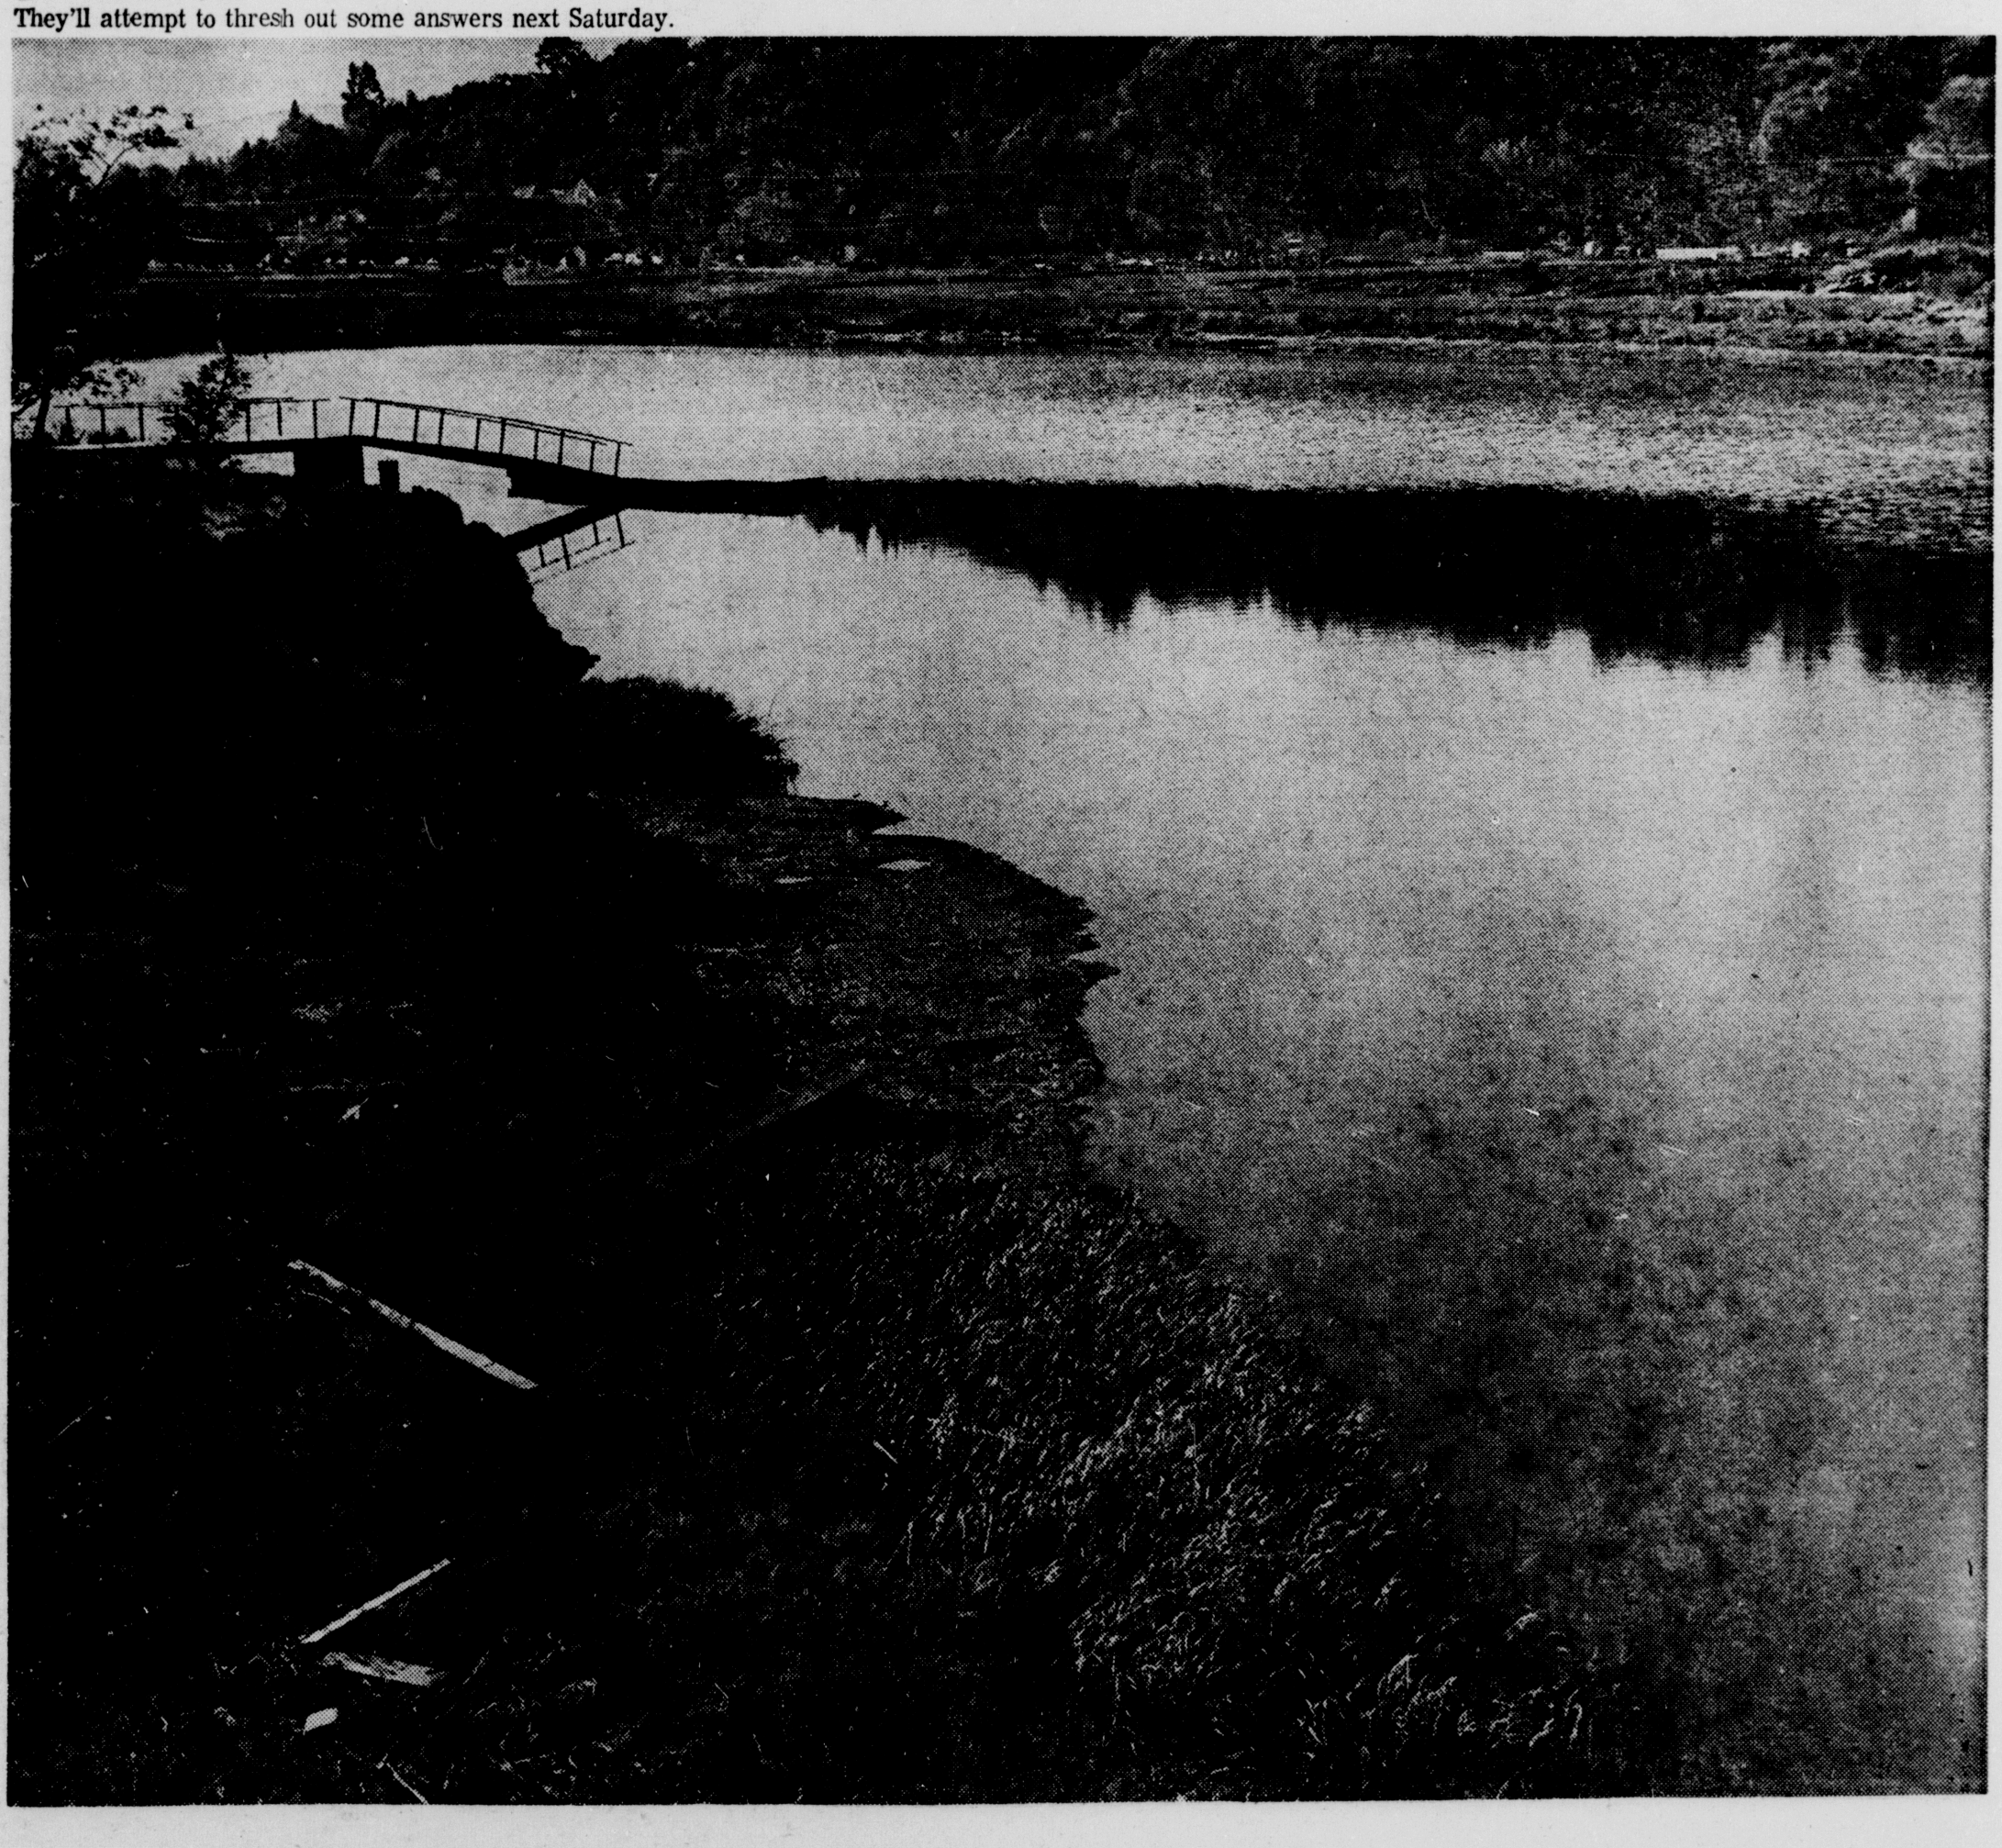
THE DIFFERENCES that a few years can make are dramatized in these two photographs, both taken by Emme Gilman, along the banks of Corte Madera Creek in Larkspur. The photograph above was taken in the 1950s, the one below recently. The most noticeable difference is the absence of the houseboats that once lined the bank. Now a 40-acre park project along the creek will bring yet more change. For other photographs showing even greater changes in Larkspur over a longer span of years, turn to Pages M10 and M11 in this issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine.



The Changing Face Of Larkspur

IN THE YEARS before and at the turn of the century, the viewer, standing at Madrone Avenue in still unincorporated Larkspur and looking up Magnolia Avenue would see this still very pastoral scene. The roadway was dirt and the sidewalk was wooden planks. Now that same section of Magnolia is a bustling, well trafficked business thoroughfare as shown in the Emme Gilman photograph below. Next Saturday, Larkspur citizens will assemble at Redwood High School for a town meeting to discuss the future of their downtown business area and other subjects that will determine the kind of city they will have after the growth and changes certain to come during the years and decades just ahead.

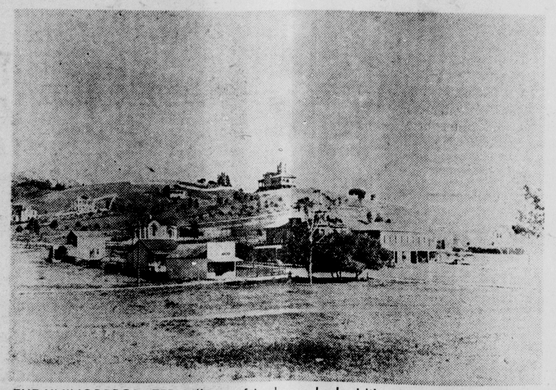
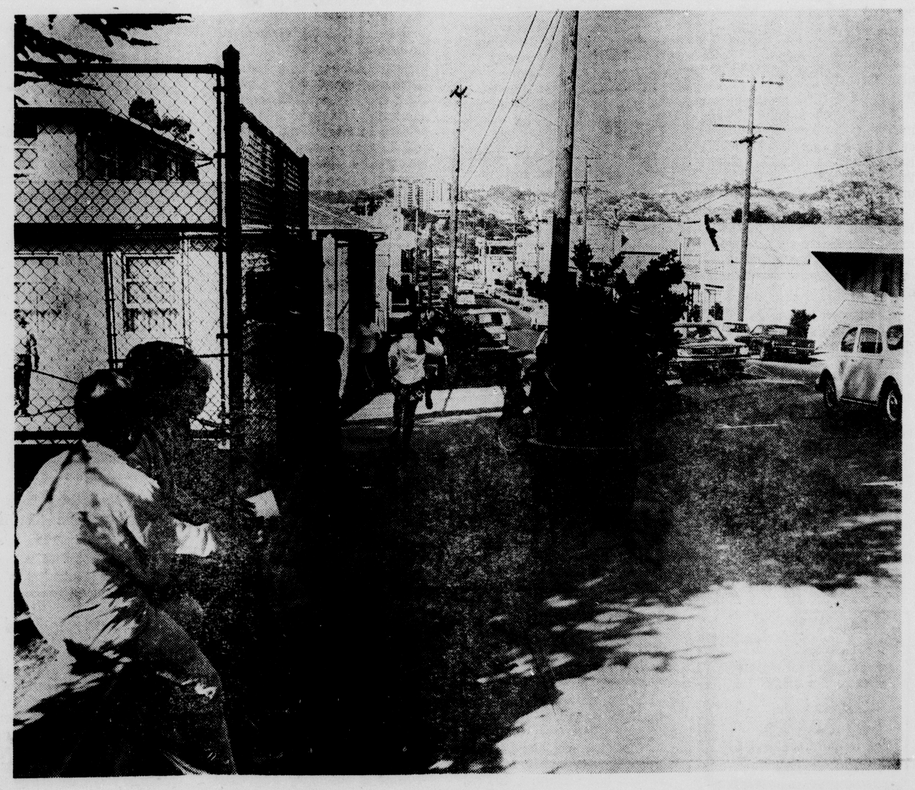
THE LARKSPUR business district of the turn-of-the-century had the air of a quiet country village that is apparent in the historical photograph reproduced above. A dirt road, wooden sidewalks, frame buildings and picket fences were among the features of the landscape. Below, that same area, as pictured by Emme Gilman, has a far different look today. A few landmarks, such as the historic old Blue Rock Inn and a real estate office, remain. But most of the structures such as the newer business buildings and St. Patrick's church and school, at extreme left, have been added in the seven decades that have come and gone. What will the decades ahead bring, Larkspur citizens now wonder.



THE UNINCORPORATED village of Larkspur looked like this when this photograph, from the Roy Farrington Jones collection, was taken in 1895. It began as a cluster of houses around two lumber mills. At a town meeting next Saturday, Larkspur citizens will attempt to work out some patterns for the equally dramatic growth that they know will take place in the decades that lie ahead. The event will begin in the Redwood High School auditorium at 9 a.m. and continue into the afternoon.



FOR MANY CALIFORNIANS, Baja California means Tijuana and little else. But more and more travelers are discovering the fascinating resort city and free port of Ensenada, shown above encircling Todos Santos Bay. The inauguration of regular cruise service along the Baja California coast, and particularly the inexpensive three and four-night "party cruises," have brought an influx of visitors from north of the border to the picturesque Mexican town.

Sailing South Of Border To Ensenada

By NELSON FITCH

Ensenada is only a one and a-half-hour drive from San Diego via the new highway, and my family and I have visited there often by car. But approaching the picturesque Mexican town by ship aboard the luxurious cruise ship Princess Italia of the Los Angeles-based Princess Cruises, on one of the line's popular three-night party cruises, was a new experience.

The sun flashed like a broken mirror on the blue satin waters as we sailed into Todos Santos Bay. The town sprawled along the Baja shore as gay and casual as an old serape.

PERSISTENT tugboats prodded and pulled as the Italia nestled gently alongside a wharf stacked high with baled cotton destined for shipment to Japan and Europe.

A mariachi band blared happily from the docks as the gangway was lowered, and my family and I joined the nearly 400 passengers swarming ashore for a day in Ensenada.

We took a taxi (rates are modest — $1 to the center of town) — to the nearby sport-fishing docks before going into town. Our 12-year-old son was intent on trying Ensenada's famous deep sea fishing, so we dropped him and a friend off at the boats.

THE REGULAR party boat had already left but for $8.50 each they rented an 18-foot outboard-powered boat, including the guide, bait and fishing rods. We agreed to meet later.

Friends we had met earlier on the Italia waved as they buzzed across the bay in a water ski boat. During the summer, ski boats are available near where the ship docks. Boat, crew and all equipment for an hour's skiing or instruction are $20.

MY WIFE AND I began our tour of Ensenada with a stroll down First Street, a block up from the docks. A multitude of tiny stands and stores offer baskets, leather goods and all sorts of Mexican arts and crafts at very reasonable prices. Merchants have bowed to the tourist penchant for haggling, so don't necessarily accept the first price offered.

The better stores have fixed prices, however, and deal largely in imports from Europe.

Ensenada is a free-port, which means there is no duty on imported merchandise. European knits, ceramics, jewelry and art objects are available at a fraction of U.S. costs.

MY WIFE HAD already made some purchases in the duty-free gift shop aboard the Italia (which had a surprisingly diversified roster of items from around the world). Now she really went to work'

Luckily, our spacious cabin on the Italia was more than ample for my wife's new serape for our guest room and Madrid-made chamois bag, for my son's sandals and sombrero, and my obsidian or black volcanic stone figurine.

There is also plenty of historical significance in Ensenada.

THE CHURCH of the Sacred Heart (Iglesia del Sagrado Corazon) at Third and Obregon streets was founded in 1890 — the first church in Ensenada and one of the most picturesque in the Southwest.

Santo Tomas Winery at 666 Miramar Street was founded even earlier, in 1888, by an Italian family. It is now the largest winery in Mexico and the only one in that country to produce champagne. Grapes come from the Santo Tomas and Maneadero valleys, just south of town.

The wine is still aged in the magnificent 200-liter wooden casks brought from France when the winery was founded.

TOURS AND wine tastings are conducted at Santo Tomas, but hours vary, so check first with the tourist office located on First Street in the heart of town. Emilio Mendez is the director of tourism and will answer questions.

Wandering Ensenada's side streets, away from the main tourist haunts, is always fun and provides interesting photographic possibilities. Many old buildings were constructed well before the turn of the century, and sections still look like sets out of western movies.

Our favorite attraction, however, is Hussong's Cantina. It was established in 1892, and I doubt if it has been swept since that time, let alone painted. Always jammed, Hussong's offers loud music, good booze and a fine time for those who like to bend an elbow.

MOST OF THE Italia's passengers preferred to return to the ship for meals, which is understandable as the continental cuisine is absolutely marvelous and temptingly served by an Italian crew.

However, there are many fine restaurants in Ensenada. The best of all is El Rey Sol.

Pepita Geffroy, the owner, was educated at the famous Cordon Bleu school of cooking in France. She has a ranch nearby and raises her own produce, poultry, herbs and spices that go into authentic French dishes as well as into American steaks, seafood and Mexican specialties.

THE DAY PASSED quickly and by the time we arrived back at the docks, the boys were waiting with a sack full of yellowtail, bass and barracuda, and pleading to go horseback riding.

Horses rent from $1.50 an hour at several locations. Just ask anyone where you can rent a horse (language is no problem in Ensenada, since most store clerks speak English).

Those who appreciate fine horses may want to visit San Miguel Village, seven miles north of Ensenada. Tomas Robertson, who operates a trailer park and leases homesites to Americans, also raises and trains Arabian horses and puts on horse shows.

WE HAD ALSO planned to visit La Bufadora (the, Blowhole), but time went by too quickly. La Bufadora, a famous attraction on Punta Banda, several miles south of town, has been turned into a park. Waves crashing against the rocks provide the pressure to send a geyser shooting 100 feet into the air.

Nightlife in Ensenada centers along First Street, and there are many excellent nightclubs with top entertainers. I particularly recommend the San Nicolas, El Cid and the Bahia for music, dancing and entertainment.

The entertainment aboard the Italia herself was as fine as I've seen in Los Angeles, Ensenada or elsewhere.

SAILING DOWN from Los Angeles we watched a top singer and comic as well as other entertainers, including two bands. Now the same group was ready to regale us as we set sail for Guadalupe Island, further south off the coast of Baja California.

The ship's newspaper told us this volcanic island was uninhabited except for mountain goats and elephant seals lolling about the beaches. Even though there were no stores for my wife nor fishing boats for my son, we all were eager to tour the coast of this fascinating island on the Italia's motor launches when we arrived there the next morning.

Billions For Food

Travelers spend 30 billion dollars a year on meals away from home, or 25 per cent of the American food budget, says Stewart Bainum, president of Quality Courts Motels. The figure is expected to rise at the rate of 8 per cent annually and reach 50 billion dollars by 1975.

Florida's Sports Fishing Capital

Village Draws The Tourists

Chances are unless you are an avid sports fisherman or deep sea diver you probably have never heard of Islamorado village on Windley Key off the tip of Florida.

Billed as the sports fishing capital of the world, Islamorada enjoys a resident population of 2,500, not counting visiting fishermen; but its balmy breezes, swaying cocoanut palms and clear ocean waters attract tourists from all over the world.

Windley Key follows Key Largo in a scattering of coral islets, called keys, that reach far south into tropical seas. Strung together by State Highway 1, they extend nearly 175 miles from Miami to Key West, and the linking causeways sometimes reach seven miles across the blue-green Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

Among the well-known people who vacation there, former President Harry S. Truman calls Key West his favorite vacation spot. L. B. Maytag, president of National Airlines, maintains a home there and flies his private plane to his office near Miami International Airport.

Many citrus fruits grow in the keys. It is the distinct tartness of the local limes that gives key lime pie its flavor and its fame.

Outlying coral reefs that have plagued sailors over the centuries gives the ocean its sparkling clarity and turquoise hues and draws deep sea divers to scour wrecked ships and Spanish galleons still trapped in the shallows.

IF YOU ARE planning a winter vacation overseas and looking for a site off the beaten track, Finland is well worth your consideration. In sophisticated Helsinki you can enjoy fine food, shopping and nightlife. And at Pyhatunturi, north of the Arctic Circle, you can enjoy the ancient Finn pastime of snow sculpturing, above, as well as skiing, sleighing and skating. If you are there for Christmas, you'll be invitied to attend colorful yule church services and to enjoy a Christmas feast and other festivities. It's a short motor coach run from Helsinki to Russia's beautiful Leningrad. And there's the sauna bath. Finnish National Tourist Office, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y., 10017, will provide full details on a special six-day, $297 package that includes the Lapland and Leningrad experiences.

Check Rates First

Travelers planning to go abroad this winter and bring back goods worth more than the $100 duty-free allowance are advised by Trans World Airlines to check in advance on the customs rates on various articles.

They cite these examples: 16 per cent duty on leather handbags and pocketbooks; 26 per cent on prism binoculars; 9.5 per cent on motion picture cameras.

A free pamphlet, "Rates of Duty for Popular Tourist Items," is available from any customs office or the Bureau of Customs, Washington, D.C., 20226.

The Case For The Hippies Who Have Chosen Isolation

By DON KEOWN

Just as young people are prone to classify all their elders as Establishment figures, so is the older generation inclined to take a one-dimensional view of the younger, lumping them, particularly if they are bearded, beaded and/or barefoot, as Hippies.

And whereas the term Hippie was once reserved for those who had "dropped out" from society, in today's confused dialogue it is more frequently applied to still very much involved militant young activists. Their involvement consists generally of attempts to overthrow or undermine the power structure, sometimes violently, and it concerns us all and frightens many of us.

But he is still with us; almost unnoticed because he is quieter and poses a less immediate threat to existing values than his more militant brethren. And, more and more, he has become a segregated person, living apart from outsiders in communal groups that may be urban or rural but which are essentially isolated.

These communes are sometimes a source of agitation for close neighbors worried by a life style they cannot fathom. We have had our instances of this in Marin. But their sphere of influence seems miniscule when compared to the waves created by youngsters who have chosen not to retreat from, but rather to do battle with the Establishment.

Whereas radical activists have been plagued by a surplus of self-appointed vociferous spokesmen, the "drop outs" have been pretty much without a voice.

They may have found one in Raymond Mungo, who first attracted attention with his book "Famous Long Ago" and now has followed it with "Total Loss Farm."

Mungo is part of a communal family residing on a Vermont farm, building there, they hope, an alternative way of life to the "urban nightmare" they had lived before.

The writer had tried activism and decided that it had failed. "The movement," he felt, had become more a rival bureaucracy than an alternative to the power structure. The farm "has given me the insulation from America which the peace movement promised but cruelly denied."

"Total Loss Farm" covers one year in the lives of Mungo and his fellow adventurers. It begins with a canoe trip down the Concord and Merrimack rivers through filth that contrasts painfully with the clear, clean streams Henry David Thoreau had described. There follows a hectic coast-to-coast automobile trek to escape the Vermont winter. And finally, a return to the farm and a summer spent in a rustic life tied closely to the soil.

Mungo too obviously sees himself in the role played by Jack Kerouac for an earlier generation of young drop-outs. The influence of Kerouac upon Mungo's writing style and thinking is apparent — and unfortunate. Although Mungo is somewhat more restrained, the undisciplined aspects of Kerouac's writing are marked, particularly in the account of the automobile trip. And the imitation seems a self-conscious, not altogether natural one.

One remembers that Kerouac, for all the bombshell brilliance with which he burst upon a too staid literary scene, wound up an oafish, clownish figure more to be pitied than admired. One feels that Raymond Mungo writing — and thinking — as Raymond Mungo, not as an imitation, latter-day Jack Kerouac, is the more formidable and preferable figure.

Actually the resemblance between the Kerouac Beats and the Mungo Hippies is not that great. True, both have "dropped out." But the Beats did so more from sheer indolence than out of disillusionment with the society they were quitting. Their's was not a moral stand, for they were essentially amoral. But the Hippies described by Mungo as his traveling companions and commune sharers are, despite their disavowal of existing social standards, basically a moralistic group. They really have not so much quit the struggle as they have chosen their own separate and distinctive means of carrying on the battle.

"When I say that we had fear, and imply that the terrorist attacks on the established powers are also a product of fear," Mungo writes, "I do not mean to exonerate the IBMs and Chase Manhattan Banks of that old world, who deal in fear as their stock-in-trade.

"I mean only that we cannot find hatred in our hearts for men or institutions of which we are not ever afraid, and that our fear is not so much of temporal harm to our bodies ... but of rejection from the human race.

"Yes, what we dread the most is that subhuman treatment, that unspoken or spoken assumption that We are not like Them, that We stand apart, that We are not Their brothers. The unkind world or glance it is, and not the punch in the nose, that kills us.

"And I mean to leave you with the consideration that it is far easier for this kind of determination to occur in places where many folks live, and we are always strangers, than in other spots where humanity may not so thoroughly cover the face of the planet; and to suggest, as many have before me, that the human survival instinct includes a self-destruct clause applicable to overcrowded situations."

"Innocence," claims Mungo, "is the only possible hope." And life on Total Loss Farm is a true hedonism — a quest for "the best of everything."

He summarizes its philosophy thusly:

"I do not seek to be represented. I do not seek to tear down your buildings or march on your castle or sit at your desk. I am interested neither in destroying what you have put up nor in gaining castle of your empire. I demand nothing, and nothing is my inheritance."

But if Mungo and his friends demand nothing of us, they do ask something:

"I live in the world, in the woods, with my friends, where not many people come by and the planet is entire and friendly; we like to be left alone except by those who can help. You can help by giving the planet, and peace, a chance.

"I ask only that you treat yourself right, give yourself the best of everything; and in so doing, you will be acting for me as well. If you can't stop, at least wave as you go by. Slow down, perhaps stop working; you'll find the time for everythink you really want to do."

Thus Mungo reveals a certain contradiction in his too passive philosophy. Even his movement — or non-movement — must proselytize if it is to achieve the lasting effects for which it aspires. If his "We are saving the world" claim is to be justified, he and his friends must have the help and the cooperation of others. The withdrawal is not complete.

Still, his is basically a decent philosophy that stands up well against the now somewhat shattered arrogance of the Establishment, the complacency of orthodox liberals and the mindless hysteria and violence of some of the more radical activists.

There are flaws. Many will chaff that its practitioners support their way of life in many instances upon the welfare largess provided by the very Establishment they criticize. Of greater concern, however, is the tolerance, or even the encouragement, of drug use, a practive that is stupid at best and suicide at worst, as evidenced by the tragedies of Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix.

Despite his Kerouac hang-up, Mungo is capable of some splendid lines. And we suspect that in his emphasis upon congestion, Mungo has quite accurately put his finger upon the primary cause of man's malaise today.

But fleeing that overcrowding cannot be regarded as any final solution to the problem. Done en masse, it simply transfers the sites of the congestion. More lasting answers must be found. Quite possibly these lie in combining some of the ideals and tactics of these communal people with the best from the several other life styles being practiced by other Americans, and adding yet other mores and motives that are still in the developmental stage.

AGATHA CHRISTIE
No. 80 is a clinker

To accuse Agatha Christie of writing a novel deficient in suspense and mystery seems, somehow, akin to charging Shakespeare with a lack of histrionics, or claiming the Testament to be short on piety.

Nevertheless, to this longtime Christie admirer, it seems that this gifted lady, at age 80 producing Novel No. 80, has finally turned out a "clinker."

"Passenger to Frankfurt" uses as its central character Sir Stafford Nye, a British diplomat, and enmeshes him in intrigue that eventually explodes into a global revolt waged by the dissident youths. But behind the young rebels are sinister forces manipulating and using them. The effort is to unmask and disarm these power-seekers. Sir Stafford has the help of a beautiful and mysterious countess, and of various figures in and out of government.

The usual keenly-drawn Christie characters are diffused and the allignment of political ideologies is unconvincing. And for this reader, at least, "A Passenger to Frankfurt" just doesn't come off.

Give us next, dear lady, another of your Miss Marple or Hercule Poirot yarns that never fail. And all will be forgiven. One strikeout, if this is such, in 80 times at bat remains a most remarkable performance. Although the analogy might more appropriately be worded in the terminolgy of cricket.

joint undertaking of the author and Michael Glenny. The price, $6.95 for 114 pages, is clearly based upon Nabokov's current prestige rather than the merits of this early work, although the promise of the bigger things to come is apparent.

FROM CAXTON Printers, Caldwell, Idaho: "101 Fishing Trips in Oregon" by Don Holm, veteran sportsman and Portland Oregonian wildlife editor. In softcover, with maps and photos, the 207-page guide is priced at $3.95.

NORMAN F. DACEY, whose "How to Avoid Probate!" created considerable controversy and hit the best-seller lists, has now produced "Dacey on Mutual Funds," published by Crown and priced at $4.95 softcover, $6.95 hardcover.

"By disclosing the imperfections of the mutual fund industry I do not intend to deter you from employing the valuable services of funds," writes Dacey. "My purpose is to give you facts which would enable you to make an informed judgment in selecting a fund."

There are 270 pages of such facts, and most of those pages see Dacey in his favorite role of gadfly, this time to the financial interests.

Congressman John E. Moss, in the foreword, thinks Dacey's stance is all to the good. Of the book, he says: "I hope it will make you, the public shareholder, not only understand the (mutual fund) industry better, but also want to do something about those aspects of it that, in your opinion, need improvement." Dacey points out a number of possibilities and, in so doing, has no doubt embroiled himself in yet another controversy.

DOVER PUBLICATIONS deals largely in reprints, but "The Divine Proportion" by the British mathematician and physics teacher H.E. Huntley is a $2.50 paperback original. It is subtitled "A Study in Mathematical Beauty" and Dr. J. Bronowski has labeled it "a delightful book to read .... It wanders here and there through some of the most attractive byways of simple mathematics, returning always to the oddities and pleasures of the golden section. This is a browser's book — a happy, untidy traveling or bedside book for those who know how to enjoy the charm of numbers and shapes." While the mathematical material doesn't seem "simple" to this neophyte, it does, indeed, seem intriguing. It is a refreshingly original exploration of the idea that mathematics and aesthetics are more closely akin than most people suspect.

The World's Money In A State Of Flux

In spite of what the blurb on the inside cover says, this is NOT a book that everyone will need — or want — to read. It is a book on an interesting subject, money, but the detailing of the workings of international monetary systems will probably be of interest only to economics students, bankers, and an occasional stockbroker who happens to follow the fluctuations of the gold stocks.

The authors chronicle the gradual decline of the world monetary system as set up at the Congress of Vienna in 1815. At that time the basic rules were adopted by the major European countries and included the provision that trade between nations could be settled either by barter or with gold. This system would continue to work only if each country spent about as much as it received in foreign trade. If a country overspent, it would soon run out of gold and be unable to settle its debts.

The gold standard made some sense in 1815 when about two-thirds of the money in circulation in the major nations was gold or silver but in 100 years the percentage fell to about 15 per cent in spite of an increase in the gold supply. The demand for money had increased at an even faster rate and thus nations were accepting the pound and the dollar in payment as long as they believed that these currencies were convertible into gold.

Two other factors upset the smooth workings of the international monetary system in the 20th Century. These were the exporting of economic difficulties and world war. It was immediately following the second World War that the conference at Bretton Woods was called by the major nations in an attempt to put the system back into working order.

The authors go on to detail this conference and other formal and informal structures set up over the years to foster trade between nations and in some cases to stave off economic disaster. The era of the De Gaulle confrontations is discussed along with the flight of currencies from countries in economic or political trouble including the student riots in France which succeeded in toppling De Gaulle — primarily through the loss of France's gold reserves.

The United States comes in for a fair amount of criticism for its consistent deficits, loss of gold reserves and consequent loss of confidence in the dollar. In this respect the authors are hardly out on a limb. The Wall Street Journal in an editorial discussed the drive for European monetary integration with the goal being to limit the ability of the U.S. to continue balance of payments deficits.

Yale Prof. Robert Triffin wrote in the Morgan Guaranty Survey:

"The changed mood of the European central banks can be traced largely to their increasing impatience with the practical necessity of absorbing dollars into official coffers and to their inability to check the spectacular rise of interest rates in the Eurodollar market — to 12 per cent and more last year — under the impact of huge American borrowings."

Harry G. Johnson, a professor at the London School of Economics and also the University of Chicago, says the Federal Reserve is in reality, but not constitutionally, the world's central bank.

What's the end of all this? The bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, says it best in its annual report: "The fact is that the international monetary system is passing through a process of radical change, the outcome of which no objective observer can claim to know."

Len Deighton Switches From Thrillers To War Documentary

"In building toward this work of powerful documentary fiction, he has written six spy stories," the jacket says of novelist Len Deighton.

If "Bomber" is a final product, then we much prefer the preparation that came before it. For "Bomber" did not grip our attentions as did "Funeral in Berlin" and "The Ipcress File."

Yet other reviewers have praised Deighton's newest novel as "agonizing in its reality" and "a major contribution to epics of World War II." So we suspect that in our case, the problem lay, not with book and writer, but with reader. Quite probably, we just weren't in the mood for yet another fictionalized documentary, a technique somewhat overused.

"Bomber" is Deighton's recreation of a World War II bombing raid from Britain against Germany that went tragically wrong. Over a 24-hour period, Deighton covers in infinite and minute detail the converging destinies of many people in two war zones. A longtime airplane buff, Deighton brings expert knowledge to the technical aspects of his subject. He adds touches of romance and suspense. And his novel is a deglamorization of war that is commendable in these times when forces for peace can use all the help obtainable.

Yet, for us, the pages went slowly. It seemed the novelist had chosen too broad a canvas, and then crowded it with too much detail. The jumping from place to place, character to character, never permitted us to really become acquainted with the individuals in his cast or to become involved in their problems. Too many were introduced too briefly. Irrelevancies slowed the pace.

The distinctively crisp, understated, almost enigmatic Deighton writing style is recognizable, but less so than in his spy thrillers.

What we began reading with an anticipation of pleasure became almost a labor, and this was not entirely because of the well-merited horror with which Deighton regards and treats war. Quite likely we read the book at the wrong time under the wrong conditions, and other more favorable reviewers are right in assessing its qualities affirmatively. For we are well aware of the immensity of the assignment that Deighton has undertaken, impressed by the enormous research that has gone into it, and conscious of the professionalism with which it has been executed. Still, it simply didn't work with us. And we, for one, hope to see Deighton back doing those splendid Harry Palmer thrillers, although this seems somewhat unlikely in view of the success being enjoyed by "Bomber."

Rescuing A Figure In Obscurity

There are many interesting forgotten men in American history, among them Hannibal Hamlin, Lincoln's first vice president.

What might have been the course of post-Civil War history had not Lincoln dumped Hamlin as his 1864 running mate in favor of the loyal Southern Democrat, Andrew Johnson, is a fascinating subject for speculation.

H. Draper Hunt, youthful associate professor of history at the University of Maine, has sought to rescue Hamlin from the obscurity to which the history books have consigned him. He has done a considerable research job, as attested by the plentiful quotations and the multitude of footnotes (the latter, happily, being relegated to the back of the book where they belong).

Having completed the research, however, Hunt has not known quite what to do with it. Too many — and too long — quotations are the meaningless stock of the politician (of which Hamlin obviously was a prime example). There is too much "filler" and too little that is revealing of the biographical subject. The reader is left a bit unsure of how much Hannibal Hamlin was flesh and blood with real convictions and emotions and how much was hollow political "image."

If Lincoln's first vice president is not to return to obscurity, he needs a little more rescuing.

A Haunting Climax To A Novel

THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND by Alice Walker; Harcourt Brace Jovanich, Inc., 247 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

This story embodies the simple chronicling of the lives and ways of the poor southern black family of Grange Copeland, a menial laborer.

Nothing new is revealed in it. But the suffering, the hopelessness and the cycle of miseries from generation to generation are effectively echoed.

In an attempt at freedom he leaves his family and journeys to New York. He somehow manages to survive and prosper there in the fast-paced black netherworld.

Upon his return to the South he learns that his wife has died and the son is married and mired in the same predicament as he, thus renewing the cycle.

Copeland then establishes a warm, totally unforeseen rapport with his son, Brownfield, to whom he once only barely spoke.

But Brownfield, too, has perversely channeled blame for his own situation on his wife and murders her.

He, however, has dearly loved his children and one, Ruth, has become his favorite.

And when formal adoption of the girl is denied him, the third and final life of Copeland comes to a violent end. This occurs in a fatal courtroom shootout that is hauntingly reminiscent of today's newspaper headlines of stories in which men are driven to suicidial efforts to obtain that to which they feel they have a right.

The New Cookbooks—

By MAXINE KEOWN

The weeks before the holidays are a busy time for cookbook publishers, and this year has been no exception.

The prize "plum" in the 1970 fall deluge has to be "A World of Menus and Recipes" (Bobbs-Merill, $10) by Gertrude Bosworth Crum.

San Francisco-born, Berkeley and Paris educated, Mrs. Crum has been novelist, columnist, reporter and consultant, but now is known for her Menus-by-Mail planning service to cooks. The menus and recipes that have been responsible for her success there are now to be found in her book, and they are, indeed, varied, distinctive and appealing. In all, there are 100 menus for both general and specific occasions, containing 600 recipes. Some are elaborate. But what stamps the book as particularly useful are the many simple dishes and touches that mingle with the more complex. Mrs. Crum does not hesitate to take advantage of the so-called "convenience" or prepared foods. Yet, the overall effect is usually one of elegance.

It is a book whose contents surpass one's expectations. The proposed menus are difficult to resist. And if one succeeds, there are still individual dishes and ideas within the menus that will prove invaluable to the cook in quest of flexibility in her kitchen fare. It's an excellent gift book.

"The Everything Cook-Book" (Hawthorn, $8.95) by Betty Wason, veteran cookbook author and food editor, is a 907-page effort to live up to its ambitious title. And it largely succeeds. It is the encyclopedic type cookbook, a la Good Housekeeping, filled with not only 2,000 tested and varied recipes, but with experienced, practical counsel in great detail upon such subjects as menu planning, shopping, entertaining, weight control, the serving of wines, storage, etc. The publisher offers: "Sample any five recipes and if you are not completely satisifed, return the book and your purchase price will be refunded." Start off with the Saltimbocca or the Sweet Potato Buns, and right away the publisher is off the hook.

"Russian Cooking" (Time Life, $7.95) by Helen and George Papashvily is another in Time-Life's splendid Foods of the World Series. The Papashvilys, he an immigrant from the Caucasus, both of them much traveled in the Soviet Union, have put together an entertaining review of Russian cuisine — what it is, and how it came about. Like all books in the series, it is beautifully illustrated. Recipes, from borsch to tortes, are repeated in a spiral-bound booklet for handy kitchen use. The book maintains the high standards of this series by providing not only a superb array of ethnic dishes, but also a keen understanding and deeper appreciation of a most interesting and tasteful cuisine.

Nika Hazelton who has authored a number of cookbooks on European ethnic cooking and other culinary subjects takes up a largely overlooked cuisine in her "The Belgian Cook Book" (Atheneum, $7.95). Following a discussion of the roots and special qualities of Belgian dishes, she offers 137 recipes, most of which will be new to American chefs. She makes it clear that Belgian gastronomy is separate and distinct from French, German and Dutch cooking with a special appeal all its own. Some examples: Chervil Cream Soup, Rabbit Flemish Style, Belgian Endive and Avocado Salad, Pork Braised with Red Cabbage, Brussels Beer Waffles. It's an intriguing book.

"Kitchen Safari" (Atheneum, $7.95) by Harva Hachten takes up the delicacies of a continent coming in for increased and well deserved attention from gourmets. It is a compilation of the recipes of various African lands, reflecting the inventive ways of the native chefs, plus the influence of the European colonizers and Asian immigrants. It is not to be confused with Soul Food, which is strictly American. The dishes here are Algerian Couscous, Banana Beef Stew, Groundnut Sauce, Fresh Fish Stew, Yam Balls, Green Cornbread and the likes. Lots of exotics here, and yet generally not difficult to prepare, for the recipes have been adapted to American needs.

"How to Gorge George Without Fattening Fanny" (Hawthorn, $5.95) is the catchy title of a clever book by Nancy Gould that emphasizes foods that taste rich but are low in calories. Such as Farmers' Chop Suey, Iranian Shah Soup, Jewish Noodle Pudding, Scimpi Scampi and No Flabbage Cabbage. The calorie count is given for each dish. And the author's aim is "to brighten up the drudgery of dieting." For the most part, her suggestions seem anything but bland and uninteresting.

"Cooking With Wine and High Spirits" (Cornerstone Library, $1.25) is a paperback, the product of Rebecca Caruba with the highest of credentials. More and more, wine and other alcoholic beverages have come to be regarded as essential to gourmet cooking. Miss Caruba outlines a tempting array of dishes in which spirits play a part — the likes of Syllabub, Swedish Apple Cake, Oysters Madeira, Scotch Omelet, Eggnog Chiffon Pie, Norwegian Strawberry Soup and Lobsters Flambe. This one is definitely not for the calorie counters. But it's perfect for those who like their dishes with a little added zest and flair.

New Process Protects Books

Smith's process is based on a nonaqueous, or waterless, solution consisting of an organic solvent and a moderately alkaline deacidifying chemical agent. Documents treated with this solution — by brushing, spraying or immersion — are protected from acid attack and their life expectancy is prolonged indefinitely.

Virtuoso Performances By Jazz Stars Burton And Mann On Vibes And Flute

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

The vibes at one time were considered unwelcome intruders in the realm of jazz because the fans associated the music with reeds, horns, drums and occasionally the banjo.

But Lionel Hampton dissipated all doubts about the character and expressiveness of this instrument in a relatively short time and opened the way for others to follow.

Among today's practitioners, Gary Burton certainly is to be considered a virtuoso. And his agility with the electric vibes puts his music in proper perspective to the emphasis on souped-up sound.

On "Good Vibes" (Atlantic SD 1560), Burton achieves an admirable level of consistency whether it is on Gil Evans' "Las Vegas Tango" or on the three compositions of his own included in this album — "Vibrafinger," "Boston Marathon" and "Leroy the Magician."

Burton receives fine support from Sam Brown, Jerry Hahn and Eric Gale on guitars; Richard Tee on piano and organ; Steven Swallow on bass and electric bass; Church Rainey on electric bass, and Bill Lavorgna and Bernard Purdie on percussion.

Like Gary Burton, Herbie Mann transformed another unlikely instrument, the flute, into a leading piece in the modern jazz band. There seems to be no end to his stamina in producing one fine album after another. His latest, "Big Boss" (Columbia CS 1068), is a gem that includes "Watermelon Man."

All the numbers were composed by musicians oriented in jazz or blues.

SELECTED SINGLES — "Whiskey Train" by Procol Harum (A&M 1218), "I'm Proud to Be a Woman" by Linda Meadors (Mercury 73123), "America the Beautiful" by Roger Williams (Kapp K-2110), "Fresh Air" by Quicksilver Messenger Service (Capitol P-2920), "Our Sweetness is My Weakness" by Jackie Lee (Uni 55259), "Jacob's Ladder" by Doris Troy (Apple 1824).

TAPE DECK-Eight-track cartridge: "Permissive Polyphonics" by Enoch Light and The Light Brigade (Project 3 M85048), an Ampex tape release, extends a dozen solid tunes into an area of imaginative sound. "Puppet Man" is a fast-moving frolic while "Michele" is played in subdued tones.

Cassette: "Have a Ball with Arthur" by Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops (RCA RK-1166) is another interesting excursion into sound that blends pop standards such as "Hey Jude" and "Spanish Flea" with pop classics — "Flight of the Bumble Bee" and "Swan Lake."

Time To Start Thinking About A Living Tree

Garden Page

Time to start thinking about a Christmas tree already?

Yes, it is — providing you are thinking in terms of a living Christmas tree this year.

Marin nurserymen report that more and more residents of our county are turning from cut trees, that must be discarded after the holidays, to living trees that can continue to benefit their owners for weeks, months and years after the Christmas season has passed.

THOSE WHO do so reap additional benefits beyond the holiday cheer that the living trees bring into a home.

For container-grown, living trees may be used indoors for Christmas, then planted outdoors to beautify and improve the environment.

Used in the landscape, or kept in tubs for future years, the trees filter the air, provide oxygen and lessen noise and sound. Nature's own filtering system found in trees and shrubs is an essential contribution towards a better environment.

IN ADDITION to the esthetic and ecological reasons to use living Christmas trees, there's the fun experience for the family of shopping for the tree. Marin nurseries have an assortment of trees featuring those varieties best suited to our area.

As a group, the pines offer the most selections. But there are good choices of spruces, too. And the cypresses and cedars also rate top consideration.

ALEPPO PINE is bushier in growth and has a conical shape. Scotch Pine has bluish-green foliage and is attractively dense.

All can be grown in tubs for several years and later transplanted into the garden.

Blue Atlas Cedar is another living Christmas tree candidate here in Northern California.

A STATE-WIDE favorite is the Deodar Cedar, with its familiar gray-green needles and graceful arching branches. In the ground or in a large tub, it will reward you with years of pleasure.

When brought indoors for Christmas, your tree should be watered generously and kept away from the direct radiance of a fireplace or heater. During the rest of the year, treat it as you would any other tubbed plant.

THE DEODAR CEDAR is one of the more popular chaices as a living Christmas tree as well as landscape specimen, with Californians. But there are many other evergreens that can be housed inside in tubs during the holiday season, then moved outdoors to enhance the property after the yule period is over. Screens Help Flower Beds

Everyone loves flowers, but few people know how to design a flower garden so that it's attractive all year long.

The frame is the most important: A backdrop screen that the flowers can show off against. Although nearly any style will be complementary, the fence shouldn't be painted. Flowers look best against natural wood tones or the silver shadings of weathered cedar.

Next important is to include a few evergreens in the flower bed. With the screen, they'll give the area structure year-around and will fill in nicely between bloom dates.

Last, set a simple garden bench near the flower garden to add a sense of both permanence and invitation.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- Holly, pyracantha and cotoneaster shrubs — in great variety — are in full berry now at nurseries. Use them in the landscape to brighten the fall and winter months.
- Lawns fed in November will stay greener through winter months despite a natural tendency to go dormant.
- Shop nurseries now for bright spots of foliage and other indications of the autumn season.
- November is the best time to plant tulips in California. Hurry for the best selection of flower forms and colors, and follow your nurseryman's recommendation on how deep to plant the bulbs.
- Camellias can be planted now. Several of the earlier-blooming varieties are already flowering.

When Fall Clean-Up Is Finished, Use Bedders In The Bare Spots

Bloomed-out annuals have been removed, perennials have been cut back and summer-blooming bulbs have been lifted. When this is the case, a gardener's best friend are the bedding plants.

Happily, there is no lack of bedding plant material — including both annuals and perenials — for renewal of the growth and bloom cycle. Several bedders will bloom in mid-winter and the others will get your garden off to a fast start in late February or March.

Since the introduction of the Pacific Beauty strain several years ago, this once common annual has become something of an aristocrat — the delicate shadings of lemon, cream, orange and persimmon being no less bright for their refinement.

Pansies and violas are other quick-to-bloom winter annuals and far longer lasting than most. Keep the flowers cut and new blooms will keep appearing through spring into early summer. These are ideal over newly-planted bulbs in that they give quick color and bloom with, and after, the bulbs.

STILL ANOTHER for winter color is the fairy primrose — which is a border and edging plant without many rivals. Line a walk with these and enjoy their lasting spikes of lavendar, pink or white through the coldest months.

In planting for early spring, the gardener has a wide choice of material. Nurseries will have a large selection, including Iceland poppy, cineraria, stocks, snapdragons, English daisy, spice pinks, alyssum — and others.

Your nurseryman is the best guide to the local bloom calendar followed by these prolific bedders.

Winter Heating For The Garage

A Spot Unit One Answer

Want to bring some heat to an area — such as a garage — that gets chilly at certain times of the year?

You can extend a gas or oil-fired or hot water system to the particular section or provide regular electric heating, or you can solve the problem with high intensity spot heating. One unit that furnishes this type of heat puts out 1,500 watts of radiant heat and functions much like a miniature sun—heating objects directly, rather than surrounding air.

The high heat output eliminates the need for insulation and in many cases can take the chill off partially exposed areas in the home such as a breezeway or patio. Since the unit is not used full time — only when the area is in use — electrical costs need not be high. A new heating element which combines the strength of ceramic materials with the heating output of coiled wires is the operating "secret." The new material also provides instant warmup with no power-consuming current surges.

Installation is one evening's work and requires only a common electrical junction box, on-off switch and the required length of 12 AGA, grounded wire to hook the unit to the service entrance. (Check local electrical codes before installation.) Weighing less than four pounds, the unit requires no more support than most lighting fixtures and attaches to electrical junction boxes with two machine screws.

The heater operates on ordinary 120V house wiring, and requires its own 20 amp circuit, either fuse or circuit breaker controlled. The only other restrictions affecting installation are to make sure the unit is placed no closer than 12 inches from adjacent walls and ceilings and not less than six feet from the floor.

THIS BAR doubles as a bookcase or stereo cabinet. To build it, send $1 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Easi-Bild's Book No. 661 — "How to Build Family Room Furniture." You will wind up with directions, not only for building the bar, but also for constructing your own table and a wall wardrobe. Sliding panel doors are one feature of the bar, which is paneled with prefinished paneling. And the top is plastic laminate. The step-by-step directions have been simplified so that no great previous experience in furniture construction or skill with tools is required. Be sure to include your zip code number when ordering.

A BIRD feeder will reward you with daily entertainment, especially in the winter. Built of one-by-12-inch western lumber, this feeder is attached to a four-by-four post by angle iron. The dowel makes a fine perch at front of feeder.

A Home Office Where Clutter Can Be Hidden

There isn't any law that says you have to be neat. Indeed, a certain amount of chaos spurs many people to action.

If you tackle household accounts better in an atmosphere of controlled confusion, feel no shame.

But one does like to hide the debris when the boss' wife or the neighborhood nitpicker drops in. The answer to that is a home office that can be quickly closed off.

"IMPOSSIBLE! No space," you say. Think again.

A tiny four-by-five foot area easily can accommodate an ample built-in desk with drawers below and shelving above. Add a comfortable desk chair on casters, an extension phone, your mounds of papers, phone lists and memorabilia, and you're in business.

A desk with a countertop of plastic laminate or other durable material is easily cleaned. Build in a bank of drawers on one side. Consider making the lower drawer deep enough for files. Adjustable dividers can be installed.

THE OTHER side can have one shallow pencil drawer, leaving space below to push in the chair when not in use.

If there's room, a portable typewriter and castered stand can slide in and out below the desk top on the other side, screened by folding doors.

So much for convenience. Now for amenities.

Your office may be messy, but it won't seem like little hell if the materials you use have quality and comeliness.

WALLS PANELED with western softwood panel boards will "dress" the office, tone down the clutter and, by their grain and texture, provide an aura of warmth. Use matching lumber for the desk and shelving.

Clippings, postcards, photos and notes may be displayed by tacking finishing nails into the paneling grooves. When you take an item down, the wood will show no scar. Or you can use double-sided sticky tape.

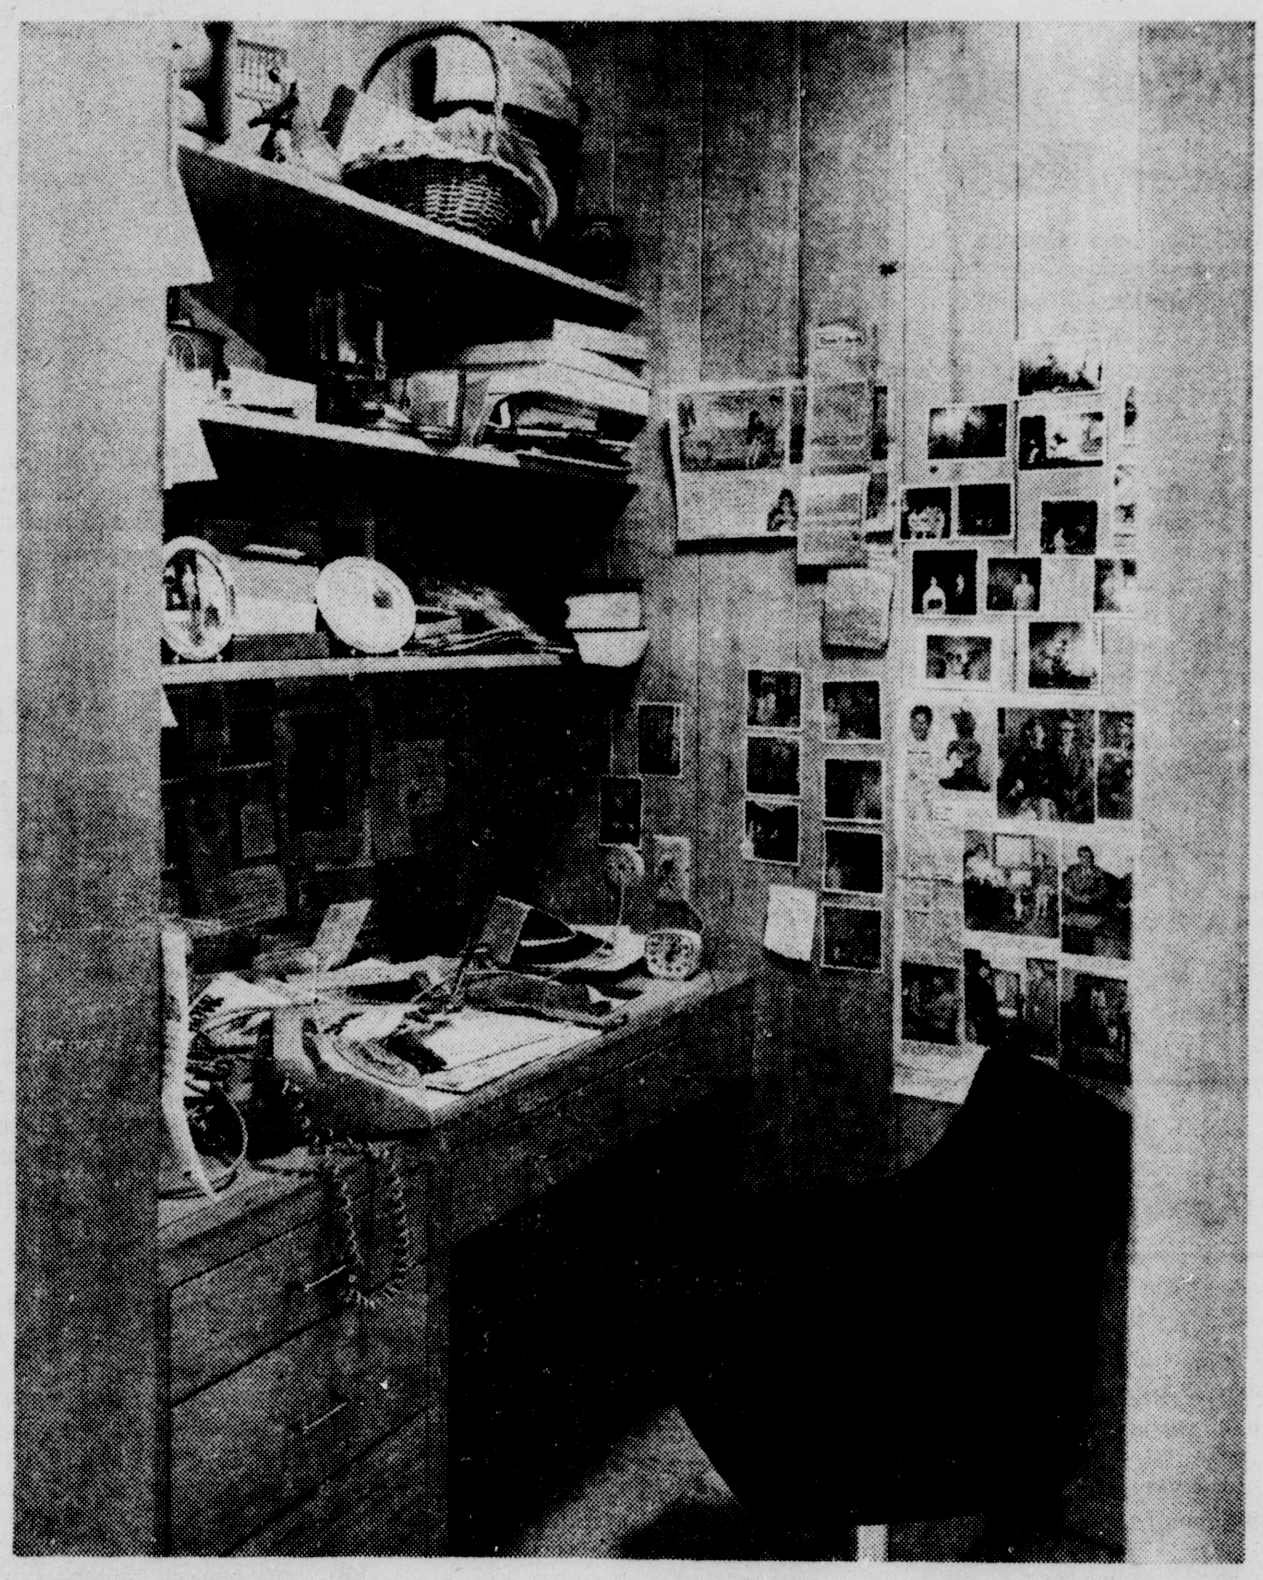
Can you think of a better solution to the problems of a homemaker, den mother, United Crusade chairlady or P-TA president?



THOSE WHO THRIVE on clutter need a nook to contain — and sometimes conceal — the clutter. A five-foot-square office is equipped with drawers, shelving, telephone and — for concealment purposes — a louvered door. Mementos can be tacked up at the joints of the tongue-and-groove panel boards without marring the wood.

Handyman's Pages

A LACY, STEPPED-UP screen of horizontal cedar one-by-twos and flagstone paving can change what was a shallow, side-sloping front yard of little use into this handsome entry court. The screens return privacy to the house windows and the occupants. Here the planting beds of ferns, ivy and pine follow the land's natural contour and compliment the natural wood with its light, airy feeling. (Western Wood Products Association photo)

Two Sinks Equal Convenience For Woman Who Entertains

Some women consider family entertaining their hobby. They are the ones who spend hours preparing for guests. Whether for an evening of cocktails or a large dinner party, they have the art of creating a memorable evening.

For such persons, the addition of one or more sinks can make entertaining easier and more efficient. One company makes a line of small stainless steel sinks called "hospitality" sinks, that can be installed in a variety of areas around the home.

A second sink in the kitchen, located on a work island or counter peninsula, provides the perfect place for the man of the house to prepare drinks while the hostess uses the main sink to finish up last minute details.

The hospitality sink is an excellent bar sink. The bar area, usually located near the center of activity, is a logical place to install a double or single-bowl hospitality sink. The double bowl models have wooden cutting boards that are handy for cutting drink garnishes. When not being used for cutting, the board fits neatly over one of the sink bowls, forming an excellent ice storage compartment.

Another feature of the hospitality sinks is the blender unit which is built right into the sink apron. A tall gooseneck faucet enables the bartender to fill tall glasses, pitchers and punch-bowls with ease. Because of the properties of stainless steel, the sink will not chip, warp or stain.

Buy The Cheapest Material That Will Do The Job Right

If you're planning on an extensive building project — like a wall of shelves and cupboards for your basement or garage — Better Homes and Gardens' new "Handyman's Book" suggests this money-saving idea:

Use lower grades of dimensioned stock and plywood to cut costs of materials — your biggest expense. Lower grades often meet job specifications, especially where materials won't show.

Use No. 2 and 3 grades for framing and furring; A-D (good one side) plywood for built-in and cabinets which will be painted. Holes can be filled and sanded.

Where To Look When You Need More Storage Space

Virtually every house has unused space that has valuable storage potential.

These out-of-the-way places, lined with aromatic red cedar, provide moth-repellent storage for all household woolens.

Here are some ways and means to increase your storage facilities:

Another location is in a dormer or irregularly shaped area adjacent to a sloping roof.

Crawl space also can be used for more than simply collecting junk. If you are short of storage space for blankets and woolens, build a cedar-lined storage chest on casters so that it can be rolled into and out of the crawl space.

Unused portions of the attic or basement also are natural locations for adding storage capacity. Frequently, some of the framework already exists, and it becomes a matter of adding to it.

Cedar closet lining for achieving moth repellency is available in pre-packaged bundles or cartons. The lumber material is tongue and grooved for ease of installation, and comes in random or uniform lengths.

The material is nailed to existing walls or framing, without any other backing. It requires no finishing.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jackie Gleason doesn't necessarily need the exposure on CBS which has to pay him anyway, but CBS certainly needs to have Jackie on the air this new season of our discontent.

During his years of one-hour weekly shows on CBS, I always felt that this was a bit too long for Red Skelton. Now that he's on NBC at 30 minutes weekly, that seems too short a time. Well, at least he's on, which has to be a plus.

"Bonanza" certainly had it made long before David Canary joined the cast as the Candy character for a couple of seasons, but he added a vital something to the series that is missing now that he is no longer on it.

When you watch syndicated reruns of certain of former network series, some of which were dropped by the nets several seasons ago, one has to wonder. Compared to much of the new stuff of the past two seasons, they seem like masterpieces of video entertainment.

Composer Aaron Copland's 70th birthday, today, will be saluted tardily with a Dec. 27 CBS telecast, season's first of the 14-year-old New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts. Leonard Bernstein will narrate and conduct "A Copland Celebration."

CBS has acquired rights for national telecasting in 1970-71 of several games of the rapidly rising American Basketball Association, which probably is only a year or two away from merging with the veteran National Basketball Association. The first broadcast will be the ABA All-Star contest Jan. 23. Some regular season Saturday and Sunday games, and at least two playoff games will be aired.
